Woman and Her Ways

KEEPING GOLDFISH.

Some Plain Directions About Changing the Water and Feeding That Are Easy to Carry Out.

It is remarkable how seldom people are able to keep goldfish more than a month or two at most, and all because they neglect a few first principles. Goldfish can be kept almost any length of time, accidents apart, if kept scrupulously clean. The air in the water is soon exhausted, and they should have fresh water every day. If possible, oftener in summer, though once will do if the globe is fairly large. One can usually tell when the fish are needing fresh water. They stand up on their tails with their mouths to the surface of the water and move slowly in that position, generally making a bubbling sound. When you put the fresh water into the globe let it dash in from a height, so that plenty of air gets in, too, and let your fish have a handful of shells or small stones. They look pretty, and the fish appreciate being able to poke about among them for bits of food, and it gives them something to do and a little interest in life. People frequently make the mistake of thinking that the fish get enough food out of the water. This is not so; they need feeding when in captivity. Packets of fishes' foods, chiefly consisting of dried ants' eggs, can be procured from any seed or naturalist's shop. As they require only a very small quantity once a day, their board is not expensive. They will live on vermicelli, but this clouds the water, and consequently injures the appearance of the globe.

It is said that goldfish should never be handled. This is no doubt true, if they are kept for breeding purposes. Otherwise, it does them no harm—if due care is exercised—and you may pick them up one by one in your hand and pop them into their globe of fresh water.

Never buy a fish unless the fins are erect and fully spread. Directly the fish is out of health the fins close more and more until it dies, when they are quite shut up against the body.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

HANDKERCHIEF CASE.

How Nimble Fingers Can Produce a Very Charming and Useful Bit of Fancy Work.

A dainty and useful handkerchief case may be made of a square box, such as is used for stationery, by removing the rim of the cover in order that only a square pasteboard will remain. When the rim is removed, line the inside of the box and over both sides of the cover put white sheet wadding sprinkled with lily of the valley sachet powder and tacked here and there in order to keep it in its place. The cover is to be fastened to the box with bits of tape used like hinges, and the whole thing lined insfde and outside with pale green crepe paper, the joinings being inside and glued to make them hold.

Lilies of the valley made from crepe paper or culled from the milliner's stock will be needed to complete the artistic effect, and their leaves, put on the cover with a fine wire, make the central vein and add brightness and beauty. Four leaves will be enough.

A pretty mat for the box may be made of a square of the paper used in covering it, curled at the edges with the finger and pasted on stiff paper. A ruffle of lace that will come nearly to the edge of the paper will add to the beauty of its finish.—N. Y. Tribune.

A Japanese Pot-Pourri.

Lavender flowers, one pound; rose leaves, one pound; ground orris root, half a pound; crushed cloves, two ounces; crushed cinnamon, two ounces; crushed allspice, two ounces; table salt, one pound. Thoroughly mix these several ingredients, and then keep in a tightly sealed jar till required to be used. For sachets, to place among clothing and house linen, this potpourri will be found very fragrant and refreshing.

Baked Apple Custard.

Stew one pound of good cooking apples, pared and cored; when heated add half a pound of granulated sugar; prepare custard as usual and pour over apples and bake. Whipped cream served on the custard is a great improvement. If preferred less sugar can be used in the custard.

Economical Marketing.

Marketing economically does not mean purchasing things at the cheapest rate. It really involves the higher talent of selecting wisely and well. Small quantities and no waste is one good rule to remember. Have just enough—not a piece too much.

VERANDA IN SUMMER.

A Pleasant and Comfortable Retreat Can Be Made of It by Clever Housekeepers.

Every year the veranda is becoming more and more an integral part of the house beautiful. It is no longer merely a shelter from the elements, sparsely furnished with chairs, but is a living-room and treated as such, and is furnished with the same taste and care that is bestowed upon the rest of the rooms. Of course, it goes without saying that both the textiles and furniture employed must be as far as possible weather proof, but this is no handicap nowadays, as rugs and materials that defy rain and snow are to be had in the greatest variety—except directly on the seashore, where the dampness and high winds make it impossible. An outdoor room, netted in so that the lights at night will not attract troublesome insects, prettily and comfortably furnished, should be a part of every country house. Curtains made of colored awning cloth and hung with small brass rings on a slender galvanized iron rod, so that they may easily be pushed forward and back, are both useful and pretty, although some people prefer Venetian blinds or the rattan shades, which now come for verandas of any width desired. Hammocks, of course, are the natural lounging places for a veranda room, but they are now made much more elaborately than formerly, with valences hanging on either side, and piled up with cushions of many colors. Another recent accessory to outdoor furniture which has become popular is the swinging sofa, legless, of course, swung by four chains to the roof, and filled with cushions. Even the divan has been adapted to open air furnishing.

The accompanying sketch shows one which filled a corner of the veranda of a seaside cottage last summer. The shape is an irregular elongated triangle, with two sides against the walls of the house, and consists of a frame a foot high, on which is a mattress covered with India rubber cloth. Over this is a buttoned covering of green denim, with a flounce, and the drapery consists of an old sail and a fish net, which is held up by a pair of oars and a crabnet, all of which have been well seasoned by wind and weather.—N. Y. Tribune.

COLOR COMBINATIONS.

No Vague, Undecided Shades Should Ever Be Worn by Ladies with Red Tresses.

Instead of being dissatisfied with their lot, women with red hair should study how to use it becomingly, and be proud of the distinction of having it. There appears to be an impression among women with red hair, says an exchange, that almost any shade of blue can be worn by them, because as a usual thing they have fair and delicate complexions, but, as a matter of fact, blue is the one color above all others that they ought to avoid. The contrast is too violent and the combination is not harmonious. The shades most suitable to be worn with red hair are bright, sunny brown and all autumn-leaf tints. After these may be selected pale or very dark green—but never a bright green, pale yellow, and black unmixed with any other color. Mixed colors are not becoming to red-haired people, as they nearly always give them a more or less dowdy appearance. In fact, red hair is usually so brilliant and decided that it must be met on its own ground, and no vague, undecided sort of things should be worn with it.—C. W. Lyman, in Voice.

To Soften Hard Water.

Take of orange flower water half a pint, of best spirits of wine a pint, and of soap three-quarters of a pound. Shave the soap into the orange water, heat over a fire until the soap dissolves, and then, the vessel being removed from the fire, add the spirits of wine. A large tablespoonful of this preparation added to a basin of washing water will completely soften it, and render it delightful to use. The ingredients can be obtained from a druggist.

Forcemeat Flavoring.

Take a quarter of an ounce each of dried thyme, dried marjoram, dried savoury and whole black pepper corns, half an ounce of nutmeg and of cloves and one-eighth of an ounce of Nepaul pepper. Pound, mix and sift these several ingredients and bottle to store.

Simple Test of Devotion.

The man who is patient with a woman when she is sick can be relied upon to treat her all right when she is well.

The annual convention of Michigan sheriffs and police chiefs will be held in Mt. Clemens, June 28 and 29.

Burglars entered the home of F. S. Clement at Sturgis and stole jewelry and silverware amounting to $500.

The state bankers' convention will be held in Kalamazoo June 22 and 23. The session will be held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium.

Thomas Kelly, sent to Jackson for 15 years from Shiawassee county in 1889, for manslaughter, has been paroled by Gov. Pingree.

F. W. Wheeler, the Bay City shipbuilder who recently failed, will move to New York and start anew. He will have charge of a shipyard there.

Work has been begun on the rebuilding of the casket factory at Owosso, which was burned last fall. The new plant will be larger than the old one was.

Several orchards near Davison have been entirely denuded by a worm, thought to be the canker worm. The farmers are becoming alarmed at its rapid increase.

Indians in large numbers are preparing to pick huckleberries in the upper tier of counties as soon as they are ripe. All the prospects point to an immense crop this year.

Lester D. Gardner, of Detroit, and George K. Newbury, of Jackson, were granted degrees as bachelors of science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston.

Labor Commissioner Cox some time ago said that for nine months previous to April 18 there had been 143 suicides in the state of Michigan due mainly to financial reverses.

After standing idle for several years, the plant of the Michigan Wheel company, at Lansing, is to be reopened. W. K. Pruden will make racing sulkies and rubber tire wheels there.

The state forestry committee held another meeting at Grand Rapids. It is evident that hearty cooperation will be met with in the work of reforesting the abandoned pine lands of the state.

W. H. Walby was assessed for $80,000 personal property by the city of Adrian. He protested to the board of review, claiming residence in Pasadena, Cal. The board cut the assessment down to $1,000.

Lewiston is having a hard siege with diphtheria. Schools have been closed and every precaution taken to prevent the spread of the disease. Grayling also has a case or two, and Standish is having an epidemic of measles.

Mrs. William Knickerbocker, of Hoxie, Hillsdale county, was bitten several days ago by a mad cat, which died while its teeth were still embedded in her hand. She has been in a critical condition since with hydrophobia.

To Be Compulsory.

Ann Arbor, June 10.—At a recent meeting of the university board of regents it was voted to make gymnasium work compulsory for freshmen literary students. This rule will go into effect next fall. During this winter over 1,100 students have taken work in the gymnasium, with decidedly beneficial results, and the regents think it wise to make such work compulsory for freshmen, allowing them three hours' credit for the same.

Killed His Bride.

Kalamazoo, June 11.—Charles Langley quarreled with his wife over the insurance which he carried in favor of his father, and he shot her twice, causing instant death. He then shot himself below the heart. He is still alive, but doctors say he cannot live. Langley is 29 years old and married Mrs. Wilson May 21. She was 45 and had been married twice. Her life was insured in favor of her husband.

Fruit Trees and Grain Hurt.

St. Joseph, June 12.—Reports from various points throughout the county show that fruit trees and grain suffered severely from Friday night's gale. In many orchards trees are almost limbless, caused by the whirling currents of wind, while grain in many places is beaten to the ground. The gale was the most severe in many years.

Little Girl Drowned.

Saginaw, June 12. — Wilda Roach, the four-year-old daughter of James Roach, residing on Jackson street, was drowned in a cistern. Her body was found some time after.

Planing Mill Burned.

Menominee, June 11. — The Marinette planing mill burned Wednesday. Loss $15,000, partly insured. Considerable stock and several railroad cars were also destroyed.

Remembered by His Friends.

Kalamazoo, June 12. — The friends of Gen. E. M. Irish have raised over $200 to purchase and present to him a fine horse and saddle. A much larger sum will be raised.

Special Session Acts.

Lansing, June 14. — The public acts of 1898, being the laws enacted at the recent special session of the legislature, are being distributed by the secretary of state.

Trial Set for June 27.

Lansing, June 12. — Attorney General Maynard has been notified by Judge Russell that the trial of the Whitehall bank cases had been set for June 27.

HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF '98.

As given at the Class Day Exercises at the Baptist Church June 8th.

ANCIENT HISTORY.

EDITH P. GRAY.

History is a systematic record of past events, hence every class, it matters not how large or small, must have a history.

The class of '98 feel that they have made some achievements and that they have a history of no little importance. For that reason they wish it to be placed among the pages of other class histories.

It is pleasant to recall the different experiences which go to make up our school life.

The earliest possible date that can be fixed in the history of our class is Oct. 22, 1877, on which day on a farm three miles west of Tecumseh the eldest member of the class first saw the light. And the youngest member began his voyage of life in the village of Ridgeway Sept. 20, 1880.

Perhaps our parents could inform you of the history of the first three years of our life much better than we. However it is evident that we all safely passed the trying years of infancy, gradually acquiring the usual number of teeth in our heads and a fair amount of brains, and our share of the measles, mumps and whooping cough.

Five of our number here today laid the foundation of their education in the district school, one in the Ridgeway school, one at home and the remainder, seven in number, have attended our own public schools. At the age of five or six years we see our district school children trudging their way to school over the country roads, their dinner pails upon their arms and their school bags in their hands, in summer loitering along the way and climbing trees for forbidden fruit. At noon they employed their time in going to a neighboring wood for flowers or in playing games. In the winter they went to a pond near by and many were the merry times spent skating and sliding on the ice. Within the schoolhouse when the dreary lessons were once more resumed naught was heard except the ticking of the clock, the clicking of the slate pencils, the suppressed laughter of some mischievous youngster as he hides behind his geography and amuses his fellow playmates. Little did they realize that then they were laying the bricks of the foundation that should either stand or fall.

But as to the life in the town school, I think no class has enjoyed itself more than the class of '98. Perhaps it was not always the fun that would have been recommended by our parents and certainly not by our teachers, still, what person, teacher, parent or scholar, is there who has not been caught in some little misdemeanor. School-children must be school-children.

Well do four of our number remember the days spent with Miss Stocking in the kindergarten. There one day one of us, tired with the tasks of the hour, fell asleep in the woodbox and even now she cannot resist the temptation to steal a few moments from her studies to rest her weary eyes.

From Miss Stocking's kindergarten we went to the West Branch school, a building which had stood there for forty years. Not long after entering we were removed to a part of the building since used as the table factory, in order that a new West Branch building might be constructed. A few of us will remember that old room, draped with cobwebs overhead, wardrobe and recitation all in one, generally two scholars in one seat. If a scholar needed a little extra persuasion then he was quietly taken out of doors to receive it.

At the beginning of the fall term of 1887 we were once more installed in our places in the new building, Miss Taylor having charge of the 1st and 2nd grades and Miss McClue of 3rd and 4th grades.

We creditably passed the first four grades and it was was with a great feeling of pride that we, in the year 1889, were promoted to the East Branch. There we entered the fifth grade with Miss Ross as teacher and at length were passed into the sixth grade.

Now, having taken our class through the first five grades of our course my duties as writer of ancient history are over.

MEDIAEVAL HISTORY.

HELEN M. TEMPLE.

By mediaeval history is meant a systematic record of the events which took place during the middle portion of a specified era of time. Thus the mediaeval history of our class comprises our doings from the time we entered the sixth grade at the East Branch until we passed from the eighth grade at the Union building.

Again mediaeval history contained the Dark Ages, and our history is like unto it, in that the darkest periods of our class life are to be found in the Middle Ages.

Our life in the sixth grade was a peaceful and uneventful one. We skipped school on pleasant days, endured with patience the monthly examinations, and received short lectures from our teacher, Miss Kyle, whom we all loved and esteemed. At the end of the school year we bade farewell to our teacher and left the East Branch never to enter it again as pupils.

The following September we entered the, to us, somewhat awe-inspiring Central building. Perhaps it were better for me to pass over in silence the dark and disgraceful days of our year in the seventh grade. But yet I am giving our true history and must reveal the unpleasant as well as the pleasant side. For our actions during that eventful year there can be no excuse other than that we were at an age when boys and girls are wont to consider themselves as exceedingly bright. Almost from the first day we discovered that our teacher had not much control over us and we joyfully assembled to mutually determine that she never should have. What we now know to have been her kindness toward us, we then considered fear, and delighted our minds by telling each other that she did not dare to correct us. How many little things to annoy her our fertile brains suggested—things so small and contemptible that we wonder now is we ever could have been so childish. But she had one resource which never failed, viz., Mr. Kellogg's office. Ah! many times during that year we have trudged slowly down those stairs, or stood before that desk trying, in the few moments grace allowed us, to think up some plausible excuse by which we could throw the blame upon our teacher instead of upon ourselves. But Mr. Kellogg never looked at it in just that light. He saw through the little farce and we generally received our deserts at his hands. How smart it seemed to us then—how extremely foolish now! We covered ourselves with what we then considered glory and proudly received the appellation of "That awful seventh grade." But I doubt very much if there are any of us who would willingly go back and make such a name for ourselves again.

Our year in the eighth grade was on the whole a happy, and I think profitable one. During that year the change was made by which the teachers of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades taught certain studies in each of the three grades instead of hearing all the classes of her own particular grade. With glad hearts we again welcomed Miss Kyle as one of our teachers together with Miss Wimple and Miss Rice. We enjoyed our year in the eighth grade and hope that our teachers did not look upon us as much worse than the majority of pupils.

At the end of the year we beheld ourselves as graduated from the grammar grades and we all looked forward to the fall of '94 when we should become inmates of the high school. We felt ourselves to be much taller than before and surely we would be as brave and bright a class as ever trod the boards of the Tecumseh high school. But our life was not all a bed of roses nor was it long before a few sarcastic words from one of our teachers recalled us to ourselves and took a little of the conceit out of us. But I am treading on the rights of our Modern historian. The Mediaeval history and Dark Ages of our class are a thing of the past and we have no more time to waste in idle regrets, but must look forward to the future which may be bright or cloudy as we make it.

MODERN HISTORY.

S. WILFRED WILSON.

And to me has the modern history of the class been assigned. It is too recent to have passed into history hence must be a mere chronicle.

At last we reached that long coveted goal—the high school. Do you ask if we had by this time acquired the dignity that befitted our position? Far from it. Rather it seemed as if our sole purpose in school life was to make the unhappy teacher in the ninth grade room bitterly regret that the unlucky fates had ever placed her there. On one occasion some kind and thoughtful(?) pupil supplied the others in the room with snuff. This created the desired disturbance and it was some time before peace could be restored. Time passed quickly on and before we realized it we saw the closing of our first year in the high school.

After a vacation of ten weeks we stood together once more, but this time in the tenth grade room. This year proved one of constant uprising and tumult, but without any very serious trouble, it passed quickly into the third year.

In the eleventh grade we came to the conclusion that school life was not all a play day and that good solid work was required. Accordingly very many good resolves were made for the future, but how they were kept I will not say.

Early in the winter the class organized, chose their class officers, and, alas for all those good resolves, planned for a general good time. One of the class living in the country took the others for a sleighride. A strange mystery surrounds this ride and for weeks after the mere mention of it would cause uncontrolled merriment and a blush to mantle the cheeks of many a fair damsel. The next social event occurred when the juniors of the high school accepted an invitation extended them by the faculty of the Raisin Valley Seminary to visit them and use their telescope. In May a reception was held in honor of the teachers and seniors at the home of Miss Viola Shull, then a member of our class.

Sept. 6th, 1887, saw us assembled once more in the A room. Three pupils, graduates of the Ridgeway high school, had resolved to cast their lots with us for this last year. No one knows how hard we tried to conduct ourselves in a manner becoming to seniors, but many were the failures we met and many were the resolves for a better future made when staying after school to recite a German or geometry lesson.

In the spring fifteen of us met for organization and chose our class officers. It was decided to have a speaker and Class Day exercises and after repeated visits to the board we were allowed to take our own course in the matter.

May 20th a reception was held at the home of our president in return for a very pleasant one given us by the juniors.

We have one less today with us than we expected when planning for our final exercises. May 4th Albert Rector, responding to his country's call, joined his regiment at Island Lake. We cannot wish him back for he is learning the closing pages of the "first lesson" in a way which will take years for the rest of us to understand. That he may have a safe and happy home coming is the prayer and earnest wish of every member of the class of '98 and we are very sure that he will return with all the honors he so much deserves.

The remaining class number 14, 8 girls and 6 boys. Our favorite colors are gold and violet and our favorite flower, wood violet. We chose for our class motto, "Thus Endeth the First Lesson."

The teachers who have been so patient with us and the parents and friends who have taken so much interest in the "first lessons" of our lives we heartily thank. We hope and with your kindly interest we intend that the next lessons of our lives may be learned even better than the first, so that as we go on day by day learning life's lesson step by step, we may look back without wishing that the past might have been different and we ask that you will bear with us, overlook our mistakes and give us the help we so much need.

MORE NEWS FROM DEWEY

He Says the Insurgents Surround Manila and Have Taken Many Prisoners.

HEALTH OF HIS SOLDIERS IS EXCELLENT

The Spanish Power Seems to Be Rapidly Crumbling—Wants Our Troops to Have the Honor of Receiving the Dons' Surrender—Message from Aguinaldo.

Washington, June 18.—The navy department has received the following from Admiral Dewey:

"Cavite, June 12, via Hong-Kong, June 17.—There is little change in the situation since my telegram of June 3. Insurgents continue hostilities and have practically surrounded Manila. They have taken 2,500 Spanish prisoners whom they treat most humanely. They do not intend to take the city at the present time. Twelve merchant vessels are anchored in the bay with refugees on board under guard of neutral men-of-war; this with my permission.

"The health of the squadron continues excellent. The German commander-in-chief arrived to-day. Three German, two British, one French, one Japanese men-of-war now in port. Another German man-of-war expected. The following is a list of the Spanish vessels captured and destroyed:

Spanish Power Crumbling.

Manila, June, 16, via Hong-Kong, June 18.—Spanish power is crumbling in the Philippine islands.

Gen. Pena and a thousand Spanish soldiers have surrendered at Santa Cruz; similar surrenders have taken place at La Guna and at Pampanga, and in each case hardly anybody was killed.

The insurgents, under Gen. Aguinaldo, and the American sailors and marines of Admiral Dewey's fleet, completely surround Manila.

The foreign residents have fled to the ships.

The governors of the provinces of Cavite, Balucan and Bataan, were also made prisoners.

All interior sources of supply are now cut off from the Spanish forces in Manila.

The Americans can take Manila within 24 hours after the arrival of the troops. The city is now at the mercy of the American fleet.

Saw Our Troops.

London, June 20.—The Hong-Kong correspondent of the Times says: The rebels hold Manila at their mercy, but Admiral Dewey is anxious that the American troops should have the honor of receiving the Spanish capitulation. The steamer Yuen Sing reports passing the United States troopship City of Peking on the morning of the 15th near Manila.

Message from Aguinaldo.

New York, June 20.—John Barrett, former minister of the United States to Siam, cables from Hong-Kong as follows:

"Emilio Aguinaldo, the leader of the Philippine natives and colonists, by whose side I have witnessed several of his splendid battles against the Spanish, has asked me to forward this as a true statement of the causes of the revolt against Spain, and the intentions of himself and his followers as to the future:

"As America protects the Cubans, so she will protect the Philippines. She will give us the liberty for which we have struggled for years. All the world will respect us when America protects us. We rebelled against Spanish authority because of the corruption of the government officials, her crushing taxes, her horrible cruelty, and her refusal to execute the reforms which she promised.

Insists He Is Humane.

"I want to tell America that I am humane. The Spanish governor put a price of $25,000 on my head. I have been poisoned once and stabbed by his bravos. My generals have captured his wife and children. They are treated like royalty and will be freed. I promised American Consul Wildman I would forget and forgive.

"I consider Admiral Dewey the lion of Manila, and I thank America from my heart for giving us Wildman and Williams. They are wonderful men for freeing my country from Spanish cruelty and licentious greed. God and history will repay them. I do not believe America will sell the Philippines to the highest bidder.

"EMILIO AGUINALDO."

Insurgents at Manila.

Washington, June 21.—News was received yesterday from Manila that the insurgents now hold 5,000 prisoners. Admiral Dewey will permit no attack on the city until the American troops arrive. The Baltimore left Manila on the 17th to meet the transports. The rebels have formed a provisional government and acknowledged the protectorate of the United States.

Cannot Longer Resist.

Madrid, June 21.—The belief is expressed in government circles that Capt. Gen. Augusti will ask the foreign warships to land detachments to occupy Manila on the ground that he is no longer able to resist the insurgents. He wires that he has retired within the walls of the city and will be unable to communicate further with the government.

Brother and Sister Drowned.

Springfield, Ill., June 20.—As Charles Sargent and his sister Goldie were crossing the Sangamon river in a buggy on Buckhart bridge, five miles south of Dawson, the horse became frightened, throwing the girl into the water. Her brother jumped in the water to rescue her and they were both drowned.

Blew Out His Brains

Burlington, Ia., June 22.—D. J. Thayer, a well-known and prominent civil engineer of Chariton, Ia., blew out his brains while insane in a sleeping car berth on the Burlington train entering Burlington Tuesday morning.

WEEKLY WAR HISTORY.

Complete Record of Events Told in a Few Lines Covering All Important News.

THURSDAY, JUNE 16.

Four thousand United States soldiers left San Francisco on four transports headed for the Philippine islands.

News comes from Havana by way of Jamaica that the people are starving and that many Americans are imprisoned.

Admiral Sampson reported to Washington that the Cuban general, Rabbi, had occupied Acerraderos, only eight miles from Santiago, and practically a suburb of that Spanish stronghold.

The dynamite cruiser Vesuvius fired three shells at a Santiago fort, practically destroying it. The cruiser New Orleans battered down new defenses which the Spaniards were erecting.

The secretary of war sent to congress estimates for appropriations for the army up to January 1 next amounting to $13,200,000. The amount so far asked on account of the war is approximately $391,000,000.

American marines routed a large force of Spaniards in camp near Guantanamo bay and killed 40 of the guerrilla band. One American was wounded. A force of Cubans cooperated with the attacking party.

FRIDAY, JUNE 17.

The United States cruiser Buffalo, formerly the Nictheroy, of the Brazilian navy, arrived in New York.

The Spaniards are being driven from their outposts in the Philippines, and their condition is becoming critical.

The president has decided to send at once a second expedition of 6,000 men from Tampa to reenforce Gen. Shafter.

The fort and earthworks at Caimanera, near Guantanamo, were destroyed by a bombardment from the Texas, Marblehead and Suwanee.

Advices from Key West say that more than 5,000 Spanish volunteers and many regulars from Puerto Principe and Neuvitas garrisons have deserted to the patriot army.

The warships under Admiral Sampson bombarded the forts of Santiago de Cuba for the third time. El Morro was spared, owing to the presence of Lieut. Hobson and his companions, but all the other defenses were probably rendered useless. The loss of life on the Spanish side was considerable.

SATURDAY, JUNE 18.

Capt. Gen. Blanco has refused to entertain a proposition to exchange the Merrimac prisoners.

The Cadiz fleet was sighted off Ceuta, on the north coast of Africa, sailing eastward into the Mediterranean.

Admiral Dewey reported to the navy department that he was still maintaining the blockade at Manila and that the insurgents entirely surrounded the city.

The council general of Catalonia, representing the mercantile intelligence of Spain, has called on the Madrid government to sue for peace on any terms.

Maj. Gen. Miles arrived in Washington to consult Secretary of War Alger. He reported that Garcia's army, in pursuance of his request, was closing in upon Santiago de Cuba.

The insurgents in the Philippines are making remarkable progress and are said to have captured the family of Capt. Gen. Augusti and the governors of the provinces of Cavite, Balucan and Bataan.

SUNDAY, JUNE 19.

It is said that Gen. Miles will personally lead the expedition to Puerto Rico.

One of the German war vessels at Manila has been ordered away, indicating that the kaiser intends no menacing act to American domination.

The rebels hold Manila at their mercy, but Admiral Dewey is anxious that the American troops should have the honor of receiving the Spanish capitulation.

In an interview in Madrid Capt. Aunon, the Spanish minister of marine, said that Spain would ultimately send a fleet to Philippine waters regardless of cost or the result.

At a council of war at the white house it was decided that the original plans of campaign for the conduct of the war shall be adhered to and pushed with vigor and energy.

MONDAY, JUNE 20.

Spanish infantry made a hasty retreat for cover at Guantanamo under heavy fire from American warships.

The inhabitants of Caimanera, Cuba, have strewn the streets with straw and oil with the intention of destroying the city and fleeing to the hills.

James T. Gatewood, of Ashland, Va., private secretary to Maj. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, of the Seventh army corps, was struck by lightning and killed at Pablo Beach, Fla.

Admiral Sampson has decided to reduce Morro castle at Santiago. He has learned that Hobson and his men are no longer held in the fort as a shield against the fire of the American ships.

A careful inspection of the fortifications defending Santiago harbor since the bombardment shows that the American gunners spread wreck and ruin everywhere. Some of the batteries were demolished beyond repair.

Advices to the navy department confirm the report that the fleet of transports were off Santiago and that Spanish troops were numerous along the coast in the vicinity, prepared to resist the landing of the United States troops.

TUESDAY, JUNE 21.

It is reported that hereafter Capt. Gen. Blanco will recognize no flag of truce in Havana waters.

It was practically decided at a conference in Washington to send a flying squadron to the coast of Spain.

Gen. Garcia, the Cuban leader, discussed with Admiral Sampson on the flagship New York plans for the capture of Santiago.

The Spanish cabinet is said to have decided to accept no offers of peace which require the sacrifice of colonial possessions.

Capt. Gen. Blanco was shot in the leg by a volunteer whose brother had been executed. Havana is reported in a condition bordering on revolution and residents have fled to the country.

It was reported that Gen. Shafter's expedition had arrived off Santiago and that the landing was in progress. The insurgents were gathering near the city to cooperate with the American troops.

News was received from Manila that the insurgents now hold 5,000 prisoners. Admiral Dewey will permit no attack on the city until the American troops arrive. The Baltimore left Manila on the 17th to meet the transports. The rebels have formed a provisional government and acknowledged the protectorate of the United States.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22.

Cable communication has been restored between Guantanamo, Cuba, and Washington.

The government has determined to send at once heavy reenforcements to Gen. Shafter at Santiago.

An official dispatch to Madrid declared that the town of Casilda, Cuba, had been shelled by an American warship.

The navy department at Washington received official confirmation of the news that Camara's fleet has returned to Cadiz.

Prominent Spanish financiers sent letters to the newspapers in Madrid and Barcelona urging a prompt cessation of the war.

SHELLS THE FORTS AGAIN

For the Third Time Admiral Sampson's Warships Pound the Batteries at Santiago.

SHOTS CAUSE TERRIBLE DESTRUCTION.

Arrival Off Santiago of the First Division of the American Army of Invasion—No Attempt Made to Land—Conference with Gen. Garcia—Other War News of Interest.

On Board the Dispatch Boat Dauntless, Off Santiago de Cuba, via Kingston, Jamaica, June 20.—A careful inspection of the fortifications along the crest of the hills defending Santiago harbor since the bombardment Thursday morning shows that the American gunners spread wreck and ruin everywhere. Some of the batteries were demolished beyond repair. The vultures which circled on level wings over the hills as thick as swallows around a chimney for hours after the firing ceased furnished grewsome evidence of the fatality among the Spanish soldiers. Hundreds of troops could be seen from the ships digging in mounds of earth piled up by the explosions of the projectiles from the heavy guns for bodies while their heads were fanned by the wings of the black scavengers of the battlefield. There were two spots, one on the east and the other on the west of the harbor entrance, which were denuded of the foliage. The hilltops seem literally blown away. These marked the places where the 200-pound charges of gun cotton blown by the Vesuvius landed.

Not a Man Lost.

There were no casualties in the fleet, although the ships held a fixed position, as if inviting the Spaniards to fire upon them. The half-stripped ships' gunners never worked with more enthusiasm. The words of Rear Admiral Sampson were: "First silence the batteries on the shore and then continue firing until the fortifications are reduced." This order was strictly obeyed. It was the first time that such instructions had been given, and the men responded with a will. In 38 minutes the order was given to cease firing, and the message went to each ship from the admiral: "Well done;" and the officers and men turned in for breakfast.

SHAFTER'S TROOPS.

Transports Arrive Off Santiago, But Soldiers Do Not Try to Land.

On Board Dispatch Boat Dandy, Mole St. Nicholas, June 22.—The United States army for the invasion of Cuba, commanded by Gen. Shafter, arrived off Santiago de Cuba Monday at noon. The troops, numbering about 16,000 men, were on board 37 transports. The time and place for the landing of the soldiers has not been decided upon.

General Landing Delayed.

Mole St. Nicholas, June 22.—Rear Admiral Sampson says that the general landing of troops of Gen. Shafter's expedition on the coast of the province of Santiago de Cuba will necessarily be delayed several days. Reports published in the United States to the contrary are pure guesswork.

A Conference with Garcia.

On Board the Dispatch Boat Dandy, Off Santiago de Cuba, via Kingston, Jamaica, June 22. — Gen. Calixto Garcia and the other Cuban officers gave Gen. Shafter and Admiral Sampson a hearty welcome at Aserredero Monday afternoon, when the American officers on board the steamer Seguranca went to his headquarters for a consultation. The Cubans showered upon their distinguished visitors all the blessings of Cuba libre for the assistance of the United States in the Cuban struggle for freedom and they expressed the conviction that victory was at hand and that the power of Spain would soon be driven from the island by the combined strength of American and Cuban arms.

Gen. Garcia gave the Americans assurances that they need have no fear of contracting diseases on the southeastern coast of Cuba, as the climate there is not unhealthy, only extremely hot at this season of the year. The Cuban general declared that his own troops, ill fed and poorly clothed as they were, were in good health, and therefore the Americans need not fear fevers or other serious ailments.

Communication Opened

Washington, June 22.—Gen. Greeley received from Lieut. Col. Allen Tuesday afternoon a dispatch stating that the first American military station in Cuba, Camp McCalla, Guantanamo bay, had been brought into electrical communication with the rest of the world by the establishment of a telegraph office, which opened at five o'clock.

Hobson Is Safe.

MARVELOUS RESULTS.

What a Well-known Citizen of Lansing, Mich., says of Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer.

"I have had dyspepsia for eighteen years. My troubles were indigestion, sour stomach, acid fermentation, palpation of the heart, sleeplessness and terrible sick headache, which at times would entirely unfit me for business. I have had special treatment by seven physicians, and it seems as though I have tried nearly every known or supposed remedy, with some little relief, but would soon relapse to the old condition. I commenced using Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer a few weeks ago, have used about two and one-half boxes which have done me more real good than all the treatment and so called remedies I have ever taken. I would advise any person afflicted with stomach troubles, dyspepsia or nerve troubles, to try this treatment.

Respectfully,
EDWARD N. WOOD,
North Lansing, Mich.

March 22, 1898."

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer is not propped up by ficticious testimonials, but is demonstrating its curative power every day, in stubborn cases of acute, chronic and nervous dyspepsia. A trial will substantiate all that is claimed for it. For sale by John J. Orr, leading druggist of Tecumseh. Her Health Restored

THE misery of sleeplessness can only be realized by those who have experienced it. Nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, neuralgia and that miserable feeling of unrest, can surely be cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. So certain is Dr. Miles of this fact that all druggists are authorized to refund price paid for the first bottle tried, providing it does not benefit.

Mrs. Henry Bruns, wife of the well known blacksmith at Grand Junction, Iowa, says: "I was troubled with sleeplessness, nervousness, headache and irregular menstruation; suffering untold misery for years. I used various advertised remedies for female complaints besides being under the care of local physicians, without help. I noticed in Dr. Miles' advertisement the testimonial of a lady cured of ailments similar to mine, and I shall never cease to thank that lady. Her testimonial induced me to use Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills, which restored me to health. I cannot say enough for Dr. Miles' Remedies."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address,

SUMMER CATARRH

Catarrh of the bowels, because it is most prevalent in the summer months, is called summer catarrh.

It surprises many that bowel trouble is catarrhal. Dr. Hartman's books make this plain. Write to the Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for them. They tell all about catarrh and how Pe-ru-na cures it wherever located.

"I had chronic diarrhœa for fifteen years," writes Mr. T. E. Miller, Grand Prairie, Tex. "I tried many medicines and doctors in vain. At last Pe-ru-na was recommended, and it relieved and cured me at once."

Mr. John Harting, 633 Main St., Cincinnati, O., writes: "My wife and myself took your Pe-ru-na for chronic diarrhœa and it cured us. No doctor or medicine we tried before helped us."

Mr. Edward Wormack, Ledbetter, Tex., writes: "Pe-ru-na for bowel troubles is unequalled by anything in my experience. I owe my life to Pe-ru-na, and shall always recommend it to those suffering as I was."

Mr. John Edgarton, 1020 Third Ave., Altoona, Pa., says: "I suffered from dysentery for three years. I took Pe-ru-na and am now well."

My husband has suffered with sick headache ever since a little boy and has tried everything he ever heard of, but obtained no relief. We have been using Carter's Cascara Cordial and are very much pleased with it; my husband has been growing steadily better and we feel confident he will entirely recover. We are very thankful and take great pleasure in recommending Carter's Cascara Cordial as a splendid medicine. MRS. MAY SANDERS, Chicago, Ill. S. E. PARRISH.

The Successful Remedy for Nasal Catarrh

must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will by its own action reach the inflamed and diseased surfaces. ELY'S CREAM BALM combines the important requisites of quick action and specific curative powers with perfect safety to the patient. This agreeable remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. All druggists cheerfully acknowledge that in it the acme of Pharmaceutical skill has been reached. The most distressing symptoms quickly yield to it. In acute cases the balm imparts almost instant relief.

TWO DIVERS ARE LOST.

A Distressing Accident Occurs in Thunder Bay, Off the City of Alpena, Mich.

WATER RUSHES INTO A DIVING BELL.

George G. Campbell, of Milwaukee, and an Assistant Are Drowned in This Way While Working on the Wreck of the Sunken Steamer Pewabic.

Alpena, Mich., June 20.—Word was received here of the drowning of George Campbell and Peter Olsen at Thunder Bay on Friday last while engaged at work in a diving bell recovering the cargo of the sunken steamer Pewabic, which was lost about a year ago in 116 feet of water. Campbell was the founder of the famous diving bell and a son of Gardiner Campbell, founder of the centennial bell.

The bell was sent down at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning with the two men inside. Campbell telephoned to the steamer that they were in the break in the Pewabic's hull and asked for hooks. The telephone worked well and the men could be heard moving about the bell. Suddenly all sounds ceased. Capt. Phelps, of the Root, then rang the telephone bell, which proved that the circuit was perfect, but no other sounds could be secured. An effort was made to hoist the bell, but it had fouled in the wreck and could not be moved. In the efforts to raise the bell the derrick was disabled. A heavy sea came up, but repairs were made, and at five o'clock in the afternoon the bell was cleared from the wreck and partially hoisted, when the derrick again gave out. The anchor was slipped and the bell towed into the bay, getting into smooth water about 11 o'clock. Once out of the sea the bell was hoisted aboard the Root and was found to be full of water. Both men were drowned. Olson was sitting in his seat, with his feet under levers, showing that he had scarcely moved. The bell had filled through one of the windows, which was found broken. The automatic iron shutter had been broken for some time and Capt. Phelps had asked to have it repaired, but Mr. Campbell had neglected to do the work.

A TICKET IS NAMED.

Middle-of-the-Road Populists Hold Their State Convention at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, June 22.—The middle-of-the-road populist state convention nominated a straight ticket Tuesday and adopted lengthy resolutions along populistic lines. The only speech made during the entire proceedings that was longer than five minutes was the opening address of John O. Zabel, of Monroe, the temporary chairman. The ticket is as follows:

For governor—Sullivan Cook, Hartford.
For lieutenant governor—Austin S. Randall, Baldwin.
For secretary of state—Jonas M. Burrough, Marshall.
For state treasurer—Robert Blenhuber, Marquette.
For auditor general — Archie Malone, Saginaw.
For attorney general—S. G. Houghton, West Bay City.
For land commissioner—J. H. Baker, Bay City.
For superintendent of public instruction—Philander Brant, Bainbridge.
For state board of education — M. O. Graves, Petoskey.

John O. Zabel, of Monroe, was elected chairman of the state central committee; James E. McBride, of Grand Rapids, secretary, and John M. Harris, of Saginaw, treasurer, and the three constitute Michigan's representation on the national committee.

The platform adopted contains over a thousand words. It denounces fusion as dishonest and deadly to political parties and principles; demands the abolition of national banks; declares against the issue of government bonds for any purpose whatever; favors the initiative and referendum; government ownership of railroads and telegraph lines, and recommends the establishment of a forestry commission to replenish the pine lands of the state.

Well-Known Miller Dead.

Detroit, Mich., June 20.—A special to the Tribune from Coldwater, Mich., says: William A. Coombs, president of the National Millers' association, died Sunday after an illness of eight days, aged 53. He was one of the largest millers in the state and owner of the Coldwater gas plant. His illness was nervous prostration.

Lumber Burned.

Grayling, June 16. — Fire in Salling, Hanson & Co.'s lumber yard has destroyed 5,000,000 feet of lumber, at a loss of $55,000, fully covered by insurance. Fourteen dwelling houses were also burned, the loss on which amounts to $7,500, with small insurance.

Grasshopper Plague.

Dowagiac, June 16. — In some portions of Cass county grasshoppers are so plentiful as to cause considerable anxiety among the farmers. They are eating the foliage in the rye and wheat fields.

Died of His Injuries.

Bellevue, June 19. — W. A. Brown, a wealthy and prominent farmer, died Friday, the result of injuries received from falling under a wheel-road machine drawn by vicious horses.

Will Meet Next in Detroit.

Saginaw, June 17. — Edwin Kersten, of this city, was elected president of the State Arbeiter Bund by acclamation. The convention will be held in Detroit next year.

Will Buy $100,000 Worth of Bonds.

Detroit, June 21.—The city's sinking fund commissioners decided Saturday to buy $100,000 worth of the United States war bonds.

A Woman's Heart.

The wife of a clergyman tells the story of her suffering with neuralgia of the heart, with the hope that her experience may indicate to others the way to regain health.

Few bodily afflictions are more terrible than heart disease. To live in constant dread and expectation of death, sudden, instant death, with last farewells unspoken, is for most people more awful to contemplate than the most severe lingering illness.

The slightest excitement brings great suffering and danger to people so afflicted.

Such was the experience of the wife of a well-known clergyman. She tells her story for the sake of doing good to others.

"I feel," she said, speaking carefully and weighing her words, "that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People relieved me of a lifetime of sickness and sorrow, and I cheerfully recommend them."

This grateful woman is Mrs. Wamsley, wife of the Rev. C. E. Wamsley, who lives on West Sheridan Street, Greensburg, Ind. She continued:

"My heart became affected after the birth of my youngest child, about six years ago.

"The pain was constant. Frequently it grew so severe I would be forced to cry out.

"I could not endure any excitement.

"It would increase the pain so I would scream and fall down in a state of collapse. In this condition I was helpless.

"These spells would come on me at home, in the street, or anywhere I might be.

"I could not sleep at night. I ate very little.

"Different doctors were called in. They said I had neuralgia of the heart, resulting from nervous prostration.

"The doctors treated me, but the relief they gave did not last.

"I was a physical wreck, when my eye fell on an item in the local paper describing how Mrs. Evans, of West End, had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Her suffering was like mine.

"I hope other sufferers who read this account will have the faith I had when I read of Mrs. Evans.

"My husband bought me one box of the pills. The change they made in my condition was encouraging. I took another box; then bought six more boxes.

"All the time I gained in health, strength, hope, nerve force—steadily, surely!

"Before I finished the eighth box I ceased the treatment. I felt perfectly well, and the doctor said I was entirely cured."

To add weight to her story Mrs. Wamsley made affidavit to its truth before F. Russell, a Notary Public of Greensburg.

Neuralgia of the heart is only one of many serious evils that grow out of derangements of the nervous system or of the blood.

The remedy that expels impurities from the blood and supplies the necessary materials for rapidly rebuilding wasted nerves reaches the root of many serious diseases.

It is these virtues that have given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People their wonderful curative powers in diseases that at first glance seem widely different.

This famous remedy is for sale by all druggists for 50 cents a box; or six boxes for $2.50.

C. 31st Mich. Volunteers.

There are but few business that have more pleasant features connected therewith than that of the editor. His health is always good, he has many donations and plenty to eat, has nothing to do, never gets tired nor perplexed, is never rushed, never finds it difficult to collect news, and in fact finds his office a paradise. But when he omits to mention some one who has been away, or company another may have been entertaining (when he knew nothing of it) then he must look out for his scalp. Another very pleasant trouble often experienced is that when the "ed" learns of something that would make a good item and be of interest to many, he writes it up in good shape and it is put in type form for the paper, and when press day comes, to his surprise, up rushes some one with a very urgent request and asks him to please omit any mention of thus or so until some other or indefinite time, when there was no excuse whatever more than a whim. The good intent on the part of the writer is not appreciated and his labor is lost. Thus is shown a few of the pleasing drawbacks of the printer.—Saline Observer.

MARGARET W. MOORE,

Daughter of John and Eliza Moore, was born in Ireland August 9th, 1876. At the age of 9 years she, with her parents, brothers and sisters, came to this country and settled near Holloway. At 18 she united with the Presbyterian church of Raisin and often during her illness she wished that she was able to attend service there

She was taken sick in April, 1897, with lung trouble and was confined to bed for several months. During the latter part of the summer and through the fall she rallied from the attack and physician and friends hoped for a complete recovery. In February, 1898, she suffered an attack of la grippe and, in spite of medical skill and the care of loving friends, she slowly but surely neared the River of Death, until on the evening of June 8th, she passed over to join the loved ones waiting on the other side.

Always of a cheerful sunny nature, with a smile and kind greeting for all, she will be greatly missed by her own family and the many friends who knew and loved her. During her long and weary illness, the wonderful patience she exhibited was marveled at by all.

The funeral was held in the above mentioned church June 10th, Rev. DeSpelder preaching from the text, "Christ in you, the hope of glory," Col. 1:27. After which surrounded by the beautiful flowers she loved so well in life, she was laid to rest in Raisin cemetery, there to await the Resurrection morn.

A precious one from us has gone;
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home
That never can be filled.

Entered at the postoffice at Tecumseh, Michigan as second class matter.

It is now about a year since the Detroit and Lima Northern Ry. commenced running trains into Tecumseh. Our citizens raised a bonus of about $8,000 toward the construction of the road. It was promptly paid and the company did in every instance more than was agreed. The general offices of the road were moved to Tecumseh and still remain here. No less than 30 men are employed in general offices now. The coal docks were moved here from Addison and comprise a day and night force of eight men. Every freight train is changed here, which brings no less than 30 men stopping in Tecumseh. The gravel pit force of men also live in Tecumseh, making in all, including passenger train men, no less than 100 men employed by the railroad, who spend their money in Tecumseh.

Last spring the citizens of Tecumseh, subscribed $21,000 to a bonus for the building of the D. & L. N. railroad shops, then agreeing to pay 65 per cent of the money when any two of the shops were completed and in use. This 65 per cent of the bonus is now due and our people do not seem disposed to pay. A hundred idle rumors are heard every day and not one with a foundation. The shop buildings are over 2000 square feet larger than agreed and built in the most substantial manner. The third building is nearly completed. An engine of 125 horse power and two boilers each of this capacity are nearly set. The machinery from the Tiffany iron works, has been purchased, together with a large amount of new machinery. When it is in position the third shop will be working 68 men, besides boys and assistants. During the building of these shops, a force of from 20 to 30 mechanics has been employed constantly and this together with new buildings put up around town, has given every workman employment. Of course until the third shop is completed and running no great show can be made, although a corps of car painters are now at work, and the round house is in use. It will take 60 days to complete the large shop and start it running.

During the building, the company has made monthly payments to all men employed and for pay roll and various other things, have expended over $7,000 in cash. Their creditors, for material, now asks for pay and will become impatient if put off 60 or 90 days till the entire force is running. The railroad company asks the pay, not to be in a hurry, but because it needs the money to pay out on the shops. The amount is due and must be paid sometime. It is certainly a surprise to the HERALD that our people DO NOT PAY NOW, help the railroad when it needs help and by keeping the company pleased, get all possible for our money. Every man on the street has the money. He has earned it already out of the men the railroad has brought to Tecumseh. There is a certain spirit of fairness, which should govern all business transactions, and any man who will compare the paper he signed with the work already done on the shops, will admit there is no reason why he should not be glad to comply, if by so doing he could assist the railroad. One year ago Tecumseh was as dead as a petrified rat. To day she is the "Hottest" little town in southern Michigan, and ALL because of the D. & L. N. Ry. Why not be decent, and not forget so soon those who have helped us.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

Fireman Wm. H. Cramer was instantly killed in the D. & L. N. yards early Saturday morning by falling from the rear end of a locomotive, breaking his neck. The train crew were just about to pull out of the yards when the accident occurred. The engineer had left the cab for a moment and fireman Cramer went to the rear end of the tender to the tool box for something. Just at this time the throttle blew open, giving the engine a full head of steam and driving it up against another locomotive standing near. The shock threw the unlucky fireman off the tender and he struck the pilot in such a way as to break his neck, death being instantaneous. Deceased was a brother-in-law of Roadmaster Grant and was only 21 years of age. The remains were taken to his home in Findlay, O., by special train Saturday. Railroad men tell us that it is no uncommon thing for a locomotive under full head of steam to throw the throttle open and start off on its own account, which in this case was a fatal defect.

William H. Newman, the recently appointed president of the Lake Shore, has a sort of golden rule idea of Sunday railroading. Mr. Newman does just as little work on Sunday as possible and does not run a train that is not necessary to protect the business of the company. He does not care to work on Sunday, nor does he want the men under him to work any more than it is necessary. As a result the Lake Shore will not run any Sunday excursions unless there is an urgent demand from the people. He will not make any effort to encourage Sunday excursions, but will rather discourage them. Of course, if a request is made by any society or town for reduced rates on Sunday, the passenger department is instructed to make the authorized rates and provide ample service to take care of the business. The passenger department, however, is not expected to work for this class of traffic.—Blade.

The first car over the D. Y. & A. A. road was run from Ann Arbor to Wayne Saturday. H. P. Glover, Supt. Hemphill and others were on board. Since that time the trip between Ypsilanti and Wayne has been made about every two hours. A schedule of time and rates will soon be in force. Connection with the Dearborn cars to Detroit is made at Wayne. The rates, at present, for the trip between Ypsilanti and Detroit are regulated according to the number of townships through which they pass. Five cents is charged per township and village or city. The fare from Ann Arbor to Ypsilanti is 15 cents; from Ypsilanti to Denton, 20 cents; from Ypsilanti to Wayne, 12 miles, 25 cents; from Wayne to Detroit, 18 miles, 25 cents.—A. A. Argus.

Car Accountant Bauer, of the D. T. & M., tells a story that is hard to believe. He claims to have caught 29 fish on a recent trip to Tecumseh. The curious feature of the affair is that there is not enough water within ten miles of Tecumseh to float a row boat.—Blade.

We will acknowledge that our water is thiner and wetter than Toledo water, but the fish have one advantage; when thirsty they don't have to come up town for a drink as they do there. Guess that scribe didn't know Boyd's pond, Evans creek and the mighty Raisin, Fred.

Conductor Wm. Bryant of the D. & L. N., met with a painful accident while on his run Monday night. He started to go into the caboose for a nap, the train being at a standstill, when his foot slipped and he fell down the steps striking flat on his face against a tie. He is now laying off here nursing a very badly cut and bruised face. He tells us that had the train been in motion he could not have escaped being cut into pieces by the wheels, as he struck squarely between them.

Sometime between Saturday night and Sunday morning, some one broke into the Lake Shore baggage room and pried open all the trunks and grips in the building and scattered the contents around promiscuously. Out of one telescope they secured a number of articles of wearing apparel, most of which was afterward found over in the lumber yard. The job was no doubt done by amateurs from the local talent about this vicinity.

Officials of Lima Northern railroad were in town Tuesday, arranging for building of depot building and selecting a site therefor. The site selected is between the Y tracks, east of Dunham street. It is proposed to open a new street to the site across land of Wm. Penfield, from Main street opposite the new residence of J. F. Slayton. Constructions will soon begin.—Dundee Reporter.

An excursion train of 12 coaches carrying 848 people passed through here yesterday over the D. & L. N. railway, enroute from St. Paris, O., to Detroit. It was the very successful excursion of the Sunday schools from the former place.

E. B. Hathaway, who came here a couple of weeks ago to move his household goods to Ottawa, O., and was taken seriously ill, is, we are pleased to state, improving.

C. E. Bentley, of Azalia, telegraph operator of A. A. railroad, has been appointed agent for Lima Northern road at Lakeview, Ohio.—Dundee Reporter.

A. J. Lee attended his sister's wedding in Britton, Wednesday and visited his parents a couple of days.

T. E. Kane has resigned the superintendency of telegraph at the D. L. & N. general offices.

Ed Eicker has been spending several day's this week at his home in Lima.

Mrs. A. W. Leshawa is visiting her parents in Cincinnati.

J. H. Krouse is the new clerk in Roadmaster Grant's office.

Cheap Excursion to Lake Chautauqua.

On July 8th the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Ry. will sell special excursion tickets to Lake Chautauqua at very low rates. Tickets good returning to leave the Lake until August 7th inclusive. Ticket agents will give you full particulars. This will afford a fine chance for a splendid vacation.

Your Summer Vacation.

Why not spend it at Lake Chautauqua? Tickets at reduced rates during the entire summer. Let us send you a free copy of our beautiful book, telling about Chautauqua resorts and the great assembly.

THE CHURCHES.

The pastors of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches have made an arrangement for the summer vacation whereby each supplies the other's church during the absence of either. Next Sunday the pastor of the Presbyterian church will preach to both congregations in the Methodist church in the morning and in the Presbyterian church in the evening. The morning subject will be, "The Battle of Life," evening subject, "The Wonderful Book."

Subjects for Sunday service at the Baptist church, morning, "Reasonable Basis of Faith," evening, "Secret Sins Revealed"

The annual convention of Y. P. S. C. E. of Lenawee county will be held in Hudson Tuesday, June 28. An earnest request is made to the members to attend.

Mrs. Romick, pastor of the Friends church is absent for a few days. The pulpit will be supplied in the morning but not in the evening. C. E. service as usual.

RESOLUTIONS.

Raisin Presbyterian church, June 13, 1898, the following memorials were passed:

In view of the decease of elder George Kishpaugh, be it RESOLVED at this first meeting of the session since our brother's departure.

1. That we bow submissively before our Father's will in this dispensation of HIS providence knowing that HIS will, though not always intelligible to us, is always just and good.

2. That we acknowledge the divine grace in giving our brother patience in his long continued suffering.

3. That we are thankful for the service rendered the church by elder Kishpaugh and for his christian example.

4. That we hereby express our sympathy for the bereaved family and commends them to the God of all comfort.

5. That these resolutions be recorded in our Book of Minutes, that a copy be sent to Mrs. Kishpaugh for the family and that they be published in the Tecumseh HERALD. By order of session.

The uses and abuses of the telephone are many. Some are amusing, some trying and many are both. One of the most senseless things which happens a hundred times a day is to ring up some one and then inquire blandly "Who is this?" Instead of saying "Is this Mr. Blank" or "Is Mrs. K. there?" the inevitable quiry comes "Who is this?" as though the questioner expected the answer to be "Her Majesty the Queen of England" or some thing equally surprising. In nine cases out of ten it's none of your business who it is, if it isn't the party you want, so the best way out is to inquire directly for the one you do want.

One of the many attractions of the big trotting carnival at Detroit July 18 to 23 is the projected battle between the world fomous pacers, John R. Gentry and Joe Patchen. These giants of the sulky are now in training for the contest which will be of unusual interest as this will be the first meeting of these great rivals since 1896, when Gentry carried off the honors. Both pacers have materially improved in speed and race quality since that time and both have made extraordinary time. Over Detroit's fast track the race between these whirlwinds of the turf will be worth going many miles to see. Special rates of one fare for the round trip have been secured over all railroads. The race will probably be the feature of the opening of the Blue Ribbon meeting.

At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. H. M. Burridge, Saturday at 12:30 p. m. occurred the marriage of Miss Mary to Prof. Herbert Jennings. Only relatives and a few intimate friends attended the ceremony which was performed by Rev. W. F. Jones. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Dewey, of Washington, were present and their little daughter Miss Grace acted as bridesmaid a service which Miss Burridge had rendered Mrs. Dewey at the time of her marriage. Prof. and Mrs. Jennings left on the afternoon train and will spend the summer at Put In Bay, after which they will go to their home in Hanover, N. H. where Mr. Jennings occupies the chair of biology in Dartmouth college. The congratulations of many friends go with the happy couple.

QUICKSAND IN WELLS.

A Method for Excluding It Which Has Been Used with Success in Michigan and Indiana.

The writer has had large experience in sinking wells in the sandy subsoils of Michigan and northern Indiana. In early days it was no uncommon thing for the well to cave in even before quicksand was reached, and bury the workman. Some genius invented the following method, which is now in almost universal use in those districts where there is quicksand when the water is reached and where there is danger from the sand or light soil caving in upon the workman:

Construct out of inch boards a ring of the desired diameter, usually about three feet in the clear, by cutting sections of the wooden circle desired out of inch boards. Five or six sections will be required for the circle. Two hicknesses of these board circles are required, one nailed upon the other, with the joints of the sections broken. This will give a wooden ring a little over four and one-half inches wide, three feet in the clear or thereabout, and two inches thick.

As soon as there are indications of caving, this wooden ring is put in the bottom of the well and a four-inch wall made of brick is built upon it. Care should be taken to have the wooden ring about one-half inch larger on the outside than the outside diameter of the brick wall. In the localities named, well brick could be purchased, and they are better than common brick because the joints are less open; but common brick can be used by clipping the inside corners of the brick a little.

If quick is likely to be reached, four feet of the well which is first put in is laid in cement mortar to exclude it. The rest of the well will not need mortar. Having made the workman safe by a brick circular wall around him, he proceeds to dig and undermine the ring, first on one side a little and then on the other side, and the ring, with its superincumbent weight of brick, follows, and other bricks are put on the top. When the water and the quicksand are reached, no attempt is made to bail the water out. The workman proceeds as before, except that a dipper is provided for dipping up the quicksand in the bottom of the well. When the water reaches the armpits of the workman, the well is considered complete. Afterwards, should the water become low, the well is deepened by digging out the sand from it and under the ring, and more bricks are laid on the top. Thousands of these wells thus constructed may be found in the districts above referred to.

Fig. 1 shows the wooden circle, the heavy lines where the top sections of the prepared circular pieces of board meet, the light lines where the ends meet. Fig. 2 shows how the joints of the two sections of the circle are broken. Fig. 3 shows the wall laid of common unclipped bricks.—I. P. Roberts, in Country Gentleman.

Commercial Fertilizers.

Fertilizers, during the year just ended, have been lower in price than ever before, and the indications are that they will be even cheaper during the year to come. The result of the cheapening of the chemical constituents has been to raise the quality of the mixed fertilizers somewhat above the minimum guarantee, and consequently there are very few samples showing deficits in their composition. Out of 448 separate guarantees, only 28 failed to either exceed the requirements or come within the limits of error in sampling and analyzing.—N. H. Experiment Station Bulletin.

THE USE OF MANURE.

An Important Farm Problem Discussed and Explained from a Scientific Standpoint.

The manure acts upon the land in a twofold manner. First exerts a physical action upon the soil as well as a chemical agency. Under the former agency we find it giving stability to light, sandy soils, and making them more absorbent of moisture, rendering tenacious clay soils more open and friable in their nature, and thereby admitting the free passage of the rain and atmospheric air, as well as promoting the decomposition of these soils, and thereby rendering them more fertile.

For dung to act mechanically in rendering a soil more open, and in overcoming its tenacious character, the farmer must let the manure retain much of the rigidity of the straw, or, in other words, it must not be much rotten. Experience has also proved to him that in using it for very porous soils, which need to be compressed rather than rendered open, the natural toughness of the straw should be entirely overcome, and the dung used in a rotten state.

There are other duties discharged by dung which may be grouped together under the term of chemical action. Here we have powers totally distinct from the former, for while it devolves upon the former agency (the mechanical) to render the soil adapted for being traversed by the roots of the growing crop, the chemical powers supply that nourishment which is needed for the development of the crop. It is, therefore, in their combined action that the most desirable results become manifest.

It is, however, worthy of inquiry whether or not the use of fresh dung for stiff land and rotten dung for porous land is supported and confirmed by the chemical character of the dung. When fresh dung is used upon stiff land, we find that the decay which then takes place acts upon the land, and renders the dormant ingredients of the soil active, and thereby converts matter which could not nourish a plant into valuable food for vegetation. It also imparts to the soil a beneficial warmth, which is favorable to germination and vegetable growth.

In addition to this, the absorbent powers of the soil seize and retain the products of this fermentation of the dung, and secure them until required by the growing plant. In the case of a sandy soil, the circumstances, as well as the powers of the soil, are totally different. The porous character of the soil is decidedly unfavorable to its powers of retaining manure, and consequently we cannot look upon such soils as safe guardians of manure, and for this reason the manure should be added so as to be immediately available for the crop. The manure, consequently, is more suitable when well rotted, upon chemical grounds, as well as upon a consideration of its mechanical character. The same principle is applicable to all the intermediate description of soil, modified by the same rule.—Andrew H. Ward, in American Cultivator.

STOUT POST ANCHOR.

Just the Thing for Country Places Where Temporary Wire Fences Are Used from Time to Time.

Where temporary wire fences are used to any considerable extent, the corner or end posts may be anchored as shown in the illustration. The large rock, a, is sunk into the ground as deep as the post is placed and the earth is solidly trampled above it. Place the wire around the stone before it is put into the ground, then pass it around the top of the post. By using a stick, b, the wire can be tightened if there is any tendency to become loose. To move the fence, loosen the lower strand from the posts. Begin at one end and make a coil about two feet across. Roll this on the ground, crossing and recrossing the strand of wire with the roll, about every foot of length on the strand. The barbs will hold it and keep the roll together. When the roll is as large as is convenient to handle, cut the wire and begin again. When replacing fasten one end to the post where the top wire is to stay and roll along the ground close to the posts. Follow with the second one a little further off and then the third. Experience has proved to me that this is the easiest, quickest and best plan to remove wire fence, as after some practice it can be done quickly.—E. D. Smith, in Orange Judd Farmer.

Good Seed Is Necessary.

Unless good seeds are planted good crops cannot be grown. Farmers cannot compute the amount of loss incurred by planting imperfect seeds. A great many formers overlook the fact that it takes just as much plowing, harrowing, planting and cultivating to grow a half stand of corn, or, in fact, any crop, as a full stand. A full stand probably means 70 bushels an acre; a half stand about 30. So it will be seen that the man who grows the latter works for half pay. Another important item of care and labor to be considered is the thorough preparation of the soil. This is as necessary as the thorough cultivation of the crop after the seeds are planted.—Farmers' Union.

THE VETERANS.

State Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic Is Held at Port Huron.

Port Huron, June 15.—The Michigan state G. A. R. encampment opened here Wednesday in a blaze of glory. The decorations on business houses and private residences surpassed any previous attempts. The hero of Manila was prominent in nearly every window. The parade in the afternoon was inspiring. Adjt. Gen. Pond's report shows that there are 383 posts with 16,038 members. During the time of Col. Bliss' administration charters have been issued to 11 posts; 6 posts have surrendered their charters. Relief has been furnished to the amount of $2,759.54 to 196 members and their families and to 39 other persons. The total receipts for the year have been $5,596.51; the total expenditures, $4,662.42; with a balance in the general fund of $98.60; Alger fund, $835.49; post supplies, $136.75; total, $1,060.84. The other property, other than above, is $176.25. Department Commander Bliss made an eloquent address.

The Woman's Relief corps had nearly 200 delegates in attendance. The reports of officers show the organization to be in a very flourishing condition. During the past year there was a gain of 508 members and ten corps, making the present membership in Michigan 8,066, and total number of corps, 254. Just $6,109.30 was spent in relief during the year, and the amount of money on hand is $1,753.31.

The Sons of Veterans encamped in Pine Grove park with nearly 200 in attendance. They observed a regular military routine. The reports of the officers showed the organization to have passed a very prosperous year. The present membership is 2,083, with 77 camps. Twenty-four new camps were instituted during the year, an increase of 60 per cent. and the increase in membership was 85 per cent.

On Thursday Alexander L. Patrick, of Detroit, was elected department commander of the G. A. R.; Mary A. McConnell, of Flint, was chosen president of the Woman's Relief corps; George Coggshall, of Grand Rapids, was elected commander of the Sons of Veterans.

A BANK'S AFFAIRS.

Gov. Pingree Orders an Investigation Into the Mysterious Affair at Mount Pleasant.

Lansing, June 22.—Attorney General Maynard has been ordered by Gov. Pingree to investigate the affairs of the People's savings bank of Mount Pleasant, which failed last year. John F. Ryan, president at the time of the failure, is now under indictment, charged with making excessive loans contrary to law, but the people are not satisfied with the course events have taken. Three joint receivers were appointed, but soon afterward one of them resigned. Later the bank vault was blown open and its contents stolen. Just before the bank failed Cashier Struble, of Ryan's private bank at Shepherd, was found dead in the bank, the jury returning a verdict of suicide. The depositors of the People's bank have not yet been paid any dividend, and the local authorities have apparently been unable to solve the mystery surrounding the transaction. Attorney General Maynard says he will commence work on the case at once and make a thorough investigation.

THE WAR BONDS.

Those Issued by Michigan Subscribed for Seven Times Beyond Their Amount.

Lansing, June 22.—The second issue of Michigan's war bonds, amounting to $100,000, are sold. Although they were advertised a very short time, and in spite of the fact that the general government is offering investors a better bargain on the bonds, the Michigan bonds were subscribed for seven times over. At noon Saturday, when the subscriptions ceased, there were offers for $739,600, and only a small proportion of the amounts asked for can be allotted to subscribers. The bonds are three per cent. short time bonds.

A Pardon Granted.

Lansing, June 21.—Gov. H. S. Pingree has granted a pardon to James Appleyard, who was convicted in 1894 at Cheboygan, of the murder of D. J. Gahan. The latter had ravished a girl to whom Appleyard was engaged. Appleyard became violently insane and was confined in the asylum at Ionia until a few weeks ago when he was discharged as cured and sent to Jackson for ten years.

No Mental Improvement.

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 22.—Judge Thomas M. Cooley, the noted authority on constitutional law, who has been at a private asylum at Pontiac for a year, has returned to this city. He shows considerable improvement physically, but mentally he is about in the same condition as when he first broke down.

Wants Deed Set Aside.

Tekonsha, June 21.—Mrs. Asemth Crandell, a lady above 80 years of age, living near Tekonsha, deeded 160 acres of land to Hillsdale college, and now the heirs of the estate go into court and attempt to show that the old lady is incompetent, and ask to have the deed set aside.

New Bicycle Path.

Owosso, June 20. — Steps are being taken to extend the Owosso and Corunna bicycle path through to Durand. A grand bicycle ball will be held next week to increase the fund. Farmers along the route consent to the laying of the path.

Flint, June 21.—Albertina R. Eckler, of Forest township, has begun suit in the circuit court against the village of Otisville for $10,000 damages. She alleges that she was injured on a defective sidewalk.

Spanish Laziness.

(Henry C. Lea in the July Atlantic.)

Labor, to Spanish pride, was the badge of inferiority, to be escaped in every possible way, says Henry C. Lea in the July Atlantic. This natural aversion to labor manifested itself in an indolence which rendered the pretense of working almost illusory. Dormer tells us of his compatriots that they did not work as in other lands; a few hours a day, and this intermittently, were expected to provide for them as much as the incessant activity of the foreigner. To these drawbacks on productive industry is to be added the multitude of feast days, which Navarrete estimates at about one third of the working-days, rising to one-half at the critical season of the harvests,—feast-days which, according to Archbishop Carranza, were spent in debauchery rendoring them especially welcome to the devil. Under such conditions it was impossible for Spain to withstand the competition of the foreigner.

We hear, on what seems to us to be reliable authority, that The Independent of New York contemplates a change of form to the size of some of the prominent monthly magazines. If true, it is certainly a change which will be appreciated by its readers.

Mr. Henry Norman, one of the editors of the London Daily Chronicle, who came to America to see how we demean ourselves under the stress of war, will have a paper in the July McClure's, giving his observations and impressions and telling what he thinks is likely to be the outcome of the war for us in our foreign relations. It was Mr. Norman whose articles had so much to do in composing the Venezuelan difficulty.

By Absorption.

Catarrhal sufferers should remember that Ely's Cream Balm is the only catarrh remedy which is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the diseased membrane. It does not dry up the secretions, but changes them to a limpid and odorless condition, and finally to a natural and healthy character. The balm can be found at any drug store, or by sending 50 cents to Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York, it will be mailed Full directions with each package. Cream Balm opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays inflamation, thereby stopping pain in the head, heals and protects the membrane and restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils.

Everywhere in Michigan people say Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

Cure all kidney ills.

W. S. Kilmer, Passenger Engineer on the M. C. Ry. residing at No. 214 Orange St., Jackson, Mich., says: "In 1895 I had considerable trouble with my kidneys from the result of a severe cold which settled there and though I tried every means at hand and treated with doctors the pains through the small of my back became more persistent and severe. To add to my troubles the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular. At last I was obliged to lay off work. When at home getting no better under the treatment I was then taking, some one advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills and I procured a box more out of curiosity than from any expectation that they might help me. Now I want this thoroughly understood, when I finished the box I went back to work without a pain or an ache. But to make matters doubly certain I took a second box. Since that time, and that is three years ago, I have neither had an ache nor a pain. Is it any wonder that at this date, 1898, I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills."

HAULING IN A BASS.

A Task That Delights the Heart of the True Fisherman.

Piscatorial Excursions Are Quite Popular in Washington Just Now—Senators Who Are Fond of Trolling and Casting.

[Special Washington Letter.]

PRIMITIVE man hunts and fishes for a livelihood. Civilized man hunts for game and angles for fishes for recreation. In modern parlance, this is called "sport."

Staid and prim people who do not hunt or fish say that it is wicked and reprehensible to use rod and gun in this manner; but they eat prairie chicken, pheasants, quails and all sorts of fish, and are glad of the opportunity to do so.

Ducks and geese abound in this vicinity on Chesapeake bay and its tributaries, in season. But at this time of the year our people on their outings are devoting their leisure and pleasure to the finny fellows beneath the waves. Our fishermen are doing business with bass and other witches of the water; and readers who love such recreation, or sport, will probably be interested in a description of the aquatic pleasure.

Senator Davis, of Minnesota, has often said: "I go a-fishing only when I can have things my own way. I must have a quiet day. I must have smooth water. I must have a safe boat. I want an old-fashioned pipe. There must be good bait, and plenty of it. There must be a good boatman at the helm. And, above all things else, the boatman must be a foreigner who can't talk English or who is absolutely dumb. A boatman who can talk, and tells fish stories, is an abomination."

Everybody who has fished for pleasure, and also for fish, will understand that the senator has bottled up several tons of wisdom in those three sententious sentences.

The bass, the glorious Potomac bass, he of the small mouth and wary eye, of the broad, powerful shoulders and muscle-filled loins, of never-failing courage and stout heart, the gamest fish that swims, when in water to his liking, and who fights with as much zeal and vigor as the patriots did in the days of '76 against odds just as great, is awakened from the sluggishness that has characterized him to a remarkable degree this year, and is resuming his character as the most distinguished opponent an angler can find in this section of the country. Taken pound for pound, the Potomac bass will give more sport for weight than any other game fish except the ouiananiche—the winanish of the far northern waters. When he is at his kingly proportions, between two and three pounds in weight, he is unequaled in his subtle cunning. He is a Napoleon in strategy, a Bismarck in determination. The real angler who strikes such a fish experiences emotions that can never be described. The maiden listening to the lute of her lover, the miser counting his gold, may feel delightful sensations, and undergo divine spells; but the fisherman with a 2½-pound bass at the end of his line knows an exaltation that is supreme. To the uninitiated the foregoing probably sounds like balderdash, but the angler knows that it is not overdrawn.

Few of the bass fishermen have enjoyed such ecstasy this year until recently, however, because the fish has been shy of his usual haunts. Old rivermen declare that the big bass had gone into deep water, to purge their system after enforced idleness of the spawning season, and that the chilly water had retarded their return from their annual pilgrimage. "Wait till we have half a dozen real hot days," they said, and then the bass would come back in good condition. Events of the past two weeks have proved that as far as the bass returning to their usual haunts was concerned, the old fishermen were right.

It requires an expert fisherman to fish with a live minnow in shallows; but for the fly fisherman, or one who uses a spoon, it is appetizing to find the bass frequenting them. The Fourth of July found big crowds of anglers up the river, and again the record showed that the water from Harper's Ferry down to about Georgetown was the favored run for bass in the Potomac.

Your correspondent fished at Harper's Ferry, and had excellent luck, which was followed by misfortune of the most exasperating sort. He had enjoyed fine sport, and in the water behind his boat as he was coming in trailed a string of eight fine beauties. A sharp rock caught the slender string and cut it as though with a knife. And that was the last of the bass.

In a preceding paragraph allusions were made to the ouiananiche, or winnanish, as the Indians call it. The upper Saguenay, in the far Canadian woods, is the home of this wonderful fish. He is a land-locked salmon. In a recent issue of a sporting paper an interesting description of the ouinaniche appeared. The fish, it was said, is of wide habitat, and variously named.

In Maine he is known as the "Schoodic trout." In Nova Scotia he is called "grayling." In the land-locked lakes of Sweden he is termed "silverlax." He is found in all the waters of Quebec, and is particularly plentiful in the streams of the Lake St. John system. In weight he will run from four to seven pounds. The record is 17½ pounds, taken from very deep water, with a jock Scott fly. He is a hater of civilization. When land on either side of his water is plowed he vanishes.

In England salmon live and do well in rivers that are obstructed by weirs and tainted with the dyes and foul excretions of factories, but the ouiananiche is born of wild water. He braves the rapids, and lives a life of peril and hardship; and civilization, so infinitely the inferior of savagery, commands him to move on. Not for him are streams churned by steamers and made foul by humanity. The dip of the Indian paddle and the smooth shooting of the canoe's dark shadows above his lair are as near man as he cares to come.

He is beautiful, a perfect salmon in shape. He is deep black on his back. His sides are bluish green, and silver green at the medial line. The belly is silver white, and the gill covers are a deep, rich greenish bronze. The eyes are remarkably large and brilliant, and the adults all have black spots on the body which are irregular and quadrilaterals or double X's. The formula of his fighting ability gives him one pound for every two of the sea-going salmon. A five-pound ouiananiche will equal a ten-pound salmon.

No man a stranger to the Canadian waters of the woods can understand the fearful weight and strength of their currents. They plunge over rapids and thunder through canyons, and leap and bound and roar and swirl and boil and bubble, spin madly round and round, dash in impotent rage against rocks that have withstood their assaults for aeons, howl by the bases of precipices, and chant songs of fear. The ouinananiche is an athlete by nature and continuous training. He has to be.

Anatomically he is not to be distinguished from the sea-going salmon. Comparatively he is a dwarf, but at the end of 200 feet of line he weighs a thousand active, plunging, vicious pounds. For to his credit be it said he is the very gamest fish that cuts fresh water. To seize his prey with magnificent rush, and to fight until the strong heart flutters, and the eye dims, and the pliant muscles can no longer obey, is all of his philosophy and his life. His heroism is his requiem.

The Potomac bass is like unto him. The Canadian and the Yankee fish are rivals in pluck and gameness. The little fellows who glint and shimmer through the waters of the Potomac are also hardy athletes. They climb falls, shoot rapids, burrow and delve, dig and fight for their livings; and they never give up their lives without making man feel that he has met a foe strong enough to give him a struggle of the most exciting character.

Col. Dick Bright, for many years sergeant-at-arms of the senate, gave senators many an hour's pleasure, by leading them to the best fishing grounds. He is a natural entertainer, and is fond of sport himself. During his five years in charge of the senate, and of the comfort of the senators, Col. Bright escorted Senator Hawley, of Connecticut; Senator Gear, of Iowa; Senator Hill, of New York; Senator White, of California, and many others of like standing, to the best Potomac fishing places; and they have been benefited by their outings on every occasion. The colonel was always careful to have Appolinaris water in plenty, boxes of cigars of all brands, some pipes and smoking tobacco, and good boatmen. He also took care to have plenty of bait. What more could a sporting fisherman want?

Why the fish are alleged to bite better on Sunday than any other day is a matter of philosophy rather than of narration, and the reader must settle that matter, one way or another, for himself. One thing is certain, however, at least in these parts, and that is that there is a great deal of Sunday fishing done by people in all the walks of life. If that be a sin, it is one for which your correspondent will not be called to account.

BITS OF STATE NEWS.

Interesting Information Gathered by Mail and Telegraph from Many Points.

The tri-state band reunion will be held at Jackson on August 17.

The recent heavy rains and winds have damaged the wheat very badly around Ridgeway.

Grasshoppers are eating the wheat and rye in Cass county, and farmers are becoming alarmed.

At Byron F. E. Close & Co.'s wool warehouse and elevator were destroyed by fire. Loss, $20,000.

The new woolen mill at the Soo is nearly completed and it is expected operations will begin next week.

Gov. Pingree has appointed Philip T. VanZile, of Detroit, a member of the state board of examiners in law for five years.

Secretary of War Alger has notified Gov. Pingree that colored troops cannot be used in the second call for volunteers.

The annual reunion of the old soldiers and sailors of northern Michigan will be held at Lewiston September 14, 15 and 16.

Gen. Irish says that he has been offered companies from Chicago, Mississippi and Ohio for the Thirty-fifth Michigan volunteers.

Mrs. Sarah Hall has recovered $1,000 damages from the village of Alma for injuries sustained from falling upon a defective sidewalk in 1895.

The body of Capt. William Wheatley, keeper of the Marquette lighthouse, who was capsized in a small boat and drowned, has been recovered.

Clint McGee, of Pontiac, won the oratorical contest at Albion college Saturday night. He will represent the college at Bay View next August.

The total number of deaths registered in Michigan during the month of May was 2,415. This number was 230 less than for the preceding month.

The cherry crop in Ionia county is being seriously damaged by the ravages of black lice, hardly a tree in the vicinity having escaped untouched.

A Petersburg saloonkeeper was ordered to pay $5,000 for the death of an intoxicated man named Byron Sapler, who purchased the liquor at the saloon.

West Bay City people will probably erect a monument to the memory of Elmer Meilstrup and Howard Hawkins, who lost their lives when the Maine was blown up.

While standing under a tree during a storm, William Howlett, of Ann Arbor, received a bolt of lightning in his body, which knocked him senseless and paralyzed his arms.

The third annual camp meeting of the western Michigan conference of the Methodist Protestant church will be held at Midland Park, Gull Lake, August 3 to 14.

The large elevator and warehouse of F. E. Close & Co., at Byron, was burned Sunday morning. The total loss on building and contents will reach $20,000; insurance, $15,000.

The will of John W. Moon, of Muskegon, has been admitted to probate. His estate is worth $350,000. Albion college is bequeathed $10,000 and the Muskegon Methodist church receives $5,000.

A sign of the times and the patriotism of the young men of Michigan is that there is something of a decrease this summer in the number of baseball teams, and an increase in the number of shooting clubs.

Don J. Leathers, the Grand Rapids capitalist, has lost his suit against John Camfield for $30.000 commission in arranging a pine land deal of $1,200,000. It was shown in court that he was really acting for both parties.

The encampment of the Old Soldiers' and Sailors' Association of Northern Michigan, to have been held at Traverse City this month, has been indefinitely postponed, due to the dearth of available tents arising from the war.

The robberies which have lately occurred in and around Niles have terrorized the country people of that section. It is now proposed that detectives shall be engaged and kept at work until the outlaws are captured or driven from the section.

The Woodland News says that fish are being found dead in large quantities on the surface of the water of lakes in that vicinity, and many of those which are caught by anglers are covered with sores, and so afflicted with some mysterious disease that their tails and fins drop off.

The schooner Chattanooga has been successfully launched at Bay City. The Chattanooga is modern, convenient and up to date in every way, and has a carrying capacity of 150,000 bushels of wheat. A sister schooner, the Chickamauga, will be soon launched at the Davidson yards.

Mrs. Lafler, widow of Byron Lafler, of Milan, has recovered $5,000 damages from Edward L. Fisher, a Petersburg saloonkeeper, and his bondsmen. Lafler went to Petersburg after a load of grist last fall, became intoxicated and was upset while going home. The load of grist fell on him, smothering him. The suit has been a hard fought one.

Buildings and Stock Burn.

Owosso, June 20.—The elevator and wool storehouse of F. E. Close & Co. at Byron was destroyed by fire Sunday morning, together with 3,000 bushels of beans and $4,000 worth of wool. The total loss will reach $25,000, with $15,000 insurance. A number of Ann Arbor freight cars standing on the track were also burned. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

Charged with Murder.

C. A. EVERETT

A Letter From Chickamauga Park From Gabriel Mills.

Camp Thomas, June 8.

Dear Uncle and Aunt:—I got your letter to-night and will now answer it immediately. Nearly all of the Co. are well but two measles patients who are able to be up, and one of the boys is in the hospital with spinal meningitis all the rest are on duty. We have sham battles now nearly every day Co. G. carries off the the honors every day. I sent you a paper last night. You can see from that how the boys are feeling. There is no more kicking on the grub as it has improved greatly. I don't believe you had better send a box of grub as quite a lot of stuff has been expressed to the boys since we have been here that they have never received. Our grub is good enough now so that we have no cause for complaint.

Our brigade formerly consisted of the 12th Minn., the 1st. Ill. and the 5th Penn. but the 1st Ill. was sent to Tampa and so last night the 1st South Carolina arrived to take its place. We all went over with the band and greeted them. They are quite a fine appearing lot of boys but have few equipments. We received orders from our Colonel this evening in regard to our clothing. We are to be well supplied as you will see from the following list of what each man is to have when his equipment in the clothing line is complete: 1 campaign hat, 1 pair shoes, 2 blue blouses, 1 brown duck blouse, 2 pair blue trousers, 1 pair brown duck trousers, 2 suits underwear, 3 pair of socks, 1 overcoat, 1 woolen blanket, 2 pair of white gloves for dress parade and 2 blue overshirts. In heavy marching order we have all this to carry and in addition 1 Springfield rifle, 1 knapsack, 1 haversack, 1 canteen 1 cartridge belt and our rations so you see it makes quite a decent load.

We were inspected about a week ago by Lieut. Col. John Jacob Astor, the millioniare. Day before yesterday we were again inspected by a Major from the regular army. We don't have to drill at all in the middle of the day We have 15 minutes to get up in and those who are not up then get extra duty grubbing out the stumps in the camp. All the lights have to go out at taps but as soon as the guard who is put in each Co. street to see that the lights do go out, has gone away the boys come out in their night clothes and raise hell in general. One of the boys has a camera and has already quite a collection of pictures of the boys in various places and positions. I will get a collection when we get back to Austin and send them to you. We have the finest officers of any Co. in the regiment. G. is the crack company and no mistake. The boys in Co. G. are all nationalities, American, French, German, Danish, Norwegian, Rnssian, English, Irish, Bohemians, Scotch, Canucks and one quadroon. The Danes make the best soldiers of the foreigners. Just now the boys are having a big laugh. One of the sergeants has a bottle of ammonia that we use to clean belts with and he got one of the boys to take a good big smell of it and you could fairly see the top of the fellow's head raise up. Another favorite amusement with the boys is to catch some fellow asleep and throw a pail of water on him. The newspaper reports look as though the war would not last much longer but still we expect to be in the army till winter. It isn't such a bad job as some people seem to think. None of the boys get homesick now and most of them enjoy it. I am going up on Lookout mountain the first chance I get. You can see seven states from the top of the mountain. I went over to the 14th Minn. Sunday and saw Charley Ulrich, who graduated in the same class as I at the Cleary Business College. He is in the Regt. Hospital as steward. We had a nice long talk about old times in Ypsi.

I wish North was here with me. I guess I am the only young fellow from Macon in the army except George Bond. I don't know whether his home is in Macon or not. John Whetsel is as happy as a lark. He's Co. C.'s head cook and he is a good one.

Well I must close for this time. Don't bother about a box as we don't know what minute we may be ordered away from here. Write soon.

Yours As Ever,
GABE

George Smith.

George Smith was born May 16, 1821, at Ueschendorf in Bavaria, Germany. At the age of 22 years he arrived in the city of New York. He was married at that place June 1, 1845, to Miss Anna Schreyer. In 1865 they moved to Toledo. In 1893 Mr. Smith suffered an acute attack of kidney trouble from which he never entirely recovered, although able to be about some. Some four months ago he became afflicted with gangrene, making it necessary to amputate his right foot. Just previous to this, death claimed his wife and the shock undermined the little remaining vitality left and he departed this life Friday morning June 3, at the age of 77 years and 17 days. Six sons and four daughters survive him.

He had been a resident of Toledo 24 years, following till his retirement from business seven years ago, the business of manufacturer and dealer in paper, which had engaged his energies and enterprise for a quarter of a century. The deceased was ever recognized as one of Toledo's worthy and successful business man and an enterprising and honorable citizen, charitable to a fault and respected for his goodly christian virtues.

The funeral took place Sunday at 1:30 p. m. at the family home, 1516 Washington street. The services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Querl of the Evangelical Luthern church, of which the deceased was a faithful member.

In Hillsdale, one day last week, some unprincipled cuss dropped a handful of tacks in a bicycle path, and several tires were punctured. It would be unhealthy for the tack scatterer to fall into the hands of the wheelmen, for they might puncture his anatomy, even as he did their tires.—Hudson Post.

After they are well withered set fire to the patch. The fire will go as far as the saltpetre has gone, which is known to be 10 to 12 feet deep.

The hell they depict is hung with icicles 40 feet long, the water is always frozen over, tho north wind blows and fire is unknown there. They say it is no use to preach of a warm hell to a man in the Klondike, for he would pack up his blankets and start within 24 hours. Ann Arbor Klondikers please take notice.—Ann Arbor Courier.

Yesterday afternoon a colored man named Wm. Taylor, went behind the bar at the Cook house to do up John Behan, the bartender, because he would not sell him a drink. Behan's ground for refusing to sell the drink was that Taylor was too drunk. When Taylor went behind the bar on his errand of vengeance, Behan picked up a bottle and hit him over the head with it. Now Taylor is in jail with a bad cut on his head and a summons to appear in Justice Duffy's court hanging over him.—Ann Arbor Argus.

The Ann Arbor Courier credits the following to a Missouri orator: "We live in a land of high mountains and taxes, low valleys and low wages, big crooked rivers and big crooked statesmen, big lakes and big strikes, big drunks and big pumpkin heads, streams that gambol in the mountains and pious politicians that gamble in the night, roaring cataracts and roaring orators, fast young men, fast, faster young women, sharp lawyers, sharp financiers, sharp-toed shoes, noisy children, fertile plains that lie like a sheet of water and thousands of newspapers that lie like thunder."

The Hudson Post poet had green cucumbers for supper last week, and hence the following:

Last Monday, so the records say,
Judge Chester, in a modest way, heard a petition. 'Twas of course a woman wanting a divorce. Her married name, Hattie L. Sweet, she no more wanted to repeat; she said Erwin L. Sweet was cruel; she longed no more to cook his gruel; the judge thought it would be quite toney to grant the sweet one alimony; one thousand dollars was the sum, enough to purchase pie and gum; and gave her back her maiden name, so that she is almost the same as if she ne'er did sleep and eat in the same house with Erwin Sweet.

Gus Slayton, of Tecumseh, has patented a castor for beds and couches. It has glass wheels, and when the castors are properly arranged, it is claimed that no electricity that is self generated through ones individual dynamo, can get out into the room and run down the stair hall and escape through the key holes, unless the sleeper so desires. When Delbert Mills and Geo. Merritt have unobstructed snore privileges, and there's more caloric generated than would come from the cylinder of a Battle Creek thresher, why the danger of a surplus electric current is at the very maximum so the castors have an electric switch which hits a fellow juit in the nick of time, Ridgeway and Franklin farmers are watching to see if the switch attachment works all right, and if it does, they will see that their boys are supplied with these castors, and they will turn the switch and see if they can't get the kids out for breakfast in season.—Adrian Press.

SIBERIAN GENTLEMAN'S LIFE.

Napping and Eating Occupy a Large Portion of His Time.

"For five months in the year the Siberian man of fashion lives in the open air, either at the mining camp or in the hunting field," says Thomas G. Allen, Jr., writing of "Fashionable Life in Siberia," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "He is an early bird under all circumstances, and invariably rises between seven and eight o'clock, although he may have had but a couple of hours' rest. Nearly every meal is succeeded by a nap. However, dressing operations do not take very long, for when he retires the Siberian only divests himself of his coat and boots. Shirts are unknown in Siberia, and in many houses beds, also. The samovar is set on the dining-room table at eight a. m., together with eggs, black and white bread, sardines, jam and cakes, etc. Breakfast is eaten, and washed down by five or six glasses of tea stirred up with sugar, cream and sometimes jam. At one o'clock dinner is served, and at five in the afternoon another small meal, much like that of the morning, is taken. A meat supper follows at nine o'clock."

HER GOLDEN HAIR FELL OFF.

There Is a Hot Time in Store for the Hairdresser.

All faith in the efficacy of the coiffeur's art for restoring the ravages of time on the person and features of the fair sex has been scattered in the mind of a certain lady, says the London Telegraph. The lady in question had reached that period in life when the nut-brown tresses of youth were liberally besprinkled with the silver of advancing age. A day or two ago she received an invitation to the wedding of a relation, and, as she had before her the prospect of meeting some who had known her when she was young and beautiful, the lady determined, in order to avoid any shock to their feelings, to pass half an hour in the hands of a coiffeur, so as to emerge rejuvenated and resplendent. She did so and when, later on in the day, she came forth with golden locks and wavy curls in the place of her hitherto striped coiffure, the good dame called down the blessings of Providence on the head of the skillful dresser.

But alas! a terrible catastrophe occurred. When, on the morrow, her maid proceeded to comb through the luxuriant tresses the whole came off in her hands, and all that remained to show that her mistress had been to the hairdresser's was the similarity between her own head and the barber's pole. As for the person who effected this deplorable metamorphosis, he may expect a lively time before long, when the threatened case comes into court.

TOOK A COLD SHOWER BATH.

A gentleman about 60 years of age entered a gymnasium and physical culture school in Brooklyn the other day and announced his intention of becoming a pupil to "build himself up," reports the New York Times. After hard exercise for an hour it is customary for each pupil to take a warm or cold shower bath and then be rubbed down by an attendant with coarse towels, thus promoting the circulation of the blood and putting the body in a healthy glow. The shower bath is in a small compartment, and the pupil enters and closes the door, manipulating the spigots to suit himself, while the attendant waits outside until he is through.

The elderly pupil was told after his first lesson that he had better take a cold shower, and he entered the compartment and closed the door. The attendant waited for nearly 15 minutes outside, and wondered what the man was doing, as he could hear the cold water running, but no other sound.

Finally from the compartment came the chattering query: "How long must I stay in this place? I'm freezing."

The new pupil was promptly rescued and resuscitated, and it was explained to him that it was not customary for a man to stay under the shower longer than two or three minutes on a cold winter day.

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Work That Is Being Transacted by Our Law-Makers in the City of Washington.

DAILY SUMMARY OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

Important Measures Under Discussion and Others Are Passed—The Senate Considers the Resolution for the Annexation of Hawaii—Insurance for Soldiers.

Washington, June 23.—Opponents of the annexation of Hawaii occupied the time in the senate yesterday. A resolution was agreed to asking for information concerning Lieut. Hobson and his party confined in Santiago by the Spaniards.

Washington, June 24. — Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, occupied the time in the senate yesterday in a speech opposing Hawaiian annexation.

Washington, June 25.—The conference report on the bankruptcy bill was disposed of by the senate yesterday without debate, and the Hawaiian annexation resolutions were further discussed. A vote on the question is expected on July 2. The general deficiency appropriation bill ($226,140,240) was reported.

Washington, June 27.—A bill authorizing the president to appoint additional cadets-at-large at the United States military academy and another authorizing the appointment of a military secretary of war were passed in the senate on Saturday, and the Hawaiian annexation resolution was further discussed.

Washington, June 28.—Speeches were made in the senate yesterday by Senators Clay, of Georgia; Roach, of North Dakota, and Caffery, of Louisiana, all opposing Hawaiian annexation.

Washington, June 29.—Almost the entire session of the senate yesterday was occupied by Senator Caffery (dem., La.), in a continuation of his speech against the annexation of Hawaii.

House.

Washington, June 23.—A bill incorporating the national congress of mothers was passed in the house yesterday and a bill was introduced to provide for life and accident insurance for the military and marine forces of the government in lieu of pensions.

Washington, June 24. — In the house yesterday further agreements upon the sundry civil bill were reported from the committee on conference and adopted and 63 pension and relief measures were disposed of. A bill was introduced authorizing the construction of the Nicaragua canal. Adjourned to the 27th.

Washington, June 28.—The house yesterday devoted the session to consideration of legislation affecting the District of Columbia. A message was received from the president recognizing the brave deeds of Hobson and other gallant soldiers in the war with Spain.

Washington, June 29.—The conference report upon the bankruptcy bill was adopted in the house yesterday by a vote of 134 to 53 and the measure will now go to the president. Favorable reports were made on bills increasing the field rations of the soldiers in active service and to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors on Indian reservations and in buildings controlled by the United States. A bill was introduced to transfer Naval Constructor Hobson to the line of the navy.

Washington, June 28.—The president issued a proclamation yesterday extending the blockade of Cuba to the southern coast from Cape Frances to Cape Cruz, inclusive, and also blockading San Juan, Puerto Rico. The most important of these ports are Manzanillo, Trinidad and Tunas. The vessels for the additional blockade service will be supplied almost entirely from the patrol fleet which under Commodore Howell has been guarding the north Atlantic coast from Maine to South Carolina.

PILING IT ON THICKER AND THICKER.

Will He Ever Know When He Gets Enough?
[From the Chicago Dispatch.]

OFF FOR MANILA.

The Third Expedition to Aid Admiral Dewey Leaves San Francisco.

San Francisco, June 28.—The transports City of Para, Ohio, Morgan City and Indiana (flagship) sailed at 2:30 p. m. Monday with 4,000 troops, bound for Manila.

Washington, June 29.—The understanding at the war department is that the total number of regulars and volunteers which will be dispatched to Manila in command of Maj. Gen. Merritt will approximate 21,000 men. Of these 10,000 already have left San Francisco in three separate expeditions.

To Declare American Supremacy.

San Francisco, June 29.—Gen. Merritt expects to take possession of the Philippines peaceably. Should resistance be offered, however, he will be fully prepared to use force and plenty of it. He will discuss the matter with Dewey at Manila, and the two will act in concert in whatever move is made. In order that the Filipinos may not misunderstand his motives and intentions, Gen. Merritt has prepared a proclamation, which is printed in Spanish. Thousands of copies will be posted in the islands, and there is no chance for anyone there to fail to grasp what is meant by the document. The chief points are the announcement that the United States, represented by Gen. Merritt, has formed a provisional government in the islands; that his authority is supreme; that no oppression is intended; that liberty will be allowed every inhabitant so far as it can go without conflicting with law and order, and that, above all things, the freedom of the people is desired, the ultimate aim being their release from Spanish bondage.

Dewey's Warning to Germans.

London, June 29.—A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Manila says: The report that Germany will not permit a bombardment is exciting deep irritation in the American fleet. Admiral Dewey intends to demand a capitulation the instant reenforcements arrive. He told Prince Henry of Prussia that he would be glad to see the German officers at Manila, but it would be well to caution them to keep out of the American line of fire. It remains to be seen whether Germany has really given such promises as are pretended.

Can't Coal at Port Said.

New York, June 28.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Cairo, Egypt, says: Admiral Camara has asked to be allowed to purchase 10,000 tons of coal for the Spanish fleet at Port Said, but the Egyptian government refuses to permit the ships to coal in Egyptian waters.

Situation at Manila.

Hong-Kong, June 28.—Gen. Aguinaldo, according to letters brought here from Cavite by a German steamer, occupies the mansion of the late governor of Cavite, but he will shortly move to Imus to make room for the American troops. The insurgents now have 5,000 prisoners. The Spanish brigadier Moret was killed at San Fernando in an attempt to force the rebel lines.

RUSHING FORWARD.

Gen. Shafter's Army Continues Its Advance on Santiago.

Washington, June 29.—Gen. Shafter reports that at nine o'clock Monday night the army was west of San Juan river, within three miles of Santiago, and in plain sight of the city. His position had just been abandoned by the enemy, and all is progressing well.

Have Viewed the Land.

Gen. Lawton, Gen. Chaffee and Gen. Wheeler have thoroughly reconnoitred the Spanish position and, with the aid of information furnished by the Cubans, have very good maps of the roads and defenses of the city. Much information has also been obtained from Spanish pacificos, who have slipped out of the city and given themselves up in hope of getting food. They report great starvation and distress in Santiago. They say the Spanish troops are on short rations, and that all the supplies are being held for their use.

Newport, R. I., June 28.—Capt. Joshua Slocum arrived here yesterday on the yacht Spray, after a voyage around the world. He left Boston April 24, 1895, entirely alone on the yacht, which is only 33 feet long and 14 feet wide.

SPANIARDS DRIVEN BACK

They Are Forced to Retreat After a Hot Battle with Our Troops Near Santiago.

SEVERAL AMERICANS LOSE THEIR LIVES

Our Troops Fight the Enemy Hidden in Thickets in Superior Numbers—The Army of Invasion Advancing Rapidly on the City — Other War News of Interest.

Juragua, Cuba, June 25, Per Dispatch Boat Dandy, Via Kingston, Jamaica, June 27.—The initial fight of Col. Wood's rough riders and the troopers of the First and Tenth regular cavalry will be known in history as the battle of La Quasina. That it did not end in the complete slaughter of the Americans was not due to any miscalculation in the plan of the Spaniards, for as perfect an ambuscade as was ever formed in the brain of an Apache Indian was prepared and Lieut. Col. Roosevelt and his men walked squarely into it. For an hour and a half they held their ground under a perfect storm of bullets from the front and sides, and then Col. Wood at the right and Lieut. Col. Roosevelt at the left led a charge which turned the tide of battle and sent the enemy flying over the hills toward Santiago.

Says 22 Were Killed.

Gen. Wheeler, in his official report, places the number of dead in the engagement at Sevilla as 22 and the wounded as between 70 and 80. No attempt has yet been made to prepare an official list with the names of the dead and wounded. The high grass and bushes of the battleground make it difficult to find the bodies.

Sure to Fight Soon.

On the Rio Guamal, via Kingston, Jamaica, June 28.—The Spanish and American advance posts are now almost close enough to see the whites of each other's eyes and a collision may occur at any moment.

Strongly Intrenched.

The top of every hill and mountain north and east of Santiago is occupied by blockhouses, from whence the Spaniards can view the movements of the American army as it advances beyond Sabanilla, while to the eastward of the city gashing every knoll and bit of high ground, are Spanish entrenchments.

Vesuvius Again at Work.

Santiago de Cuba, via Kingston, Jamaica, June 28.—It is believed Admiral Cervera contemplated a dash out of the harbor Saturday night. Extra precautions were therefore taken and the Vesuvius after midnight fired three guncotton shells in the direction of Morro castle.

GOING TO SPAIN.

The Government Decides to Send Warships to Attack Coast Cities.

Washington, June 28.—The navy department at 11:15 o'clock posted the following bulletin:

"Commodore Watson sails to-day in the Newark to join Sampson, when he will take under his command an armored squadron with cruisers and proceed at once off the Spanish coast."

The navy department has posted the following bulletin, showing Commodore Watson's squadron. It is designated the eastern squadron, and is as follows: Flagship Newark, battleships Iowa and Oregon, cruisers Yosemite, Yankee and Dixie and the colliers Scandia, Abarenda and Alexander. The advance will be made at once from Santiago. The bulletin also showed the following changes in designation of the division of our war vessels:

North Atlantic fleet, Rear Admiral Sampson, commanding—First squadron, Commodore J. A. Howell, commanding.

Second squadron, Commodore W. S. Schley, commanding.

Naval base, Key West, Fla.—Commodore Remey, commanding.

Lieut. Blue's Latest.

Off Santiago de Cuba, June 27 (via Kingston, Jamaica, June 28).—Lieut. Victor Blue, of the auxiliary gunboat Suwanee, returned to the fleet to-day from another investigating trip ashore. He reported that Admiral Cervera's ships are all in the harbor. With the exception of one torpedo boat destroyer, they are at anchor and show no signs of activity.

Terror Badly Damaged.

Washington, June 29.—The navy department Tuesday posted the following bulletin:

"Admiral Sampson reports that the Yale arrived yesterday and discharged her troops.

"Capt. Sigsbee reports that on Wednesday afternoon while off San Juan, Puerto Rico, he was attacked by a Spanish unprotected cruiser and the Spanish torpedo boat destroyer Terror. The Terror made a dash, which was awaited by the St. Paul. The St. Paul hit the Terror three times, killing one officer and two men and wounding several others. The Terror dropped back under cover of the fortifications with difficulty and was towed into the harbor in a sinking condition, where she is now being repaired. Later a cruiser and a gunboat started out, but remained under protection of the forts."

Famous Hotel Burned.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., June 27.—The Clifton hotel in Clifton, Ont., on the opposite side of Niagara river, was destroyed by fire Sunday, the estimated loss being $100,000.

The Clifton is where the peace congress between north and south was held near the close of the war. It had sheltered many members of European royal families. The hotel will be rebuilt.

AFTER 20 YEARS.

A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the work of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder-worker from all parts of the Union. Speaking of her experience a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jno. Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says: "For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble, and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pains across my back extending up the right side; totally unable to lie on my right side; the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excruciating pain; is something much more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used three boxes. I felt like a different person. I was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left, I slept well at night, I could do my house work as well as I ever could, and I give the entire credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that too prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

THEY AGREE UPON FUSION

Democrats, Populists and Silver-Republicans Hold Their State Conventions.

EASILY DECIDE UPON A STATE TICKET.

The Offices Divided Equally Between the Three Parties—Justin R. Whiting, Democrat, Named for Governor—The Make-Up of the Rest of the Ticket.

Grand Rapids, June 23. — In their state conventions Wednesday the democrats, silver republicans and populists had less trouble in getting together than usual. There was very little controversy over the division of the ticket, and the platforms do not conflict on any essential point. The harmonious action is due mainly to the influence of Daniel J. Campau, of Detroit, who is made chairman of the democratic state central committee, and promises to make an aggressive campaign. The populists made their platform much less radical than heretofore, and at their request the democrats inserted a plank in favor of the initiative and referendum, though it is not in the usual language used on that subject. The silver republicans also modified their platform, sending the first report back to the committee for revision, to make it more in accordance with the democratic declarations. The democratic platform reaffirms allegiance to the Chicago platform of 1896, and makes the following declaration on state affairs:

"We call attention to the fact that when the democratic party came into power in this state in 1891, for the first time in many years, it promptly inaugurated measures looking to the equal and just taxation of railroad and other corporations. It passed a law compelling railroads to carry passengers at two cents per mile, which has been sustained by the supreme court of the state; it established a franchise fee for corporations, which has produced large revenues; it restricted the right of consolidation of competing railroads; it inaugurated the first Australian ballot law ever enacted in the state, designed to prevent coercion of the votes of workingmen by corporations; it enacted the first practical and effective law for the protection of mechanics' liens; it repealed the law which practically exempted mining companies from taxation and compelled them to pay their just share of taxes. It introduced business methods in all branches of the state government, by which the people were better served at much less expense than any prior or subsequent administration. We promise a continuance of this work." The platform criticises mildly the present state administration, but does not mention the name of Pingree. Vigorous prosecution of the war is favored in a ringing plank

The nine places on the ticket were divided equally between the three parties, and the nominations were ratified in joint convention at night, the complete ticket reading as follows:

Governor, ex-Congressman Justin R. Whiting, of St. Clair (dem.); lieutenant governor, Michael F. McDonald, of Sault Ste. Marie (dem.); secretary of state, L. E. Lockwood, of Coldwater (pop.); auditor-general, John L. Frisbie, of Hillsdale (silver rep.); state treasurer, Dr. Edgar B. Smith, of Detroit (dem.); attorney-general, Royal A. Hawley, of Ionia (silver rep.); land commissioner, Carlton Peck, of Lapeer (pop.); superintendent of public instruction, Mrs. Florence Renkes, of Barry county (silver rep.); member state board of education, George E. Willetts, of Calhoun county (pop.).

There was an effort to defeat the nomination of Mrs. Renkes, on the ground that a woman is not eligible under the state constitution, but Fred A. Baker, of Detroit, a well-known authority on constitutional law, decided in the lady's favor, and her nomination was made unanimous.

At the session of the silver republican convention the committee on resolutions presented a money plank which declared for both silver and gold money to be coined in the ratio of sixteen to one, the issue of all money, metallic or paper, by the government. The resolutions were adopted.

Head of the Ticket.

[Justin R. Whiting, the democratic candidate for governor, was born in Bath, Steuben county, N. Y., February 18, 1847, and has lived in Michigan ever since he was two years old. He attended the common schools in St. Clair, and had a course in the state university, and then settled down in St. Clair to engage in mercantile pursuits. He was originally a republican, in 1876 became a greenbacker and developed into a democrat. He was mayor of St. Clair one term, served a term in the state senate, and was twice elected to congress. He was the fusion candidate for lieutenant governor two years ago, when a flip of a penny decided that he should have second place, while Charles R Sligh should be at the head of the ticket. He thinks the financial question is still a live issue and is an earnest and sincere advocate of free silver.]

Mrs. Renkes Hesitates.

Grand Rapids, June 27.—Mrs. Flora B. Renkes, of Hastings, who was nominated for superintendent of public instruction by the fusion convention last week, in a letter to a friend here says she did not want the nomination and may not accept. She has written the attorney general for his opinion as to her constitutional eligibility and will not decide what to do until his ruling is received.

Gold Men Displeased.

Grand Rapids, June 24.—The sound money democrats do not take kindly to the ticket nominated by the state convention Wednesday. Chairman W. R. Shelby will call a meeting of his executive committee soon with the view to calling a state convention to nominate a straight ticket.

Remarkable Deadlock Ends.

Kalamazoo, June 24.—The most remarkable deadlock congressional convention ever held in Michigan terminated Thursday night on the three hundred and thirty-third formal ballot in the nomination of Rev. Washington Gardner, of Albion, by the republicans of the Third district. He had been high man from the first vote, and every possible combination was attempted to defeat him. State Insurance Commissioner Miller D. Campbell was sprung as a dark horse, but could gain no ground. Finally Branch county deserted the Hillsdale banker, F. M. Stewart, and gave Gardner its solid vote. Mr. Gardner is now secretary of state. He has twice been defeated for the nomination for congress after heated contests, and strenuous efforts are to be made this fall to redeem the old Third, which formerly gave Julius C. Burrows 12,000 majority, but which is now represented in congress by Albert M. Todd, the monopoly and trust fighter.

Renominated.

Grand Rapids, June 23.—The fifth district republican congressional convention was held Wednesday, with E. M. Allen, Ionia county, as chairman. It was a foregone conclusion what would be done, and William Alden Smith was nominated for a third term with a swoop. Resolutions were adopted in addition to a hearty indorsement of Mr. Smith.

Local Option Defeated.

Niles, June 28. — The voters of Berrien county on Monday sounded the knell to the attempted local option movement by burying the proposed measure beneath a majority which, it is now estimated, will reach nearly 2,000. The three important cities of the county, Niles, Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, overwhelmingly voted "wet" and the rural townships in many cases followed suit. The campaign was a most exciting one, the "no license" people employing prominent prohibition speakers from all over the country. The women took a prominent part in the election, hauling voters to the polls and serving hot lunches. The cause attributed for the defeat of the measure is the active work of business men who feared that the adoption of the no-license law would kill their trade, especially in the northern part of the county among the summer resorts. It is not expected that another attempt will soon be made to carry local option in this county.

MICHIGAN MEN LEAVE.

Fourteen Hundred More Volunteers Are Now on Their Way to the Front.

Norfolk, Va., June 24. — Thursday marked the departure of the Michigan troops for the seat of war. The monster ship Yale, formerly the ocean liner Paris and now an auxiliary cruiser, weighed anchor at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon and left for Santiago. It left alone, but it is more than likely the cruiser Newark will convey it south, as the latter is supposed to be somewhere near Hatteras, as is also the torpedo boat destroyer Yankton, which may act as a scout. The troops comprise twelve companies in one regiment of the Twenty-third Michigan volunteer infantry and three companies of the Thirty-fourth, about 1,400 men in all. It is known as Gen. Duffield's brigade. The officers were told that they must send their horses home, and when the westerners in blue left their camp everyone marched, from colonel down. Through the woods they came until they reached the outskirts of Alexandria town, where it seemed the whole populace turned out to greet them. One hundred and thirty wagons pulled by mules brought along the luggage and equipments, and about two hours were consumed in placing it aboard the steamers Norfolk and Washington, which lay in waiting. The tired troopers stretched themselves on the floors of the saloon and many were asleep before the boats passed Indian Head. Each man was provided with a woolen and rubber blanket and a half shelter tent, tent pins and poles, spare underwear, canteen cup, plate, knife, fork, spoon, Springfield rifle, 100 rounds of ammunition, haversack, and six days' traveling rations. When the troops left Alexandria Secretary of War Alger was on the pier to see them off. He made a short speech, in which he wished them luck in their patriotic undertaking. The Thirty-third is in command of Col. C. L. Boynton, and the Thirty-fourth Col. Peterman.

To Organize a Horse Guard.

Grand Rapids, June 28.—The state military board has decided to organize a regiment of eight companies for a home guard. It will be necessary for the eight companies now at the front to resign from the state service to permit reorganization under the law. Two Detroit companies and one each at Ann Arbor, Calumet and Monroe have done so. Companies have already been organized to be sworn into the state service at these places.

Major Purinton Dead.

Coldwater, June 29.—Maj. David B. Purinton died at his home here Monday night at the age of 69 years. He won his title by brave services during the civil war. He was postmaster here during President Lincoln's administration, and has been supervisor from his ward continuously for 30 years.

Lightning Kills a Girl.

Marquette, June 25.—During the severe storm Friday afternoon Ada, the 11-year-old daughter of John Steen, a farmer in Cherry Creek, south of this city, was instantly killed by lightning. The bolt came down the chimney and ran along the stovepipe, under which the girl was standing.

A Candidate for Senator.

Detroit, June 26. — Albert Pack has formally announced himself a candidate for United States senator. He says it will be a fight to the finish. The campaign is fairly opened, and he proposes to do everything honorable in his power to win the necessary votes to capture the prize.

Issued a Requisition.

Lansing, June 25.—Gov. Pingree has issued requisition papers for William Morris, who escaped from the Marquette prison in 1896, and is now under arrest at Cosselton, Wis.

Paw Paw, Mich., June 29.—Congressman E. L. Hamilton, of Niles, has been renominated by acclamation by the republicans of the Fourth Michigan congressional district.

Dr. Miles' Nervine

A REMEDY FOR THE

Effects of Tobacco.

THE excessive use of tobacco, especially by young men is always injurious and undoubtedly shortens life materially. Mr. Ed. C. Ebgen, compositor on the Contra-Costa News, Martinez, Cal., writes; "I have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and received much benefit from it. I was troubled with nervousness, dizzy spells and sleeplessness, caused by the use of tobacco and stimulants. I took Dr. Miles' Nervine with marvelously good results, allaying the dizziness, quieting the nerves, and enabling me to sleep and rest, proving in my case a very beneficial remedy." Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is especially adapted to restoring the nervous system to its normal condition under such circumstances. It soothes, heals and strengthens.

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address,

The Horrors of Rheumatism.

A woman's account of torture which lasted three years; of her struggles against the dreadful disease, and the good fortune that crowned her efforts.

Such suffering as rheumatism causes the victims upon whom it fastens itself is almost unendurable.

Sufferers from the worst types of this terrible disease will supply the missing horrors in the following story from real life.

Those who writhe under milder forms of rheumatism will be able to imagine the feelings of the tortured victim.

The only justification for making public such heart-rending details is the fact that the lesson taught will be helpful to others, pointing the way to renewed life and health to every sufferer from rheumatism.

The story is told by a woman. Her name is Mrs. Caleb Fenly; she lives in St. Paul, Ind.

This is her account:

"I am a farmer's wife. I believe my frequent exposure to the weather caused my terrible attack of rheumatism. Damp weather always aggravated it.

"My limbs would begin to swell at the ankle joints.

"This swelling would begin in the night, at times. I would awake in agony.

"Daylight would find my limbs purple in color, swollen to twice their natural size, and so racked with pain I could not bear to touch them.

"My right arm and both legs were so drawn as to be almost useless.

"My skin became dry and yellow.

"At times my limbs would pain as though millions of needles were pricking them.

"Again they would be numb and I could not feel a needle thrust into my flesh.

"I was confined to the house three years, unable to walk nearly half the time.

"After those three slow years of agony, during which I spent probably $2,000 for treatment and tried a dozen doctors, I gave up hope of any release from pain, but death.

"I was cured, completely cured, by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. They alone caused my recovery.

"The first dose gave me appetite.

"After the second dose I slept soundly, the first time within a year.

"I sent for a dozen boxes. By the time I had taken the contents of eleven boxes I felt entirely well.

"The doctor said I was cured. He was greatly impressed, and since then he has prescribed Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People for many of his patients."

Mrs. Fenly, together with her husband, made affidavit to the exact truth of the foregoing account before Notary P. N. Thomas.

The cure of the severest cases of rheumatism by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People has occurred in every state in the Union, and its power in ordinary cases is proportionately greater.

These marvelous vegetable pills go directly to the seat of the trouble. They build up a new cellular structure in the diseased parts by eliminating poisonous elements and renewing health-giving chemical forces in the blood.

They are for sale by druggists everywhere; for 50 cents a single box or $2.50 for half a dozen.

With No. 1 of Volumn XV of the Addison Courier, Editor Kempton comes out in a column editorial in which he states that he will hereafter ride the elephant. In other words he announces that hereafter the Courier instead of being a non partison sheet will advocate the principles of the Republican party. Born a republican he was called from the fold by the doctrines of prohibition affiliating with that party until its practical demise and while still claiming the same position in regard to moral reform, he now announces that he will return to his first love and whooper up for the administration and Republicanism in general, at the same time inviting those who don't like his style to come in and get their subscription money back.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

Superintendent Elliott, of the Detroit, Toledo & Milwaukee, tendered his resignation to-day, effective July 1. He intends to engage in other business. In fact, when he took hold of the property, it was generally understood that his connection with the property was of a temporary nature. Mr. Elliott has extensive business interests in the west, and his retirement from the service of the company will give him an opportunity to devote his time exclusively to this. Genuine expressions of regret were heard among railroad men at the announcement that Mr. Elliott had decided to retire from railroad work. He has always been looked upon as a railroad official of marked ability. He is a scientific operating man and a good disciplinarian. Mr. Elliott is a graduate of the Vandalia, and worked his way up from the position of brakeman. When he left the Vandalia he was superintendent of transportation.—Blade.

The board of directors have elected Chas. N. Haskell vice president of the Detroit & Lima Northern. The action was taken yesterday at a meeting in New York and is a substantial expression of the appreciation of the work Mr. Haskell has been doing for the property. He will have full charge of the operation and construction of the road.

Mr. Haskell has been the moving spirit of the Lima Northern and, in fact, not only built the road, but financed the deal. If all of the expectations of the Lima Northern aee realized, Mr. Haskell will take place among the leading railroad men of the country.—Blade.

New agent for D. & L. N. Ry., at Dundee, Agent J. H. Krause has been transferred to the office of the Road Master at Tecumseh, and is succeeded here by A. D. Hitchcock. Latter is an experienced railroad agent, being a member of the Hitchcock family of railroaders of Milan, was agent for a term of years at Carleton, and for past few years been employed at different points on the F. &. P. M. road. Mr. Krause was a most efficient agent, and enjoyed a popularity among our citizens and patrons of the road.—Dundee Representative.

Two of the elegant new cars, the first of the installment of the 10 to be used on the Detroit, Ypsilanti & Ann Arbor electric railway have arrived. The cars are the handsomest in this section of the country and were constructed with a view to the comfort of patrons. They are 44 feet long by 8 feet 9 inches in width. The seats are upholstered in plush. The woodwork is of quartered oak and the windows fitted with French plate glass. The new cars will go into commission at once.—A. A. Argus.

On account of the 4th of July the D. T. &. M. R. R. will sell excursion tickets at the rate of one fare for the round trip from all stations. Tickets on sale July 2, 3 and 4 and will be good to return up to and including July 5th. Tickets to points on connecting lines, sold on application. See nearest D. T. & M. agent.

H. S. Reardon has been elected a successor to Supt. N. K. Elliott of the D. T. &. M. and will take his place today. Mr. Reardon comes from Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis, is a railroader of long experience and like his predecessor has risen from a brakeman to his present position.

In the suit of Mary Fleuher vs the Lake Shore railway, a verdict was given in favor of the plaintiff awarding her $6,900. Her husband as stated a week ago was killed by a freight train here in '93. The case of course will be appealed.

The many friends of Auditor A. L. Richmond will be pleased to learn that he has been appointed Assistant Treasurer and Purchasing Agent of the D. T. & M. road. A well deserved promotion.

Mrs. A. E. Kennedy, of Toledo, O., has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen this week.

E. G. Slayton was a Detroit visitor Sunday.

W. S. Allen was in Lima on business Tuesday.

Carl Haskell spent Sunday visiting in Detroit.

Enroute to Alaska.—Letter No. 6. In Camp on Lake Bennett.

We are still here in camp waiting for the ice to go out so that we can go down the Lake. We have our boat finished and are all ready and will start when we can go as far as Lake Tagish, which is about 3 miles below the foot of this lake. The ice is now out of Lake Bennett from the head to about 2 miles below our camp and there were perhaps 100 boats went down by here yesterday and today; but they had to stop just below us and camp again along the beach. I have just seen a man who came up from Lake Tagish today and he said the ice was so solid down there that they were drawing loads over it with horses yet and if that is the case I don't think we need be in a hurry to start.

I wish you could see our boat for we feel pretty proud over it. It is 24 feet long over all, 3 1-2 feet wide on bottom and 5 1-2 on top and 2 1-2 feet deep and pointed on both ends. We have deck over the bow for about 6 feet back, have a mast and sail and everything in pretty good shape, we think, for taking the standing timber and whipsawing it out and finishing up a boat and by greenhorns at that. Some of the men who have seen it can't believe but what we are experienced carpenters or boat-builders, and that this is our first attempt at ship-building. Boats not as good as ours they are asking from $150 to $200 for along the lake, so you see it paid us pretty well to build our own, if it was pretty hard work. Fred and I sawed the lumber and Mac and I built the boat. Fred has been laid up with a cut foot since about a week ago. He was doing the cooking and while chopping wood he cut his foot. We were working on the boat, which is about 20 rods from the tent, when Fred called to me to come there and something in the tone of his voice made me think that he had cut himself for I had heard him chopping a few minutes before and so I hurried down there and sure enough he had cut a gash in the top of his left foot about 1 1-2 inches long; it bled pretty freely but we washed it up and took 3 or 4 stitches in the cut and did it up and it seems to be getting along all right. He was able to hobble up to the boat today and take a look at it for the first time. This is the first accident or sickness of any kind we have had since we started and we are glad this was no worse. I have had to do double duty the most of the time since the accident do the cooking and work on the boat too but I don't think I am losing any flesh over it if my appetite is anything to judge by. Fred thinks he is able to attend to the cooking again how. We take turns cooking; each cooks one week. I don't think it would be safe for one to cook more than a week at a time for fear of endangering our health or that our stomachs would rebel.

Mac and I took a walk up the lake about two miles to what is called the Cove last evening to take a look at the boats along the shore and they were a sight. There were perhaps 200 boats between our camp and the Cove; the most of them were finished and in the water and others partly finished along the shore. Then there was considerable lumber sawed out where they had not started to build yet. There were boats from the nice trim little canoe to the scow and log raft; some of the boats were regular freaks in shape, they resemble a dry goods box and I think would be no safer to take a trip in down these lakes and rivers. Our boat compared very favorably with the best of the boats we saw. When we got up to the Cove we found a dance going on and we looked on for some time and enjoyed it immensely. It was all free and the dance hall was a large scow with a floor laid over the top, which stood out on the beach. They were rather short on ladies as there were only five but they were plenty long on men for there must have been 200 or 300 sitting around on boats, work benches, lumber piles, logs and the ground. The caller was an artist in his line; here is a call I remember he gave in one change "Halymend left, hook onto yer pardner, once and a half 'round and keep right on booking," and the dancers understood him and so went through with grand right and left. It was not a high toned dress affair but they all seemed to enjoy themselves. The ladies had on short dresses and some wore caps and others were bareheaded and the men just wore anything they happened to have been working in, some had on striped mackinaw suits and others jumper and overalls stuck into high topped laced miners' boots and most of them wore the typical cowboy hat and most of them have not had a hair cut or shave since they started on this trip I think. Taken all together it was a very unique sight and one long to be remembered and hard to duplicate. The little cove dotted with many boats and the beach and along the edge of the timber with white tents, and the snow capped spruce covered mountains for a back ground made a very pretty picture. There was something else that I almost forgot to mention and that is "and the skeeters were buzzing around." Speaking of mosquitoes I will say they are here and they are old whoppers and very hungry too. I think they roosted in the snow banks last winter or else they hatched out there early this spring for they were after us when we were whipsawing two or three weeks ago and there were snow banks all around. We also saw flies and bugs of all descriptions and even bumble bees. Yesterday Fred claimed he saw a humming bird around our tent but I told him that his imagination got the better of him and that it was only a large sized mosquito that he saw. Well it is ten o'clock and bed time so I will retire; I am writing this in the tent without a light and it is almost as light as day. I will try and write some more tomorrow evening.

Thursday, May 26, '98.

Well we launched our boat today and she floated like a duck and leaked but little and will not leak at all after it has been in the water a short time. We think we will take a trip up to Bennett (which is 20 miles from here and at the head of the lake) Saturday or Sunday, now that we have a boat and it will be a good chance to try her and send out our letters, and perhaps get some also. I have received only one from you so far and that was of Mar. 31st. When I want to hear from home I have to get out that same old letter and read it over. This has been a very warm day for this country and the time of year, the thermometer registered 84 in the shade at 5 o'clock p. m. It was so warm that some young fellows camped near us went in bathing. They went out on their scow and dove off into the ice cold water, in fact there was lots of ice a short distance away, they didn't lose any time in getting out; I think it was quite a surprise to them when they struck the water. I admired their courage but not their judgement.

Sunday, May 29, '98.

Friday morning when we got up we found a heavy gale blowing down the lake and we went down to the beach around in a little cove to see how our boat was and she was gone; evidently she had broken away in the night when the wind came up and drifted on down the lake. Mac and I ate breakfast as soon as we could and started down the lake looking for the runaway. We were pretty sure we would find her within a mile or so in some of the coves but we didn't and so we kept on travelling. We found a good many boats that had broken away in the night but none of them was ours. The ice had broken up and blown over on the other shore what had not gone on down the river at the foot of the lake so we tho't it possible that our boat might be down there. We went on down but could find no trace of her; at the foot of the lake we borrowed a field glass and took a look at the other shore, which is 3 or 4 miles away, and as the lake makes a short turn here boats would drift to the other side. We could see several boats drifted up on the other shore and was sure we would find ours there. We got ferried across the river at the foot of the lake and went up the beach on the other side and about two miles up the Watson river comes in but we were lucky in finding some campers there who took us across in their boat. We went up the beach several miles and found several boats but not ours so we turned about and started back for camp. It was a very long hard tramp and all the more so because it had been fruitless. We had left camp at 5 o'clock in the morning and didn't get back till 9 o'clock in the evening. It must have been over 30 miles' walk and the hardest kind of walking over rocks from the size of a hen's egg to a hogshead. You cannot realize how blue we felt when we got back home that night. Almost time to go down the lakes now and our boat gone and no way to go and the most of our nails, oakum and pitch used up and even our extra lumber we had left we had laid in the bottom of the boat to take with us and the whole thing was gone and after all of our hard work and nothing on hand to build another with. We decided that some one had stolen it or we would have found some trace of it.

The next morning I told Mac I wanted to take another look, didn't want to give up yet so I borrowed a small boat of a man near here and we went across the lake and up an arm and crossed over and went down the other side and about 6 miles down we found our boat pulled out on the rocks all safe and sound and a note with it which said, "This boat found adrift by No. 109 boat." It was a very kind act for them to tow it ashore and pull it up where it would take no harm and we shall watch for No. 109 and would like to thank them if nothing more. (All boats are numbered by the mounted police and names of all passengers registered.) Well, our spirits arose at once after we found our boat; we forgot all about our hard tramp of the day before and the hard pull we had in getting there in a boat. The waves were running high over there and we had a hard time to get our boats off the rocks and get out in the lake, the waves would pick up our big boat and throw it onto the rocks; Mac got into the little boat and finally got off and I watched my chance between big waves and gave a big push and climbed aboard and we finally got together out in the lake and hitched the little one to ours and both pulled in our boat, the waves were very high but we got across the lake in about two hours by very hard pulling, we drifted about two miles. It was so rough and windy we could not pull up against the wind and waves, so we left them and walked to camp, which we reached about 11 p. m. We will have to wait for some time yet for the wind is blowing a gale yet this morning. Here comes a mail man, will have to cut this short.

Goodbye,

In some way as rumors will go it has been stated that Harry Patterson was in the military prison for stealing a box of lemons. The mistake is perhaps natural, the real culprit's name being Harry Patton. The theft was made more in the spirit of foraging than anything else and the penalty was ten days in the guard house, which sentence must have already expired.

The directors of the Lilley State Bank held a meeting Wednesday, at which the resignation of L. P. Tribou as cashier was accepted, the reason for which was Mr. Tribou's failing health. He was elected Vice President to fill the place made vacant by A. L. Brewer's death. Fred Shepard, for a number of years book keeper for the H. Brewer Company, was elected Cashier and Frank B. Bauer as assistant Cashier. L. P. Tribou has been for many years connected with this banking firm and his many friends hope that a season of rest from the confinement and responsibilities of business life will quickly restore him to his former hale and hearty self. The new cashiers are both capable and reliant young men and will ably support their positions.

R. S. MOORE.

Whether the war times have aroused lots of fighting blood or not we are unable to say, but from the number of scraps the past week one might naturally think so. Two of the soldier boys who left Tuesday morning, went away with decorated countenances, the effects of the other fellow's fists. Monday, Sam Montgomery applied some not very pleasing epithets to conductor Pat Glennon and was promptly put to sleep by an upper cut in the jaw. He was some time coming to, but the lesson was undoubtedly beneficial and well merited.

Elmer Lockwood was driving a fiery equine, attached to a buggy, along Cummins street Sunday forenoon when the brute thought that he was afraid of railways in general and engines in particular so straightway started a retreat over water hydrants, shade trees and horse blocks. The traces failed to stand the strain and Elmer went floating through the air at the end of the ribbons, eventually lighting on his ear in the road. His two children were in the rig also. The boy jumped out and was somewhat bruised; the little girl stuck to the buggy and came out as good as new. Buggy and harness are laid up for repairs and an expert trainer has been taking the kinks out of his nobs—the horse.

A burglar hunt in this town is a little something out of the ordinary yet such things do occur as proven by an incident which happened here in the infant hours of last Sunday. Lynn Hardenburg went home Saturday about midnight and dropped into a hammock on the porch to finish his cigar. Just then some one in the house struck a match and Lynn beheld a man kneeling before the side-board in the dining room. He slipped quietly off the porch with visions of Spanish war in his mind and summoned Will Hicks who furnished a revolver and shortly after appeared dressed in a pair of trousers, a night shirt and a double barrelled shot gun. By this time our burglar had gone down cellar to see if the boys kept any mint julip, so Lynn rushed in and locked the cellar door, thinking to bottle up the knight of the jimmy as Schley did Cervera, but a crash of glass told the besiegers that trapped was coming out by window exit and they promptly met him. A command to halt, punctuated by a pistol shot failed to stop the thief and then the whole silence of the night was ripped up the back by the melodious roar of Hicks shot gun. This touched the burglars feelings likewise his anatomy and the barefoot brigade started down town, where the bird was safely caged. Dr. Tefft was called and dressed the wounds where six No. 4 shot had found resting places. The captured man had gained entrance to the house by prying up a window with a jimmy, left his shoes on the kitchen table and very carefully unlocked all the doors that he might easily leavr in any direction. A search of his person revealed two jack knives, a razor, a towel and two cakes of toilet soap. He gave his name as Hooligan, residence Culumbus, but has since given another name. He waived examination and was bound over to the circuit court.

Letter from Chickamauga.

Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga.
June 26, 1898.

Gen. Sherman once said "War is hell." The General was no liar and he probally made the famous remark while he was "Marching Through Georgia." If I had not been taught better in my younger days no one could make me believe that there is any place hotter than Chickamauga. My simple faith in the teacher of the infant class of my childhood's Sunday school causes me to acknowledge that there is one place still hotter. The effect of the rains of last week has passed away. Again there is dust everywhere. If we could only divide the Cuba rainy season and have part of it here, things would be more bearable all 'round.

The boys of Co. C. remain in excellent health. Private Eddy is rapidly recovering from his run of fever. Once more the waltz is more popular than the quickstep.

The rumors of our breaking camp and going to the Phillipines, Puerto Rico, Cuba and other interesting places still float about but do not raise any excitement. When we go the orders will come to us direct and will not be received over the grapevine telegraph route. A number of the companies have received their recruits but Co. C.'s have not arrived, though they are expected hourly. Additional tents have been put up and everything is in readiness. Extra shoes have been issued and together with our fatigue blouses have been packed away in the company's chests. Shelter tents and rifles have also been issued and things look much like a move. At any rate the 31st is as near ready to go to the front as any other regiment at Chickamauga.

Gov. Pingree and Inspector General Case came to camp last Monday. They were refused admittance through the guard line and had to go to the guard house where they were recognized by the officer of the day. They remained as guests of Col. Gardner for two days and then left for Tampa and Washington. On Tuesday morning occurred the first regimental review in honor of the Governor's presence. In the afternoon short and characteristic speeches were made by both visitors and Col. Gardner. The boys felt very cheerful under the influence of the good natured jollying and repeatedly cheered the speakers. The Governor promised to use his influence to secure the improved Blake rifle for this regiment as well as for the new regiment now forming in Michigan.

Our grub has much improved since the first two weeks. Soft bread, onions and fresh beef are regularly issued and in consequence the health of the boys is much better.

Thanks to the efforts of Alva Spayde and Jas. Henderson another box of good things came to hand during the past week. The box of reading matter also showed up and the boys had a feast of both body and mind. A large Y. M. C. A. tent has been erected within a hundred feet of Co. C.'s street and is being liberally patronized by the Michiganders. The tent was purchased by residents of southern Michigan and is especially for the use of the 31st.

All the hospital cases are improving and the sick list is daily growing smaller. The hot weather is terrific but we are getting used to it and can stand it now. On Friday it was so warm that afternoon drill was postponed until 6 p. m. Yesterday the third battalion was captured by the first in a sham battle so quickly that it made our heads swim. If it had been actual war Co. C. would never have returned to Tecumseh.

Early in the week the 1st Georgia Volunteers arrived and are camped just west of us. They are brigaded with the 31st and are as fine a lot of men as have arrived at Chickamauga.

Camp life is monotonous and does not give rise to much news. As long as we have to endure it, however, it will be a satisfaction to our friends to know that we are as comfortable as anybody in camp.

As I was about to mail this effusion a very well authenticated rumor comes to me that Puerto Rico is our destination. The report comes so straight and has so many ear marks of probibility that I believe we will go in ten days or two weeks. Of course there may be a change in orders but it is safe to say we are booked for there.

This paper on which I am writing is some so kindly sent in the box from Tecumseh by E. J. Peters. So long as the 31st is in the United States I will try and send a letter to the Herald each week. FRANK C. DUDLEY.

MARYLAND CHICKEN.

A Dish Which May Well Be Called the True Masterpiece of American Cookery.

The old-fashioned cook of Maryland had a special reputation for preparing chicken in a superior manner. Select a tender, plump young chicken. Singe, dress and cut it up as for a fricassee. Wipe each piece, season it with salt and pepper, dip each in melted butter and then lightly in sifted bread crumbs. Arrange the pieces on a baking pan and put them in a hot oven to bake. Let the chicken cook in this way for three-quarters of an hour, basting it every 15 minutes, and turn it after it has browned well on one side. While the chicken is cooking prepare corn fritters to serve with it. To make these fritters, cut off the cob a cupful of fresh corn, or if it cannot be obtained use a cupful of canned corn, drained a little and chopped. Add pepper and salt, two well-beaten eggs and also a tablespoonful of cream if canned corn is used. Add a cupful of flour and half a cupful of milk. Divide the corn fritters and fry them in butter in a very hot pan, turning them from one side when they are done to the other. Prepare a cream sauce by pouring a cupful of cream in the dripping pan in which the chicken was baked. Thicken the gravy with an even tablespoonful of butter mixed with a teaspoonful of flour. Let the gravy thus formed simmer slowly for five minutes. Season it with salt and pepper and strain it and scatter in a teaspoonful of minced parsley. Set the gravy in the oven a moment or two, then pour it over the chicken, which should be garnished.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE GINGHAM BABY.

She Is the Neatest and Most Comfortable of All the Pretty Little Maids of Summer.

The gingham baby wears a dress made of three or four different kinds of gingham. Her yoke may be plain gingham edged with a band of ribbon below which may be set out a broad ruff of figured gingham, and to the yoke of her dress can be sewed a double box plaited skirt of gingham.

The prettiest trimming for this gingham dress is wash ribbon, which comes in narrow widths at six cents a yard. Sew it around the yoke in loops that lie close together so they form a sort of ruffle. The ribbon around the neck can also be wash ribbon. If the gingham dress is washed carefully this wash ribbon will keep nice all summer, and you will have very little trouble with the dress until it is worn out.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

How to Make a Handy Kitchen Table and a Useful Cabinet from an Old Bureau.

In almost every home there are unused bureaus from broken and discarded sets of furniture. One of these bureaus can be made, at small expense, into a very convenient kitchen cabinet and table. Have the top planed off clean and smooth. This is the future kneading board. Have a cover fitted and hinged to the rear edge of the top, to turn down over the kneading-board when the latter is not in use, thus keeping it always clean. The upper bureau drawer can be left whole, but will be more convenient if cut in two and made into two drawers—one for small cooking utensils, and the other for small amounts of cooking materials, such as salt, spices, rice, tapioca, tea, coffee, etc. It can be divided into compartments to keep each article separate from its neighbor. The next two drawers are removed, with the dividing partition, making room for a closet for kettles, tin and iron dishes, molasses jug, etc. The two narrow drawers beside it are useful for other groceries, such as graham flour, sugar, cornmeal, wheat and oatmeal preparations, etc. In the illustration the lower drawer is shown removed, giving a space for tin pans, broilers and other utensils. The drawer can be retained and these articles kept in it, if preferred. Have the cabinet raised several inches from the floor, then one can stand before it and not be constantly hitting it with the feet. Other arrangements of drawers and closets can be used, suiting them to the individual needs of the housekeeper, if desired.—Webb Donnell, in Leslie's Weekly.

Danger in Perfumery.

Women who are fond of strong perfumes should remember that they are decidedly injurious to the sense of smell. By their frequent use the secretory glands of the nose and throat are overtaxed and weakened. One day the person notices that the hearing is less acute than usual, and the sense of smell seems defective. This is, of course, put down to a cold, and but little is thought of it. After a time the entire head becomes affected, and there follow throat and lung complications, which are likely to end in chronic, if not fatal, illness. Smelling salts are a prolific cause of deafness; all strong and pungent odors, particularly those which act on the secretory processes, should be avoided as far as possible.—Chicago Post.

Shape Your Finger Tips.

Every mother should begin to look to the molding of her daughter's figure long before she reaches the place "where the brook and river meet." After womanhood is obtained it is almost an impossibility to interfere with nature's plans. Proper exercises for developing all parts of the body should be given, and thimbles should be worn on all the fingers, at least an hour a day. This prevents the nials from broadening at the base, a distinct mark of the uncultured. Nothing except fencing or rowing develops the chest and arms like sweeping. It is the best thing for a woman, but she must put on gloves to protect her hands, and tie a towel over her hair.

CHICKEN A LA BARBACUE.

An Appetizing and [illegible] Spring and Summer Dinner for Northern Housewives to Try.

Southern people know every [illegible] which can be made. The northern housewives, unfortunately, are limited to plain boiled, roasted and fried chicken, but here is something for the northern housewife to try which may be new to her. Take a fat, tender spring chicken of roasting size. Clean [illegible] wash well and salt inside and out. Sprinkle over with flour quite heavily. Place in a kettle with heart and liver a [illegible] two cups of boiling water. Let it boil well, as you would for a pot roast and baste [illegible] When about half done, or so that it scarcely resists the fork, add one-half a [illegible] of vinegar, boil until done and take out.

Chop the liver and heart and serve in the gravy. Chicken is delicious cooked this way and served cold. The rich gravy can be used as you would for a pot roast, and baste easily removed when the gravy is cold. Veal can be barbecued and the vinegar will found to take away the dry insipid taste which veal has when roasted plain.

The United States monitor Monadnock and the collier Nero sailed from San Francisco to join Admiral Dewey's squadron at Manila.

Cable news direct from Cuba says there has been sharp fighting on land near Baiquiri, and that the ships have kept up a vigorous bombardment of the hills, forcing the Spaniards to retreat.

The Manila Railroad company, having offices in London, received a cable message saying that the Philippine insurgents have captured all but the inner city of Manila. This they will not attack until the arrival of American troops.

The United States troops in eastern Cuba formed a camp five miles inland from Baiquiri, where they were massing for the attack on Santiago. In connection with the landing of troops the American warships shelled all the villages between Santiago and Guantanamo.

SATURDAY, JUNE 25.

Gen. [illegible]iles will accompany a second army to Cuba. This force is to consist of 18,000 men.

Official assurances have been received that Germany intends to be strictly neutral in regard to the Philippines.

The government has purchased eight merchant vessels at a cost of $4,000,000 to carry supplies to the armies of invasion.

Gen. Shafter's command was reported to have advanced westward to the town of Juragua, which was captured without a battle. The Spaniards retreated toward Santiago.

Admiral Sampson sent word to Washington that Lieut. Hobson and his companions were all well and that they were confined in the city of Santiago, four miles from Morro castle.

It is announced in Washington that if the Spanish Cadiz squadron passes into the Suez canal a powerful American squadron will start at once across the Atlantic, enter the Mediterranean and bombard the Spanish seaports.

The American flag was flown from the top of the Altares mountains, back of Baiquiri, Cuba, amid wild enthusiasm The men cheered, the warships let loose their sirens and the bands played the "Star Spangled Banner."

In a fight within five miles of Santiago 1,000 men of the Tenth cavalry and Roosevelt's rough riders engaged 2,000 Spanish infantry. The Spaniards sustained heavy loss and were driven back to the city. The Americans had 13 killed and 50 wounded.

Admiral Sampson sent a message to Admiral Cervera demanding the surrender of Santiago and giving notice in case of refusal that the American forces would reduce the defenses and capture the city. The Spanish admiral refused to consider the matter of surrender.

SUNDAY, JUNE 26.

It is said the Spaniards have abandoned Morro castle and concentrated their forces in Santiago.

Fifteen regiments stationed at Chattanooga, among them the Third and Fifth Illinois, have been ordered to Cuba and will leave this week.

Details of Friday's fighting near Santiago show that the Americans were caught in an ambush, but that they administered a crushing defeat to the Spaniards, killing hundreds of them, and putting the rest to flight.

MONDAY, JUNE 27.

Admiral Camara's squadron has reached Port Said, at the entrance to the Suez canal.

The third expedition to the Philippines, comprising 5,000 men, embarked at San Francisco on five transports.

Two British ships sailed from Philadelphia for Manila with nearly 6,000 tons of coal for Admiral Dewey's fleet.

The powers are said to be waiting for the fall of Santiago, when they will urge peace on Spain and the United States.

The army under Gen. Shafter is almost face to face with the Spanish forces at Santiago and a battle seems certain before the week is out.

Gen. Wheeler reports 22 Americans were killed and 70 or 80 wounded at Sevilla. The Spanish loss is believed to be greater, 39 dead Spaniards having been found.

TUESDAY, JUNE 28.

Gen. Blanco declared that all malcontents in Havana would be shot and terror reigned in the city.

The Spanish government has issued an order calling out 26,000 more men, the last classes of reserves, for service in Spain.

The third expedition to the Philippines, 4,000 men, under command of Gen. Arthur McArthur, departed from San Francisco.

Upon the application of the United States consul orders were issued by the Egyptian government forbidding the coaling at Port Said of Admiral Camara's fleet.

Admiral Dewey is expected to demand the surrender of Manila as soon as he has the army with him. The Charleston and the first of the troops were due there.

The administration has issued orders for the formation of an eastern squadron, under Commodore Watson, which is directed to sail as soon as possible for the coast of Spain.

The advance post of the American army of invasion was reported to be 4½ miles from the city of Santiago. The Spaniards are strongly fortified at that point and a heavy engagement was thought to be imminent.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29.

Great haste is shown at Washington in preparing Commodore Watson's expedition against the coast of Spain.

Orders were issued for the departure to Cuba of another large army expedition from Tampa, Fla., composed of 9,000 men.

Seventy-seven Spaniards were killed and 80 were wounded in the fight in the hills near Sevilla with Col. Wood's and Col. Young's commands.

President McKinley issued a proclamation extending the blockade of Cuba to the southern coast from Cape Frances to Cape Cruz and also blockading San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Lieut. Blue, of the Suwanee, made another trip ashore, almost up to the enemy's batteries at Santiago, and obtained valuable information for the use of Admiral Sampson.

Officials in Washington believe Camara's fleet will soon return to Cadiz. Plans are laid to pursue him if he goes forward, the intention being crush him between Dewey's and Watson's ships.

The crop outlook in the vicinity of Reading is favorable for an abundant harvest for everything except hay. The canker worm has destroyed two orchards just south of Reading and they look as brown as the highway.

Michigan has thus far disposed of $400,000 of war bonds, and if a third call for troops is made, the $100,000 remaining of the amount authorized by the legislature may be placed on the market. If they are, there will be no difficulty about disposing of them readily, as State Treasurer Steel has subscriptions for more than $500,000 worth that he has been unable to fill.

A BIG LOT OF FLOUR.

Four Million Barrels Were Manufactured in Michigan Mills During Past Year.

Lansing, June 23.—The summer meeting of the State Millers' association was largely attended. The report of Secretary J. J. Hanshue referred to the passage by congress of the Tawney bill to prevent the adulteration of flour, and the society was congratulated upon the success of the measure which it has always favored. The secretary estimated that the product of the mills of the state for the year was 4,000,000 barrels of flour. The treasurer's report showed that the total amount of dues received since January 1 was $757.50. The disbursements have been $688.40, leaving a balance of $69.10. This is the best showing made in years.

FIVE WERE DROWNED.

Terrible Disaster to a Boating Party on the Flint River at Flushing—Five Young Lives Lost.

Saginaw, June 24.—By the capsizing of a boat in which a party of young people were rowing on Flint river at Flushing Wednesday afternoon Chauncey Cook, aged 18; Lulu Loup, aged 14; Odaline Loup, aged 16, and Mildred Packard, aged 2 years, were all drowned. Arthur Maxwell, a young man 20 years old, in attempting to rescue the party, was also drowned.

Class Day at Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, June 28.—The second day of Michigan's commencement began with the graduation exercises of the law department. Lewis L. Thompson, of Allegan, president of the class, and Robert Healy, of Fort Dodge, Ia., valedictorian, delivered the regular class orations. The latter spoke strongly for an Anglo-American alliance. Carl Theodore Storm, of Kirksville, Mo., presented a large portrait of Levi T. Griffin, a former professor, to the university as a class memorial. The same was accepted by Regent George A. Farr. In the evening the social side of the week was begun with the senior promenade on the campus.

Bathers Drowned.

Mount Pleasant, June 27.—Thomas Francisco, Sidney Casler and Harvey Francisco, father of the first named, were drowned in the Chippewa river Saturday. The two boys began to sink together while bathing. The elder Francisco plunged in to save them and all drowned together.

Sturgis, June 27.—Charles Murdock, of this city, aged 19, was drowned in Adams lake while bathing.

Death of Victor P. Collier.

Battle Creek, June 29.—Victor P. Collier, a venerable politician, who has probably held more public offices than any other man in Michigan, died Tuesday. He was state senator, 1864 to 1866; state treasurer, 1871 to 1874; regent to the University of Michigan, 1878 to 1885. He was president of the First national bank from 1863 to 1895, and had amassed a great fortune.

THE GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduces the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduces only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Tainter, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment is headquarters of the world for Talking Machines and Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

TWO LAND LEVELERS.

Neither of Them Is Patented, Yet Both Do the Work as Well as the Most Intricate Devices.

Land should be graded down to smoothness before planting to insure profitable and uniform crops. This is necessary where irrigation is practiced, to secure proper moisture and equal distribution of water, and where the rainfall is depended on, ridges will not get enough water, while the lower places will have too much. The best plan is to plow a few acres and level as soon as possible, to move the soil easily and grade the surface to hold the moisture. I have tried patent devices, logs, planks and other leveling processes, but the most satisfactory results have been obtained from home-made graders. They cost almost nothing and can be made quickly by any man who can handle a saw, hammer and nails, and can be replaced every season if old ones are destroyed. Neither of them are patented, and no man can exact a royalty for their manufacture and use.

The cheapest device consists of a small log or pole, about five feet long and six to eight inches in diameter, notched at either end to fasten a rope or chain, and having a three-foot board nailed to the top and dragging behind. Two horses can be quickly hitched by taking the doubletree and clevis from the plow and attaching to the chain or rope. The driver stands on the log, throwing his weight on either side or stepping back on the board as required. A field may be leveled by driving round or by crossing back and forth. Furrows can be filled and ridges leveled by dragging across and over them. This is made of two-inch slabs or planks, for small pieces of land containing few clods or stones.

The other leveler, which costs more money and requires greater skill in making, will fill the demand for larger areas, and do all that any ordinary machine will. This is made of two-inch slabs or planks, and should be bolted at the three corners. It is A-shaped, and made for rough, hard work. I use two pieces of plank, eight inches wide and two inches thick, about ten feet in length, and another board about seven feet long. The lower edges are cut down to about one-half inch by an adz or drawing knife, then bolted together, the crosspiece at the back being only six inches in width. A piece of wire or board nailed across on either side give strength to the crosspiece, which is necessary in mashing clods, digging out rocks and roots and dragging the weight of mounds and furrows of earth found too high. A short ten-inch board nailed on the center makes a suitable standing place for the driver, who shifts his position according to necessity. I use this for filling ditches and dead furrows, breaking down weeds and cornstalks and smoothing the ridges and knots of new land. The horses may be hitched to a hook or clevis bolted on the front.—Joel Shomaker, in Farm and Fireside.

PRACTICAL FARM HINTS.

Stick to that resolution to keep an account book for the year 1898.

If you have not yet introduced that new blood into the poultry yard, do so at once.

A row of cedar trees just north of the house, running east and west, is a great protection.

We make plenty of resolves and say what we will do in the future, but the needy time finds us unprepared.

A few thrifty plants well cared for cheer the farmer's sitting-room and add pleasure to the life of the most deserving class of people.

We still have sweet potatoes for table use; they are easily kept if handled with care, kept dry and in a warm place, and are greatly appreciated.

Too much corn is carried out into the hog lot and dumped down into the mud. If it were shelled and put into troughs it would be mixed with less dirt and be more palatable. I am convinced that more unhealthy hogs are produced by filth than anything else.—Rural World.

AN EVERGREEN HEDGE.

When Properly Cared For It Is a Thing of Beauty and an Ornament That Always Pleases.

Many people like a screen of evergreen trees as a windbreak around some of the farm buildings, and others fancy a few of them in a clump or standing singly as ornaments or shades around the grounds, yet many who set them find fault with them after they have been growing a few years, because the lower limbs grow rusty or die out entirely, and must be cut away, leaving the trunk exposed, and perhaps destroying their usefulness as a protection against the wind, which seems to, or, in fact, does, come under the branches that remain with more force than it would blow if the trees were not there. We know of but one remedy for this, and that is the use of the pruning knife.

Cut back the top each year about two-thirds of the growth it has made, and cut the ends of the upper limbs so as to keep the whole tree in a pyramidal form. Then thin out a few limbs near the bottom, that the sun may shine into it a little, and the lower limbs will keep up their growth of green, and others will spread out to fill the spaces where limbs were removed. The hemlock lends itself kindly to this treatment and should be used oftener than it is.

But whatever variety may be used, they should be set far enough apart so that the limbs will fairly meet without crossing when they have been set a few years. We have seen them set so closely together that at four or five years old they met, and then every other one was cut out, and they were expected to spread out to fill the gap. This was the intention when they were planted, as the owner could not wait for his hedge or windbreak. But the result was not satisfactory. They had acquired the habit of upright growth, being unpruned, and did not spread as he expected.

If they had been set twice as far apart at first and cut back at the top they would have filled the space fully in but a little more time than at the half distance, and much more thoroughly than they ever did after being thinned. Such a hedge where land is not too valuable may be "a thing of beauty and a joy" for a great many years if properly cared for, but if neglected or improperly treated it may be an eyesore before it has ever served the purpose for which it was intended.—American Cultivator.

COVERING POTATOES.

A Simple Implement, of Home Manufacture, Which Does the Work Neatly and Effectively.

Our illustration shows a homemade potato coverer that is very simple in construction. The two sides approach each other toward the rear ends, thus bringing the two sides directly across each of two rows lying side by side.

POTATO COVERER.

When furrowing these rows let the earth be turned outward in each of the two rows to be covered by the machine. This will result in drawing the earth back over the seed, and will not ridge it up between the rows. The furrows can be made in sets of two each, for this purpose. The horse goes between the rows and the handles permit one to draw back over the seeds just enough of the soil to cover them properly.—American Agriculturist.

Peas for the Orchard.

There is no grain that can be profitably grown in the orchard except the pea. A summer growth of buckwheat may not do any injury, but it does not enrich the soil even when plowed under, as does the pea crop. Besides, the pea vines lie close on the ground, and their large leaves shade it just as it needs be shaded during the hot, dry weather of July and August. Large as its leaves are, the pea vine takes very little moisture from the soil. Usually its leaves are wet with dew in the night, which runs off and fertilizes the soil below, and also keeps it moist. If the peas are sown late and not cut, but allowed to lie on the ground and be fed off by hogs, there is a very material gain in soil fertility over leaving the land uncropped through the season.

Tobacco Dust for Plants.

It is doubtful if there is another cheap, non-poisonous insecticide so useful to the plant grower of whatever country or station. Freely used it is helpful on every hand. But there are differences. There is a grade of this stuff, perhaps made from the stems rather than the leaves, which will not cling to anything to which it is applied, unless an application of water precedes that of the dust. It is coarse for "dust," too. This is not nearly so good for general use as the soft, clinging dust that will smother out the aphides, giving them short shrift. The drier, coarser kind is subject to waste in application often.—American Gardening.

Poultry and Plum Trees.

It is a good plan to scatter trash, with a little oats and corn in it, among the plum trees, where the chickens can scratch at it early in the morning. A flock of chickens can destroy more destructive insects than all the concoctions ever made. This scattering should commence two or three weeks before the trees are in bloom, and continue until the plums are as large as peas. Plum trees should always be planted in groups. For one thing, they fertilize each other, and the industry mentioned above can be followed with ease. It is well known that nature plants her plums in thickets.—E. B. Heaton, in Farmers' Review.

SLAVERY MADE ORATORS.

Power of a Great Cause to Make All Men Eloquent.

Thomas Wentworth Higginson, soldier, author and gentleman, contributes a charming autobiographical sketch to the Atlantic Monthly in an article entitled "On the Outskirts of Public Life." In this sketch he relates many incidents and experiences of his literary and public life.

"Living in a university city," he says, "I am occasionally asked by students how they can best train themselves for public speaking, and I always begin with one bit of counsel, based on half a century's experience: 'Enlist in a reform.' Engage in something which you feel for the moment so unspeakably more important than yourself as wholly to dwarf you, and the rest will come. No matter what it is—tariff or free trade, gold standard or silver, even communism or imperialism—the result is the same as to oratory, if you are only sincere. Even the actor on the dramatic stage must fill himself with his part or he is nothing, and the public speaker on the platform must be more than a dramatic actor to produce the highest effects. There is an essential thing wanting to the eloquence of the men who act a part, but given a profound sincerity and there is something wonderful in the way it overcomes the obstacles of a hoarse voice, a stammering tongue or a feeble presence.

"On the anti-slavery platform, where I was reared, I cannot remember a really poor speaker. As Emerson said: 'Eloquence was dog cheap' there. The cause was too real, too vital, too immediately pressing upon heart and conscience for the speaking to be otherwise than alive. It carried men away as with a flood."

THE SELF-POSSESSED LAD.

He Took Occasion to Correct the Head Member of the Firm.

Just where the lad came from is not apparent, but he was rather a crisp looking youngster of 14, small for his size and foxy about the corners of the eyes and mouth, says the Detroit Free Press. He entered the office of a wholesale house on Larned street east and approached the head of the establishment, who was in bad humor about something.

"Do you want a boy here?" asked the applicant for a position.

"No, we don't want a boy here," responded the merchant in the ordinary manner of a man in bad humor.

"Are you sure, sir?"

"Of course I am. Don't I know my business? Get out!"

"What's that sitting on the stool over there?" asked the caller very politely and without being at all disturbed by his reception.

"He's our office boy," replied the merchant, rather taken aback.

"You want him here, don't you?"

"Of course."

"He's a boy, isn't he?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, sir, you are mistaken when you say you don't want a boy here. What you really intended saying was that you didn't need me here. Good-morning, sir!" And before the merchant could pull himself together this remarkable youth had got out and was lost in the crowd on the street.

GLASS SKATES.

They Are the Latest Feature in Ice Rinks This Winter.

The newest feature of interest in the New York ice rinks is the use of glass skates. It is found that skates with glass runners are far better, both for speed and ease in gliding for pleasure, than are the skates with metal runners, and several pairs are now being used in one of the metropolitan rinks. The inventor has succeeded in reducing the glass to a hardness that insures an edge which practically never becomes blunt. The tempering process remains a secret, but it is a fact that severe contact with hard ice does not fracture the glass. To look at these skates one would not suppose they were made of anything else than metal, for the runners are always colored in order to disguise the substance of which they are made. The coloring process is arbitrary, and tints in the case of ladies' skates are always made to correspond with the colors of the wearer's costume. The runners of these glass skates are attached directly to an especially made shoe which laces from the heel up the back. The combination not only gives a skate which is perfectly easy in motion, but the high shoe stiffens the ankle to an extent which greatly aids in the enjoyment and adds to the safety of the exercise.

Strange Spanish Custom.

In some places in Spain, among them Vergara, where Golli, the anarchist, was garroted, an old custom prevails of arresting the executioner immediately after the execution and charging him with murder before the court of justice. "Yes, I killed a man," answers the executioner, "but I did it in the name of the law, for the benefit of society, and in obedience to the commands of your honor." Then the court discharges him, saying that justice had been done.

Prayers for Columbus.

Prof. Park, of Andover, figures rather amusingly in the reminiscences of the late Prof. Schaff, just published. In 1842 Schaff, being a privat-docent at Berlin, introduced Park to his German friends, among the rest to Kahnis. He relates that, under the continuous pelting of Park's questions, Kahnis finally exclaimed, in despair: "God forgive Christopher Columbus for discovering America!"

Alaska Traveling Extraordinary.

The following account of the proper way of reaching the Klondike is taken from an Australian paper: "The real starting point for the Klondike is Spokane. There the traveler takes a canoe, by which he voyages to Vancouver, B. C. At the latter point he takes a sailing vessel direct to Dawson City."

Woman's Mysterious Ills.

Explanation of their nature by Dr. Hartman, who tells how to cure them.

women are constantly puzzled about their health. Indeed female troubles puzzle all women. Older women have experience, but few possess knowledge of the subject. The periodical suffering is painful. It is accompanied by many varying sensations that distress. How much of this is necessary is a matter of guesswork. The whole question is shrouded in professional mystery.

Dr. Hartman's book for women, called "Health and Beauty," treats these matters with delicacy, and at the same time with clearness. Write to the Pe-ru-na Medicine Company, Columbus, O., for it: it is mailed free. It is a practical printed talk to women. Dr. Hartman defines women's diseases as catarrh and tells how Pe-ru-na cures them.

Mrs. C. C. Naeve, 386 Morrison St., Portland, Ore., writes as follows:

Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

DEAR SIRS:—"I began to take Pe-ru-na when I lived in Columbus, O., in 1887, and have used it and the Man-a-lin ever since whenever I needed medicine. I have never found an equal to Pe-ru-na for regulating the menses, and before I began to take it I was never regular and always had more or less pain. I had tried many different medicines before I saw Pe-ru-na but without success."

There is nothing mysterious about the action of Pe-ru-na. It is not a "cure-all," but it cures catarrh wherever located, and there may be catarrh in any organ of the body, as all are lined with mucous membrane.

Mrs. M. C. Mehl, 504 Walnut St., Columbia, Pa., says: "I have been troubled with catarrh and a soreness in my bowels for several years. I tried everything that was recommended. I tried Pe-ru-na and am happy to say that I am now entirely well."

Dr. Hartman's advice may be had without charge by any woman who will write for it. His book on Chronic Catarrh is also mailed free. It explains the danger of local treatment. All druggists sell Pe-ru-na.

C. A. EVERETT

THE USE OF SALT.

It Is Said That Vegetable Condiments Might Well Be Substituted for It.

Contrary to the general belief that salt is an essential part of our daily diet, Capt. Poindexter, assistant surgeon in the United States army, maintains that it would be better to substitute for its use certain vegetable condiments, such as sugar, pepper, horseradish, spices, cranberry sauce, pickles, vinegar, olive oil, etc. He says that personally he has not been so situated that he could stop the use of salt absolutely, but he has reduced it to a minimum, and finds himself generally better physically and mentally, says the Atlanta Constitution. He finds in his own case that the senses of taste and hearing are apparently more active than when he used salt more freely. His hair, which had begun to fall off, has ceased doing so. His skin seems softer and clearer than before, and there are many other favorable changes. The broad hypothesis he adopts is that mineral matter as derived directly from the earth is, if not poisonous, unassimilable and unnecessary for our bodies. He holds, however, that salt is an irritable poison, causing an irritation or sensitiveness of the tissues, as it circulates through the body and consequently induces tendency to disease. In the laboratories it is found that salt has no germ-killing properties, but when placed in bouillion for the cultivation of germs the latter thrive in the mixture. He makes no allusion to the belief entertained as to the virtues of salt as a solvent when taken into the system.

A MODEST MAN.

Who Many Years Ago Received a Famous Letter from Abraham Lincoln.

There passed away in Massachusetts one day recently a man who was at one time the firm friend of such men as Webster, Douglas, Lincoln, who presided at the famous convention of 1860 which nominated the martyred president; who was called to Washington in the time of the country's greatest need; whose opinions were sought by men of influence in whatever crisis faced them, says the Philadelphia Press.

George Ashmun was one of the most modest of men. When he was chosen to preside over the convention of 1860 he consented only on condition that Gov. Trask would accompany him. He and Mr. Trask both went to Springfield with the committee to notify Mr. Lincoln and it was shortly after that that he received from the president a letter that became famous and which said: "It seems as if the question whether my first name is Abraham or Abram will never be settled; it is Abraham, and if the letter of acceptance is not yet in print, if you think fit, have my signature thereto printed 'Abraham Lincoln.'" Daniel Webster once wrote to him: "Whenever anything good comes into this house we always think of Mr. Ashmun. A fish came up the Potomac last evening higher than is usual for his species to venture. Will you be so kind as to join Mr. —— and myself at five o'clock to-day to taste him?"

ONE OF THE KAISER'S JOKES.

The German Emperor Once Made a Humorous Retort to a Toast by Telegraph.

There are many good anecdotes about the German emperor, and it must be owned that they all prove the kaiser to have no small amount of humor, says the Toronto Chronicle. The following, which comes from Mr. Ehlers, the traveler, is smarter than most. The emperor and Ehlers were college chums from Bonn, and the emperor never forgot his old college student. At Bonn on special occasions the different corps used to drink to one another, and the following set form was always used: The president of the Palatio corps raises his glass, saying: "I have the great honor and pleasure to empty my glass in drinking to the corps of Borussia." The president of the latter corps replies: "The corps thanks and drinks."

On the birth of one of the sons of the emperor Ehlers telegraphed him: "I have the great honor and pleasure to empty my glass in drinking to the youngest Hohenzollern." The emperor promptly wired back: "The youngest Hohenzollern thanks and drinks."

Out of Left-Handed Cups.

A man gave a dinner recently at a fashionable restaurant. A man from Minnesota was one of the guests. When the coffee was brought on the Minnesota man engaged the attention of the waiter. "I beg your pardon," said he, politely, "but I am left-handed. Won't you kindly bring me a cup with the handle on the left side?" "Certainly, sir," replied the waiter, and withdrew. A few minutes later he was seen to reenter the dining-room and whisper to the head waiter. The head waiter immediately bustled out. Presently he returned. He was visibly distressed as he made his way to the Minnesota man. "I'm very sorry, sir," he said, apologetically, "but we haven't any cups in the house with the handles on the left side. You see," with a brave attempt to preserve the reputation of the house, "you see, sir, we have so little call for them we don't keep them."

British Soldiers as Linguists.

British officers serving in Indian regiments are now required to learn the dialect of their men in addition to Hindustani. Pushtee, Punjabi, Hindi, Khaskura, Tamil and Mahratti are among the languages they must acquire.

Orchids are found in almost all parts of the world, except in extremely dry climates and on the borders of the frozen regions. Over 5,000 species are now known to botanists.

The Trolley Car's Uses.

The trolley car has been utilized for all sorts of local announcements, with excellent results, especially in small communities, doing in its way much of the work that the old bell crier was supposed to exist for, says the Pittsburgh Dispatch. On rainy days a village car will often save the school children a useless tramp by carrying a placard with the inscription on, "No School To-Day," and in some places the local weather bureau now notifies the road of prospective meteorological changes, and the cars, as they go out of the car barn mount the appropriate signal in the shape of a flag flying between the trolley pole and the car. People can thus tell by a glance at the passing car whether to carry an umbrella or not, and what sort of an overcoat to wear.

Preparing for Blue Ribbon W ek.

As the racing season advances, the trainers, who have charge of the crack trotters and pacers, are making ready for the Grand Circuit that opens in Detroit July 18. The Blue Ribbon meeting at the famous Grosse Pointe track attracts the fastest horses in the land, so that this great racing carnival never fails to furnish sport. There are other events among the regular contests along the line of the summer tour for the sulkies to be compared in value with the Merchants' and Manufacturers' stake for trotters, and the Chamber of Commerce stake open to the pacers.

These two annual fixtures are the coveted plums of each year being worth the goodly sum of $15,000 in all. Since their inauguration both have resulted in some of the most brilliant battles ever seen in harness racing, and the struggles of this coming tournament bid fair to outdo anything that has proceeded.

Besides these ever popular attractions it is practically settled two giants of the sulky will measure swords at Detroit on the first day of the Blue Ribbon meeting. Joe Patchen and John R. Gentry have so wide a reputation that there is not a man, woman or child throughout this broad Republic but has heard of their fame. Both are remarkable horses; Gentry swift as an eagle and almost unbeatable when the day and track are suited to his lightning gait. He has a formidable foe in the big black pacer whose turf career has been a veritable blaze of heroic deeds. This noted pair of equine gladiators were both bred in Kansas, and like the cyclone of their native state, they have cut down records and swept all lesser rivals aside in their all conquering march to a front rank among the turf celebrities of the day.

With the numerous sensations presented at the Blue Ribbon meeting, Detroit will be the objective point for all lovers of the noble horse during the six days from July 18 to 23. Those who take advantage of the one fare rate on all lines running to the state metropolis that has been secured for Monday, when Patchen and Gentry come together, can remain till Wednesday and see the contests for both big stakes as well.

The Hermitaige, Prado, Uffizi, Pitti, Louvre, Vaticar, National of London, National of Berlin, Belvidere and other celebrated European galleries have placed their greatest and rarest treasures at our disposal that they might be engraved for this superb work. "First glance at the pictures brought tears to my eyes," says one. "Cleared $150 first week's work with the book," says another. "Some high grade man or woman should secure the agency here at once," says every editor, "as $500 can soon be made taking orders for it." Nearly $10,000 expended on new plates for edition coming from press. Also a man or woman of good church standing can secure position of Manager and Correspondent of this territory, to devote all his time to employing and drilling agents and corresponding with them. A GLORIOUS NATAL DAY

The Record Made by Our Army and Navy Causes Great Rejoicing in Washington.

OFFICIAL DISPATCHES TELL THE STORY.

Way Made Clear for Advance on Santiago—American Troops Reach the Philippine Islands—Stop on the Way to Capture an Island—Situation at Manila.

Washington, July 5.—The complete annihilation of the Spanish squadron at Santiago and the capture of the Spanish admiral, Cervera, with 1,300 prisoners; the demand by Gen. Shafter for the surrender of Santiago by 12 o'clock to-day on pain of bombardment; word from Admiral Dewey that the Ladrone islands have been captured; that a Spanish gunboat had surrendered; that a hundred or more Spanish officers and men were taken, and that our first Philippine expedition had landed—this is a part of the thrilling record of such a Fourth of July as has not been known since the bells of Independence hall rang out the tidings of American freedom. It was a day when one momentous event followed another in constant and rapid succession, each hour bringing forth some new feature more startling than what had gone before. The climax came at one o'clock, when, amid the wildest cheering, which fairly shook the great war, state and navy building to its foundation, Admiral Sampson's dispatch announcing his glorious victory and the entire destruction of the Spanish fleet was given to the public.

The following message was sent to Admiral Sampson by the president:

"To Admiral Sampson, Playa del Este: You have the gratitude and congratulation of the whole American people. Convey to your noble officers and crews through whose valor new honors have been added to the Americans the grateful thanks and appreciation of the nation.

(Signed) "WILLIAM M'KINLEY."

The story of the day is best told in official dispatches, each bearing date of July 4 from Sampson, from Shafter and from Dewey. Stirring as they all are, that of Sampson was accorded the honor of chief importance, not only for the immediate results secured, but also from the effects of this crushing defeat in weakening the defenses of the city of Santiago, and in dealing Spain such a staggering blow that she is left practically without a navy.

The admiral's dispatch is as follows:

"Playa, via Hayti, July 4.—To Secretary of Navy: The fleet under my command offers the nation as a Fourth of July present the destruction of the whole of Cervera's fleet. No one escaped. It attempted to escape at 9:30 a. m. and at two p. m. the last, the Cristobal Colon, had run ashore six miles west of Santiago and had let down her colors. The Infanta Maria Teresa, Oquendo and Vizcaya were forced ashore, burned and blown up within 20 miles of Santiago; the Furor and Pluton were destroyed within four miles of the port. Loss, one killed and two wounded. Enemy's loss, probably several hundred from gun fire, explosions and drowning. About 1,300 prisoners, including Admiral Cervera. The man killed was George H. Ellis, chief yeoman of the Brooklyn.

(Signed) "SAMPSON."

Although brief Admiral Sampson's dispatch tells the story of fearful destruction. It not only disclosed the tremendous prowess of the American fleet, but it again displayed the strange immunity which the American sailor seems to have in the midst of death and carnage. That but one of our sailors, a yeoman on the Brooklyn, should have been killed in an engagement of this magnitude is without a parallel in naval annals, save in that other unparalleled record which Dewey made at Manila.

HELP FOR DEWEY.

American Troops Arrive Safely and Land at Cavite.

Washington, July 5.—Admiral Dewey's telegram to the navy department is given out as follows:

Hong-Kong, July 5, Cavite, July 1.—Three transports and the Charleston arrived yesterday. The Charleston captured Guam, Ladrones islands, on June 21. No resistance. Brought Spanish officers from the garrison, six officers and 54 men to Manila. On May 29 the Spanish war vessel Leyte came out of a river and surrendered to me, having exhausted ammunition and food in repelling attacks by insurgents. She had on board 52 officers and 94 men, naval and military.

(Signed) "DEWEY."

The dispatch also says that the situation at Manila is satisfactory, that the troops are debarking, and that the health of the men is excellent.

Hong-Kong, July 5.—The United States dispatch boat Zafiro, which arrived here early Monday morning from Cavite, with the report that the American troops arrived on June 30, reports also that Admiral Dewey, when the Zafiro left on July 1, was planning to attack Manila with the fleet and troops on July 4.

WILL ACT TOGETHER.

Admiral Sampson and Gen. Shafter Will Cooperate at Santiago.

Washington, July 6.—As a result of the cabinet meeting Tuesday, instructions were sent by the president to Admiral Sampson and Gen. Shafter to confer together concerning a joint plan of attack upon the city. Upon the outcome of this conference depends the line of action for the immediate future. For the present the land bombardment by Gen. Shafter's forces has been deferred as the situation has so completely changed by the annihilation of the Spanish fleet that it is manifestly the part of wisdom for this land bombardment to await the cooperation and support of a bombardment from Admiral Sampson's fleet. Gen. Shafter's demand for the surrender of Santiago, on the plan of bombardment, was made at 8:30 o'clock Sunday morning. An hour later Admiral Cervera made his suicidal dash from the harbor, resulting in a complete transformation of the naval and military operations. Instead of a menacing Spanish fleet within the harbor, the way has been cleared save for the shore batteries for the entrance of the American fleet up to the very wharves of the city.

Further Reason for Delay.

The action of the foreign representatives at Santiago has been an additional reason for deferring the bombardment. It was made known late Tuesday that one of Gen. Shafter's dispatches stated that these representatives had joined in a request to him to put off the shelling of the city for another brief period, until their respective colonies could be removed. This accounts for the departure of the foreign warships from Santiago harbor, as they are bearing away the foreign residents in the period before bombardment begins. The activity of the consuls at Santiago has led to no diplomatic complication which has reached the state department thus far, and the authorities here feel that nothing of that

Our Losses in the Fighting.

The fighting Friday and Saturday cost the American army 1,700 men. This estimate is made by the surgeons at division headquarters after careful figuring by the surgeons at the hospitals. The list of wounded, as made up at the division headquarters, is very large in proportion to the list of those killed outright. Probably less than 100, all told, of the number of wounded, have died, making the total number of deaths in the neighborhood of 180. The remainder of the wounded will probably recover.

Disposition of Cervera.

The disposition of Admiral Cervera and the 1,500 prisoners is receiving the attention of naval officials, but no exact determination has yet been reached. Admiral Cervera will be treated with consideration due his rank, and the department officials expressed a sense of gratification that Lieut. Commander Wainwright had shown the gallantry characteristic of the American navy, when he received the defeated Spanish admiral on board the little cruiser Gloucester and tendered him the use of his cabin.

Watson Will Go.

The definite official report reaching here Tuesday that the Spanish fleet had entered the Suez canal made no change in the plans of the navy department as to sending Commodore Watson's squadron to the coast of Spain. Secretary Long said it would start at the earliest possible moment, but he did not care to give the day of departure.

Praise for Schley.

The annihilation of the Spanish fleet continues to be an absorbing topic among naval officials, and they are giving most generous praise to Commodore Schley for the notable manner in which he directed the fight, when the immediate command fell to his lot. The commodore's friends have long predicted that if he secured an opportunity he would render good account of the fighting ability of the American navy, and they are glad this opportunity was afforded. It is one more, and perhaps the greatest, achievement, in a long line with which Commodore Schley's name has been associated, others including the relief of the Greely Arctic expedition and the command of the Baltimore at Valparaiso when war was imminent as a result of a mob attack on the American blue jackets.

HARD BLOW FOR SPAIN.

The People at Last Undeceived and Civil War Is Threatened.

Madrid, July 6.—Senor Sagasta, the premier, has announced officially that Admiral Cervera's squadron has been defeated, that the Almirante Oquendo was burned and the Infanta Maria Teresa sunk and that Admiral Cervera himself is a prisoner of

SPAIN'S FLEET WIPED OUT

Admiral Cervera's Much-Lauded Squadron Destroyed by Admiral Sampson.

HEROIC ATTEMPT TO LEAVE SANTIAGO.

Shot and Shell Poured Into the Spanish Warships and All Are Beached and Sunk—Not One of Our Boats Injured—Cervera a Prisoner—Story of the Fight.

Ten Miles West of the Entrance of the Harbor of Santiago de Cuba, Sunday, July 3, by the Dispatch Boat Wanda to Port Antonio, Jamaica, via Kingston, Jamaica, July 5.—Admiral Cervera's fleet, consisting of the armored cruisers Cristobal Colon, Almirante Oquendo, Infanta Maria Teresa and Vizcaya and two torpedo boat destroyers, the Furor and the Pluton, which had been held in the harbor of Santiago de Cuba for six weeks past by the combined squadrons of Rear Admiral Sampson and Commodore Schley, lies at the bottom of the Caribbean sea off the southern coast of Cuba. The Spanish admiral is a prisoner of war on the auxiliary gunboat Gloucester (formerly Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan's yacht Corsair) and 1,000 to 1,500 other Spanish officers and sailors, all who escaped the frightful carnage caused by the shells from the American warships, are also held prisoners of war by the United States navy.

Only One American Killed.

The American victory is complete, and, according to the best information at this time, the American vessels were practically untouched, and only one man was killed, though the ships were subjected to the heavy fire of the Spaniards all the time the battle lasted.

Cervera's Gallant Dash.

Admiral Cervera made as gallant a dash for liberty and for the preservation of his ships Sunday morning as has ever occurred in the history of naval warfare. In the face of overwhelming odds, with nothing before him but inevitable destruction or surrender if he remained any longer in the trap in which the American fleet held him, he made a bold dash from the harbor at the time the Americans least expected him to do so, and, fighting every inch of his way, even when his ship was ablaze and sinking, he tried to escape the doom which was written on the muzzle of every American gun trained upon his vessels.

Americans Open Fire.

The Americans saw him the moment he left the harbor and commenced their work of destruction immediately. For an hour or two they followed the flying Spaniards to the westward along the shore line, sending shot after shot into their blazing hulls, tearing great holes in their steel sides and covering their decks with the blood of the killed and wounded.

Pluck of the Spaniards.

At no time did the Spaniards show any indication that they intended to do otherwise than fight to the last. They showed no signals to surrender even when their ships commenced to sink, and the great clouds of smoke pouring from their sides showed they were on fire. But they turned their heads towards the shore, less than a mile away, and ran them on the beach and rocks, where their destruction was soon completed.

American Chivalry Displayed.

The officers and men on board then escaped to the shore as well as they could, with the assistance of boats sent from the American men-of-war, and then threw themselves upon the mercy of their captors, who not only extended to them the gracious hand of American chivalry, but sent them a guard to protect them from the murderous bands of Cuban soldiers hiding in the bush on the hillside, eager to rush down and attack the unarmed, defeated, but valorous foe.

Destruction of the Fleet.

One after another of the Spanish ships became the victims of the awful rain of shells which the American battleships poured upon them, and two hours after the first of the fleet had started out of Santiago harbor three cruisers and two torpedo boat destroyers were lying on the shore ten to fifteen miles west of Morro castle, pounding to pieces, smoke and flame pouring from every part of them and covering the entire coast line with a mist which could be seen

American Vessels Engaged.

The Iowa, Indiana, Oregon, Massachusetts, Texas, Brooklyn and the converted yacht Gloucester, formerly the Corsair, formed in position to give battle as soon as the Colon was sighted rounding the wreck of the Merrimac. The American vessels did not open fire at once; they waited until Cervera's ships were out of the range of Morro's guns before giving battle. Cervera, headed to the west, the Colon in the lead, followed by the Vizcaya and Oquendo and the destroyers, all firing rapidly.

ed not to open negotiations for peace, but to continue the war, with all risks, while a single soldier remains in Cuba. The government has no news as to a bombardment of Santiago, and has cabled Gov. Gen. Blanco for details of the naval battle.

Chicago Papers Resume.

Chicago, July 6.—For the first time since last Friday morning the Tribune, Record, Chronicle, Times-Herald and Inter Ocean are issued this morning. A sufficient number of outside nonunion stereotypers has been imported into the city to make this possible. The papers, however, are to be published only in four-page size, but this will be increased as rapidly as possible. The Chicago afternoon papers will also be published to-day, in reduced size.

Swimming Records Broken.

San Francisco, July 6. — At the swimming tournament of the Pacific Athletic association, one American and two coast records were broken. H. A. Wideman won the 100-yard race in 11:66; H. A. Brewer, the 220-yard in 2:51, breaking Reeder's American record of 2:57, and E. B. Stalle won the one mile in 28:20, beating Howard's coast record by nine seconds.

Coinage for the Year.

Washington, July 4. — The report of the director of the mint shows that during the fiscal year closed Friday the coinage at the mints of the United States amounted to $72,609,933, as follows: Gold, $64,634,865; silver, $16,485,584; minor coins, $1,489,484. The standard silver dollars coined aggregated $10,002,780.

Two More Prizes at Key West.

Key West, Fla., July 4.—The Spanish steamer Bonito Esteuger, of about 500 tons, and a small sloop, the Emmanuel and Raoul, captured by the Hornet on June 27 and 28, off Manzanillo, were brought in here by a prize crew under Ensign Mark St. Clair Ellis.

Groceryman Bush had a 4th of July all his own Friday, which was interesting if not enjoyable. He had placed in his window a fine display of fireworks, a miniature warship and a cotton batting ocean. A small boy came in to buy a toy pistol and Mr. Bush showed him how it went. A spark flew into the ocean which contrary to all well regulated oceans, took fire and the fun began. A great cracker opened the ball, and the proprietor dove under the counter, but here the nigger chasers got in some fine work and he fled for the rear door, closely followed by a long tailed rocket. The pin wheels wheeled, the crackers cracked, the mines busted, likewise the big glass front, through which the warship sailed out into oblivion to keep company with the Spanish fleet. A big fire was no doubt averted from the fact that the air was very still that day and the little fire which started got no draft and was easily smothered out. We understand the estimated damage on stock is $10.00 beside the damage to the store front.

MRS. JOHN WALLET, of Jefferson, Wis., than whom none is more highly esteemed or widely known, writes. "In 1890 I had a severe attack of LaGrippe and at the end of four months, in spite of all physicians, friends and good nursing could do, my lungs heart and nervous system were so completely wrecked, my life was despaired of, my friends giving me up. I could only sleep by the use of opiates. My lungs and heart pained me terribly and my cough was most aggravating. I could not lie in one position but a short time and not on my left side at all. My husband brought me Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Cure and I began taking them. When I had taken a half bottle of each I was much better and continuing persistently I took about a dozen bottles and was completely restored to health to the surprise of all."

A BIG CLASS GRADUATES

Commencement Exercises at the University of Michigan Draw a Big Crowd.

BRIEF OUTLINE OF THE PROCEEDINGS.

Six Hundred and Seventy-Four Graduates Receive Their Diplomas and Their Degrees—Secretary of State Day Is Given the Degree of Doctor of Laws.

Ann Arbor, July 1.—The fifty-fourth annual commencement of the University of Michigan was held Thursday in University hall, in the presence of a brilliant audience. Six hundred and seventy-four degrees were conferred. The commencement oration was delivered by Prof. Benjamin Ide Wheeler, of Cornell, who spoke on "The Old World and the New."

Then came the conferring of degrees. As the favorites walked across the platform they were greeted with cheers. Little Felver, Michigan's plucky quarter-back; Riotaro Kodama, the Jap who took his doctor's degree, and the young colored girl, graduated in medicine, received generous applause.

At the close of the regular commencement programme the following honorary degrees were conferred by President Hutchins on behalf of the board of regents:

Master of arts—Stanley Waterloo, '69, the Chicago novelist.

Bachelor of arts—Charles Quarles, '66, of Milwaukee.

Doctor of Laws—William R. Day, '70, now secretary of state; Dr. Abraham Jacobi, of Columbia college.

The alumni banquet was held in Waterman gymnasium immediately after commencement exercises. Acting President Hutchins presided as toastmaster. Toasts were responded to by Judge Grant, of the supreme court; Dr. Wheeler, of Cornell; Dr. Jacobi, of Columbia university; Levi L. Barbour, Col. Ransom, of the class of '48; Judge Wall, of Illinois; Prof. Freeman, of the University of Wisconsin, and others.

MICHIGAN TROOPS SUFFER.

Under Fire in the Siege of Santiago—Two Killed and Several Others Wounded.

Before Aguadores, Cuba, July 2.—The Cubans and Thirty-third Michigan threw out skirmishers on the hill and shots were exchanged all the morning with the rifle pits. The fort and the blockhouse were both silenced by the New York, whose secondary battery peppered the ravine, while occasionally the deafening roar of her turret guns was heard. Early in the advance eight companies marched up the railroad track and another force went around the beach out of sight of the Spanish forts. Six small shells were sent over the heads of the men too close for comfort, and the troops were sent to cover under the embankment of the railroad cut. Among the officers and men who formed this advance were Gen. Duffield, Col. Boynton, with the Thirty-third Michigan.

The killed were all the victims of the first shells fired by the Spaniards, who had the line range of the railroad, though the firing was high. The men had just thrown off their packs when a shell from a three-inch cannon exploded in the ranks of company L. The killed were:

John Franklin, of Diamonddale, Mich.,
— Seabright.

The wounded were:

D. A. Stark, Ann Arbor, Mich., right arm fractured.

Clifford H. Curtis, of Land Lake.

All the killed and wounded were members of Sons of Veterans.

Secured a Big Order.

Detroit, July 1.—The Michigan Peninsular Car company has just closed a contract with an eastern railroad for 1,000 freight cars to be furnished as soon as possible. The company will at once bend its energies and facilities to the task of completing this contract as soon as possible. This contract is a big one and represents nearly $500,000. The business of this company is brisk, and it will require hustling to take care of this contract.

Wages Increased.

Lansing, July 1.—R. D. Whalen, of Marquette, a representative of the International Longshoremen's association and a friend of the labor bureau, writes Labor Commissioner Cox that there has been an increase of wages generally at Marquette. The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic and Lake Superior & Ishpeming railroads have raised the men working on ore docks 15 per cent. a day and 20 cents an hour overtime.

Death in a Fly-Wheel.

Detroit, July 1.—Anthony Lawrence's clothing was caught by the great fly-wheel belting at the Delta Lumber company's sawmill, foot of Chene street, while he was oiling machinery. His body was whirled into the jam between the big wheel and a stanchion post. He was disemboweled in a second. His chest was crushed in and his left arm was torn off at the elbow. Not a cry was heard from him.

Miner Instantly Killed.

Ishpeming, June 30.—William Gill was instantly killed by falling into the shaft at the Cliffs mine of the Cleveland Cliffs company. He thought the cage was at the mouth of the shaft and stepped into the open shaft, falling 500 feet.

Marshall, July 1.—C. R. Mains has been held under $30,000 bail, charged with attempt to murder Stephen Hulbert.

BANK CLOSES ITS DOORS.

Its Proprietors Say That Depositors Will Get 100 Cents on the Dollar.

Mancelona, June 30.—A. Young & Son, proprietors of the Bank of Mancelona and the Novelty Dry Goods store, Wednesday made an assignment for the benefit of their creditors, and the bank and store are now in possession of N. C. Weter, the assignee. A. Young, the senior partner, was in charge of the store, while A. B. Young was cashier of the bank. The direct cause of the suspension was the failure to receive remittances to meet the demands of depositors. The Youngs place the liabilities at $30,000 and say that they have assets that will yield $45,000, and that every creditor will receive 100 cents on the dollar. There is much excitement over the failure. Assignee Weter believes in the stability of the bank. The largest depositor is W. B. Beam, who had $2,000 in the bank when it closed its doors. The senior partner, A. Young, claims that he was not aware of the bank's embarrassment. The Bank of Mancelona was organized in 1886. Its capital stock was $25,000 and it claimed a surplus of $35,000. The Antrim county state savings bank, which was organized some years later, cut into its business to quite an extent, but not enough to cripple it.

PACK FOR SENATOR.

Michigan Millionaire Announces His Candidacy for Burrows' Seat —His Chances.

Detroit, July 1.—"I am in the field for United States senator and will make an honorable fight to secure the position." Albert Pack thus announced his candidacy as successor to Julius Caesar Burrows. Since the last regular session of the legislature, when Burrows was chosen to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Stockbridge, Mr. Pack has been strongly urged by friends all over the state to enter the race. But not until last week, he says, when several northern counties instructed their delegates to the senatorial and representative conventions to vote for members of the legislature who would be favorable to Mr. Pack, did he seriously consider the matter. Possibly no man in Michigan is better known than he. For half a century he has been a resident of the state and was identified with the lumber interests along the eastern and northern shores back in the days when the enormous output made Mihcigan famous. Of the 132 votes in both houses Mr. Burrows claims 50 so far. Ex-United States Senator John Patton is also in the field for the place.

THE FOURTH IN DETROIT.

Sampson's Success Adds Gusto to the Splendid Exercises in the Auditorium.

Detroit, July 5.—The principal feature of Detroit's Independence day celebration was a mass meeting in the Auditorium. The knowledge of Sampson's great victory was a thrilling incentive to the enthusiasm of the occasion. Public officials marched to the Auditorium preceded by the local commands of the G. A. R. veterans. After introductory remarks by Mayor Maybury, Bishop Foley offered an invocation, Judge Robert E. Fraser impressively read the Declaration of Independence and John W. McGrath, ex-justice of the supreme court, delivered the oration of the day. Several hundred school children seated on the platform sang patriotic songs. Little Miss Ellis, a niece of Admiral Sampson, was introduced to the audience and cheered to the echo.

For Reducing Bail.

Battle Creek, July 1.—Harry Chase, assistant attorney-general, came here from Lansing and made examination of the evidence in the case of Justice Rowell, who reduced Charles R. Mains' bail from $20,000 to $10,000 against the decision of the circuit judge. It is believed Rowell will be removed. Chase refuses to make a statement, as he will report to the attorney-general.

Fell Under the Wheels.

Niles, June 30.—A man, aged about 28 years, who is supposed to be Frank Howe, of Muskegon, was instantly killed here while trying to board a Michigan Central freight train. He fell beneath the wheels and his body was cut in two. Letters found on the body indicate that he has a mother and a brother, John H. Howe, living at Muskegon.

Its Third Dividend.

Lansing, June 30.—Banking Commissioner Maltz has authorized the receiver of the Mecosta county savings bank, of Big Rapids, to declare a dividend of 12½ per cent, which amounts to $23,855. This is the third dividend to be paid by the bank, and the depositors will have received 50 per cent. of their claims when this dividend is paid.

Under the Hammer.

Detroit, July 1.—The old Biddle house property in this city was sold at auction to George L. Beecher, one of the heirs of the Luther Beecher estate which had a lease of 73 years still to run on the old building. The consideration was $250,000.

Will Vote on Two Propositions.

Paw Paw, July 2.—A special village election will be held on July 11 to vote bonds on two propositions, one for $18,000 water bonds and one for $5,000 sewer bonds.

Old Settler Dead.

Comstock, July 1.—Deacon Willard Mills died at his home in this city, aged 90 years. He was one of the first Kalamazoo county settlers.

Northfield, Vt., July 6.—Norwich university has conferred the degree of doctor of laws on Gov. Pingree, of Michigan.

A Woman's Heart.

The wife of a clergyman tells the story of her suffering with neuralgia of the heart, with the hope that her experience may indicate to others the way to regain health.

Few bodily afflictions are more terrible than heart disease. To live in constant dread and expectation of death, sudden, instant death, with last farewells unspoken, is for most people more awful to contemplate than the most severe lingering illness.

The slightest excitement brings great suffering and danger to people so afflicted.

Such was the experience of the wife of a well-known clergyman. She tells her story for the sake of doing good to others.

"I feel," she said, speaking carefully and weighing her words, "that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People relieved me of a lifetime of sickness and sorrow, and I cheerfully recommend them."

This grateful woman is Mrs. Wamsley, wife of the Rev. C. E. Wamsley, who lives on West Sheridan Street, Greensburg, Ind. She continued:

"My heart became affected after the birth of my youngest child, about six years ago.

"The pain was constant. Frequently it grew so severe I would be forced to cry out.

"I could not endure any excitement.

"It would increase the pain so I would scream and fall down in a state of collapse. In this condition I was helpless.

"These spells would come on me at home, in the street, or anywhere I might be.

"I could not sleep at night. I ate very little.

"Different doctors were called in. They said I had neuralgia of the heart, resulting from nervous prostration.

"The doctors treated me, but the s... they gave did not last.

"I was a physical wreck, when my ... fell on an item in the local paper describing how Mrs. Evans, of West End, had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Her suffering was like mine.

"I hope other sufferers who read ... account will have the faith I had when I read of Mrs. Evans.

"My husband bought me one box of ... pills. The change they made in my ... dition was encouraging. I took another box; then bought six more boxes.

"All the time I gained in health, strength, hope, nerve force—steadily, surely!

"Before I finished the eighth box I ... the treatment. I felt perfectly well, and the doctor said I was entirely cured."

To add weight to her story Mrs. Wamsley made affidavit to its truth before ... F. Russell, a Notary Public of Greensburg.

Neuralgia of the heart is only one of many serious evils that grow out of derangements of the nervous system or of the blood.

The remedy that expels impurities from the blood and supplies the necessary materials for rapidly rebuilding wasted nerve tissues reaches the root of many serious diseases.

It is these virtues that have given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People their wonderful curative powers in diseases that at first glance seem widely different.

This famous remedy is for sale by all druggists for 50 cents a box; or six boxes for $2.50.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. We also thank the speakers and singers, who so kindly entertained us. Signed COMMITTEE.

By Absorption.

Catarrhal sufferers should remember that Ely's Cream Balm is the only catarrh remedy which is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the diseased membrane. It does not dry up the secretions, but changes them to a limpid and odorless condition, and finally to a natural and healthy character. The balm can be found at any drug store, or by sending 50 cents to Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York, it will be mailed. Full directions with each package. Cream Balm opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays inflamation, thereby stopping pain in the head, heals and protects the membrane and restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils.

"The Light of the World or Our Saviour in Art."

Cost over $100,000 to publish. Contains nearly 200 full-page engravings of our Saviour, by the great masters. Every picture is reproduced from some famous painting. Agents are taking from three to twenty orders per day. The book is so beautiful that when people see it they want it. The Hermitalge, Prado, Uffizi, Pitti, Louvre, Vatican, National of London, National of Berlin, Belvidere and other celebrated European galleries have placed their greatest and rarest treasures at our disposal that they might be engraved for this superb work. "First glance at the pictures brought tears to my eyes," says one. "Cleared $150 first week's work with the book," says another. "Some high grade man or woman should secure the agency here at once," says every editor, "as $500 can soon be made taking orders for it." Nearly $10,000 expended on new plates for edition coming from press. Also a man or woman of good church standing can secure position of Manager and Correspondent of this territory, to devote all his time to employing and drilling agents and corresponding with them. Letters from Chickamauga.

In camp, June 29, 1898.

DEAR ONES AT HOME:

Just received your good long letter and was glad to hear from you all again.

I am going to tell you about a little trip that three of us took the other day when we had our day off. We started off about 8 o'clock with our big cups after blackberries. We didn't intend going very far but it was so pleasant out in the mountains and the berries were so abundant that we kept going until we reached a pretty little mountain village over ten miles from camp. We found a private boarding house and Mr. Green—one of us—treated us to dinner. Honestly it was the best dinner I ever have eaten. A ten mile walk through the fragrant pines of the rough mountain country had given us great appetites; the blackberries had sharpened them to a keen edge and when we sat down to a real table with real dishes we were as eager and impatient as a crowd of six-year-old boys. Mrs. Rhodes, the landlady, served the meal, assisted by her three pretty daughters. And now listen, first we had delicious spring chicken floating in rich cream gravy, mashed potatoes, light warm biscuits, bread with butter on it, eggs fried in butter, genuine sugar cured ham, a fine dressing made of potatoes, rice, bread crumbs, and having just a delicate onion flavor, coffee with cream and sugar, green peppers, very small cabbages fried in butter, dainty little yellow cakes, peach pie also hot blackberry pie and then all the ripe plums and peaches we could eat. Everything was cooked just right and when we left the table there was nothing but empty dishes left. We had all eaten so much that we felt rather alarmed for our future so decided to walk home a longer way than we had come. We started out through the woods, followed narrow rocky paths, up one ridge and down others, stopping occasionally to fill our canteens at some little spring—the mountains are full of fine springs, cold and clear—or to talk with some of the long haired "Georgia crackers." It is always amusing to talk with these mountaineers. They are ignorant and shiftless but good natured and hospitable. There were several showers during the day. When the first one came up we hastily took off our clothes, put them under a rubber blanket which we had with us and enjoyed a fine shower bath. Later in the day it rained again and this time we stopped at one of the mountain cabins. There were two nice looking girls there who invited us in entertained us by playing on an organ and singing good old Methodist hymns. We walked fourteen miles on the way back which made a march of 24 miles for the day. I slept splendidly that night and woke up in the morning feeling fine as silk.

The boys are all unusually well at present, except some of the recruits who have just arrived. We don't mind the heat any more and are no longer afraid of the water.

We have received orders to prepare to move within ten or twelve days and are being drilled continually. The drills are of an entirely different character from what they were at first and now consist almost entirely of sham battles. The regiment is divided into two parts and sent off into the woods and swamps north of our camp. The two divisions enter at opposite sides of the ambush—usually about a mile or two apart. Then scouts are sent ahead, flankers extended to the sides, the advance guard moves on behind the scouts followed in order by the main body and the reserves. When the scouts discover the enemy they rush back and report its position to the officers. Then each side strives to get the most advantageous location. We have some lively times and take lots of prisoners. It is good practice, for the battle ground is of the roughest kind, hilly and covered with a dense growth of scrubby oaks, pines and mammoth blackberry bushes—very similar to the ground in Cuba about Santiago. We are constantly instructed about making use of every available cover, how to run low, how to fire from behind logs and stumps, and other things which may be of great use to us in the future. Six weeks ago a sham battle such as we had this afternoon would have bushed half the boys but today not a man fell out and we all came back fresh as "new robins."

Our recruits are a pretty fair lot of fellows and are breaking in nicely.

It looks as if we might soon be in the enemy's country and then we must naturally expect hardships and dangers greater than any we know about here. The boys all appreciate this and are trying to prepare themselves to stand up under all circumstances. We are to be a reserve force for Gen. Shafter and not all of us will be called into immediate action. The whole of our corps—about 3000 men—has orders to leave. This will give us a very superior force at Santiago and we ought to have an easy victory. The boys are all anxious to get to the front and help put the whole bad business to an end. Our gov't is going slowly and doesn't seem inclined to send its soldiers against superior forces. I think much depends upon the first one or two battles. If we win a decisive victory at Santiago and San Juan, it is possible that Havana will surrender without much of a struggle. There can be only one final outcome and it is only a question of time when Spain will have to give up all her colonies in the Western World.

Well, I must close. Don't worry about my going on to the front. I am in good shape for it and have no fears. We are a good regiment and have good officers. We come from a good state and are fighting for the best government on earth and also for the freedom of the oppressed. We are in the right and God will take care of us.

Have just heard that the order for immediate movement has been revoked but we are ordered to be ready to move on short notice. My private opinion is that it will still be some time, as our recruits are unequipped and entirely untrained. It will take at least 30 days to get them into anything like fighting trim and I hardly think we will be sent on before that time. Of course it is all conjecture, we may leave before Sunday but that is highly improbable.

The cotton fields are beginning to look fine here and I have also seen lots of sweet potato fields. Peaches and plums are very abundant and very cheap; there are lots of fine ripe apples for 50 and 75c a bushel and blackberries are a drug on the market. I have helped eat some of the finest watermelons you ever set eyes on, great big 40-pounders, ripe to the very skin and solid as a potato. They are cheap, 10 and 15 cents for old smashers, one is enough for twelve or fifteen of us. They don't seem to disagree with the boys at all and I think they are as healthful as any other fruit.

Write when you can.

Lovingly,

CLARENCE B. HURBEY.

P. S. My vaccination refused to work; it takes after me. C. H.

Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga.
Co. C, 31st Mich. July 2, 1898.

Last Sunday the boys were electrified at retreat by orders that fifteen regiments, including the 31st, should make ready to move within ten days equipped for field service. No mention was made of the destination, but owing to the operations near Santiago, it was probably Cuba. On Monday the order was countermanded but instead the whole 1st Army Corps of twenty-seven regiments was ordered to make ready. As in the first order no destination. Since the taking of Santiago it is more than likely the 31st will go to Porto Rico. That island seems to be the desire of nearly all the boys. Very few desire to go to Cuba, fearing the known deadly climate there much more than they do the unknown climate of the former island. There are about 60000 Spanish soldiers in Porto Rico and it would be no summer's holiday to defeat them.

In consequence of the expected departure there has been much activity in camp the past week. There has been an increase in the attention given to battle drill and firing. Practice has also been had in breaking camp. Everybody hopes and prays for an early departure. Nothing eats a soldier's heart out so quickly as inactivity in camp.

The new recruits for Co. C arrived in camp Tuesday noon and met with a hearty welcome. They are the best looking lot of recruits in the 31st and already show up better than any others in their drill. They are already nearly as well equipped as the old members. They take kindly to the climate and the work and are accomplishing wonders in fitting themselves to be soldiers. The entire regiment is now fully recruited and make the finest appearance of any on the grounds. Our sister regiment, the 1st Georgia, however, gives us a close rub in this respect.

In addition to the excitement of contemplated removal and the interest in the arrival of the new men we had regular monthly muster on Thursday. Any one absent from this muster does not receive any pay until the next regular pay day. In consequence a full company reported. About midnight we were all routed out of "bed" to sign the pay roll. Co. C's was the first one completed and handed to Col. Gardener. Drills have been declared off today which is taken as a sure indication that we will receive our pay. Each man receives two months pay. If we leave the country it is possible that we will be paid a month in advance. There are $2,250,000 in a car at Lytle to pay the troops at this point.

The weather continues very warm but the old boys are getting acclimated and do not mind it very much. We are anxious that the recruits should be quickly broken in as it will make fatigue and guard duty less arduous.

Last night about taps the news of the battle of Santiago came to camp. For nearly an hour Bedlam was let loose all over the camp. The bands played and there was continuous cheering. The result of this battle will probably hasten our departure.

There will be a big celebration of the Fourth of July at Chattanooga. For the first time since the war the Southerners are buying fireworks for Independence Day. Heretofore they have shot their fire crackers at Christmas time.

Michigan still maintains her reputation as the best behaved regiment on the grounds and consequently we are always welcome at any place in Chattanooga. If they pass pay day as gentlemen should they will have had the crucial test.

I hope that by this time next week my letter to you will bear a foreign postmark. Most of us are anxious to get into the fight for the quicker it is over the sooner we will get home.

The resignation of Lieut. Abel as adjutant of the regiment has been accepted by the war department and took effect June 30. Lieut. Homer Nash, of Co. D. has been appointed to fill the vacancy, much to the satisfaction of the boys.

Private Eddy, who has been confined to the hospital for several weeks with a severe fever is so far recovered as to visit the company streets. He says, he will be ready to go to the front with Co. C. Yours, FRANK C. DUDLEY.

C. A. Slayton has commenced to build his addition to the grain elevator at the Lake Shore depot. He has leased the present building and also ground for the extension which will be forty feet long and the same height as the main building. When completed the elevator will hold from 15,000 to 18,000 bushels of grain, will be fitted with cleaning machinery and the grain will be elevated with an engine instead of by pulling a car up the long inclined track, which has been removed to make room for the new part. Mr. Slayton expects to have the elevator ready to accomodate the new crop of wheat as soon as threshed.

Lester Pittman Tribou,

Born in Tecumseh, Mich., Oct. 8, 1852; married to Lulu Lilley, June 17, 1880; died in Tecumseh, July 6, 1898. And this, in brief, is his history. It is, indeed, a difficult task for me to write this last article about Lester Tribou. He has been my personal friend always and I had learned to think of him, a man of absolute integrity, firm and gentle policy, true friend and delightful companion, as a fixture here. No thought that we could or would do without him seemed possible. The whole community thought of him the same as I. Born and brought up in Tecumseh, every man and woman and little child knew him and all with thoughts of respect and love. For 29 years he has stood behind the bank counter, missing less than 6 weeks in all that time. For months he worked there, a sick man, but never thinking to give up for a single day. Many men might do his work but no man can ever fill his place.

If his business life was pure and cheerful, much more can be said of his life at home. He worked with sterling faithfulness that his money might make happy his family and relatives. Never was any man's life more thoroughly filled with true domestic love and happiness and the ones he leaves to follow cannot remember even one dark spot to mar this well spent life of cheerful devotion. There is no thought to comfort one in the loss of such a man. Time may heal the acute pain of parting, but never the sorrow of separation.

In preparation for the Fourth some of the boys had a cannon cast a week or so ago with which to awaken the sleeping citizen to a realizing sense that Independence day had appeared on the scene. It was quite a gun weighing in the neighborhood of 250 pounds and the gunners armed with a big box of powder, impatiently waited for the clock to strike 12 Sunday night so they could rouse the natives. Twice the big gun talked, but the third time being loaded for an extra effort it flew into a dozen pieces which were scattered for a block in each direction. A big piece lit in front of the Lilley House, one went through the window in the Cheever block, another demolished a glass case in front of Mrs. Freeman's millinery and the others went any old way. Wonderful as it may seem no one was hurt although a half hundred men and boys stood within a short distance. The celebration was continued with a couple of anvils and the next morning the boys went around and squared up the damage. Cast iron cannons are a good thing to keep away from.

SHOULD NEVER MARRY.

Some Women Who Are Unfit to Manage a Household or Become Helpful Mothers.

The woman who proudly declares that she cannot even hem a pocket handkerchief, never made up a bed in her life, and adds, with a simper that she's "been in society ever since she was 15," should never marry. And there are others. The woman who would rather nurse a pug dog than a baby. The woman who thinks she can get $5,000 worth of style out of $1,000 salary. The woman who wants to refurnish her home every spring. The woman who buys for the mere pleasure of buying. The woman who does not know how many cents there are in a dollar. The woman who thinks men are angels and demigods. The woman who would rather die than to wear a bonnet two seasons old. The woman who thinks that the cook and the nurse can keep house. The woman who thinks it is cheaper to buy bread than to make it. The woman who buys bric-a-brac for the parlor and borrows kitchen utensils from her neighbors. The woman who thinks she is an ornament to her sex if she wins a progressive euchre prize.—Minneapolis Times.

THE BUTTERFLY BABY.

A Playday Design of the Mother Hubbard Pattern for the Bright Little Miss of Six.

The Mother Hubbard dress of figured French challie makes a very useful playground article for a young child. French challie, it may be remarked, is any challie that will wash. It does not necessarily mean the imported goods, but rather a fine, firm, solid colored material that launders perfectly.

The skirt can be laid in double-box plaits, front and back, and over the challie dress the little maid wears a white-lawn yoke or collarette, which is put on after the dress is buttoned. This can be done up as often as it is soiled.

Very high boots are worn to guard against thistles and dew.

WHITE TIE AND YOKE.

A Pretty and Tasteful Feature for Trimming a Dark Cloth Dress at Small Expense.

A white embroidered yoke is one of the most tasteful things that can be worn upon a dark dress. There is a neatness about it that is almost hypnotic.

As no white yoke will outlast a dark dress, the yoke must be detachable. It can be made of embroidered muslin or pique. It can also be made of white lawn.

A pretty tie is of the same material as the yoke and fastens under the chin. The yoke may be in the form of lapels than turn back from a tucked center, in which case it is very easily detached from the dress. These white yokes will be a characteristic of the wool dress of spring.

LIFE'S BRIGHT SIDE.

Why We Should All Try to Extract All the Happiness and Enjoyment We Can.

You have troubles, it may be. So have others. None are free from them; and perhaps it is well that none should be. They give sinew and tone to life, fortitude and courage to man. It would be a dull sea, and the sailor would never acquire skill, where there was nothing to disturb its surface.

It is the duty of everyone to extract all the happiness and enjoyment he can within and without him; and, above all, he should look upon the bright side. What though things do look a little dark. The lane will turn, and the night will end in broad day. In the long run the great balance rights itself. What appears ill becomes well, that which appears wrong, right. Men are not made to hang down their heads, and those who do only show that they are departing from the paths of true common-sense and right. There is more virtue in one sunbeam than in a whole hemisphere of the clouds and gloom. Therefore look upon the brightside. Cultivate all that is warm and genial—not the cold and repulsive, the dark and morose.—Leisure Hours.

Knockers to Be Revived.

There is a tendency among architects to revive the old-time door knocker. Quite a number of new and costly private residences in New York are decorated with these ancient signals for admission.

Silk Should Not Rustle.

The silk that does not rustle is deemed the correct style for the newest petticoats.

SKIRT FOR A RAINY DAY.

A Clever and Sensible Idea for the Progressive Woman Who Wants to Keep Dry.

A busy woman in New York whose time is so occupied with charity and social duties that every day finds her forced out of doors, no matter what the weather may be, has long been in a dilemma over a costume that would exactly fill her needs. The short rainy-day skirt would not do at all, for, while it would answer for plodding through the streets on a wet day, it was quite inappropriate for a social hour.

The difference would be particularly marked if the day had cleared and the sun come out. This woman now gets over the difficulty with a clever arrangement of tabs and buttons, or rings and tapes. The tabs are more satisfactory than the rings, and therefore used more often. There are five tabs. These have a single buttonhole at the very ends and are buttoned to the gown. Two buttons extend below them. Thus, without difficulty, the gown can be shortened and let down again to conventional length.

MARTHA HOUK.

JOHN PHILLIPS' RIDE

Rare Gallantry and Daring of an Intrepid Frontiersman.

He Rescued the Far West from Indian Depredations, But the Government Never Recognized His Great Service.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THIS is a story of fact, and it is a stranger and a stronger story than you have ever read in fiction.

This is a narration of the deed of a patriot, a brave man, who offered his life as a vicarious sacrifice for others; and who never received reward or mark of adequate appreciation.

The senate of the United States recently passed a bill "for the relief of Hattie A. Phillips," and the title of the bill carries with it no significance. The bill makes an appropriation of $5,785 "for oxen, mules and horses taken from John Phillips."

That sounds dull and prosaic enough to fend off all likelihood of anything out of the ordinary. But it shows that this ungrateful republic, after 32 years, fails to grant recognition of heroism, and simply pays what it is compelled to pay for losses actually sustained by a hero. And yet the senate committee on claims, in its report on the bill, makes ample acknowledgment of governmental obligation.

In all the annals of heroism in the face of unusual dangers and difficulties on the American frontier, or in the world, there are few that can exceed in gallantry, in heroism, in devotion, in self-sacrifice and patriotism the ride made by John Phillips from Fort Phil Kearney, in December, 1866, to Fort Laramie, carrying dispatches which gave the first intelligence to the outside world of the terrible massacre near the former post, and which saved the lives of the people garrisoned there—men, women and children—by starting reenforcements to their relief. On the 21st day of December, 1866, Fort Phil Kearny, commanded by Col. Henry B. Carrington, under the shadow of the Big Horn mountains, over 200 miles from the nearest telegraph line, was the extreme outpost in that part of the northwest. The savage Sioux, under Red Cloud, had been hovering in the vicinity of the post for some time, and had been last seen in large numbers on Tongue river, northeast of the fort.

On the 21st of December the Indians made an attack upon the wood train a few miles north of the fort A detachment of troops under the command of Brevet Lieut. Col. Fetterman, including two other officers and 78 men and a number of civilians, made a dash from the fort for the purpose of protecting the wood train. When some four miles from the fort they were surrounded by the Indians in overwhelming numbers, and every man of the detachment was killed. The heroism of their struggle for life can never be told, but the terrible slaughter which has since been confessed by the Indians of their braves, and the fact that the troops were only killed after their ammunition was exhausted, speaks eloquently of the horrible and bloody nature of the encounter. The triumphant and bloodthirsty Sioux, commanded by Red Cloud and outnumbering the garrison by twenty to one, had then surrounded and entirely invested the fort. An attack was hourly expected. It was understood that if the Indians were successful in taking the fort it meant death for the garrison and a worse fate for the women and children, who begged piteously to be placed in the powder house and blown up in the case of a successful attack by the Indians.

At this juncture, when brave men felt that the only possible hope for the garrison was in taking news of their beleaguerment to the nearest outside post, and not a soldier could be found who would brave the attempt to break through the savages and ride to the nearest outpost, a distance of 225 miles, John Phillips, a scout and hunter, volunteered to take dispatches to Fort Laramie. Placing a few biscuits in his pockets, tying on his saddle a small quantity of feed for his horse, he left the post at midnight on the night succeeding the massacre and reached Fort Laramie with the dispatches five days later. The country across which he rode was absolutely uninhabited by white man, and the ground was covered with snow from three to five feet in depth; he had no food for himself or his horse other than the meager amount he took with him, and it was necessary for him to travel entirely by night for fear of hostile Indians. The weather was exceedingly cold, the thermometer reaching 20 degrees below zero.

When he delivered the dispatches at Fort Laramie, hardy frontiersman that he was, he fell in a dead faint. Immediately on receipt of the dispatches troops were forwarded from Fort Laramie, and the garrison at Fort Phil Kearny was relieved. For this most remarkable act of heroism John Phillips has never in any way been paid by the general government, the only payment made him being the sum of $300 which was paid him for various scouting services.

In the years immediately following his heroic ride John Phillips was employed in various capacities and engaged in business in connection with the government posts, and he was continually hunted and harassed by the Sioux, who always looked upon him as the man who had wrested from their grasp the garrison at Fort Phil Kearny. At one time he was lassoed by the Indians in an attempt to capture him for the purpose of torture. At other times his cattle were shot down, undoubtedly through pure wantonness on the part of these Indian marauders. In 1872 John Phillips was engaged in hauling wood for the government at Fort Fetterman, when a band of Indians, supposed to be Sioux and Cheyennes, drove off and killed a considerable amount of stock belonging to him. Red Cloud acknowledged the depredation, but insisted that the Indians did not belong to his band. Upon the overwhelming testimony of army officers, Indian agents, special examiners and others, the court of claims allowed and entered judgment for the sum of $2,210.

It subsequently transpired that at the time of this depredation John Phillips was not a fully naturalized citizen, and the claim was not paid. The court could not take into account the gallant and meritorious services of this brave man, but could make its decision only upon the finding of fact. Subsequently Phillips became a fully naturalized citizen; but, broken in health by the exposure and strain of his long and perilous ride, he died in the prime of life, leaving a widow and child in straitened circumstances.

Col. Carrington filed with the senate committee on claims the following affidavit, which is now a part of the official record in the case:

Henry B. Carrington, United States army, being duly sworn, makes oath and says: That on the 21st day of December, 1866, as colonel of the Eighteenth United States infantry, and as commanding officer of the Rocky Mountain district, department of the Platte, he found his whole district to be in a state of bitter war with the Indians occupying that country, and was constantly engaged in such warfare; that it became necessary to employ citizen scouts and messengers who were familiar with the country and with Indian methods.

That on the 21st day of December, 1866, aforesaid, an action took place within six miles of Fort Philip Kearny, which post was his headquarters, in which, surprised by Red Cloud and his band of overwhelming numbers, three officers and 78 men were killed and mutilated in less than an hour; that several thousand Indians surrounded the post, rendering communication with Fort Laramie, the nearest post having troops at disposal, impracticable; that the garrison was so small that no troops could be sent back for assistance; that only by the utmost care, all troops being on guard constantly, supported by five pieces of artillery, was the post itself preserved intact; that ammunition had been reduced to less than 20 rounds per man, and neither officers nor men believed it possible to venture through the surrounding Indian forces for help with any hope of success.

At this juncture John Phillips, used to frontier life, the wiles of the Indians, and convinced of the utter destruction that awaited the command unless relief were promptly obtained, volunteered his services as dispatch bearer to Fort Laramie, 225 miles distant, through a hostile country, absolutely without inhabitants or the possibility of aid or supplies en route. Confidential dispatches were intrusted to his care, with instructions how to meet emergencies, and during the night after the battle he started out on his dangerous mission. Previous mail parties and a party of expert border scouts which left later were scalped and their bodies and the mails were found where they were massacred.

Phillips, by riding nights and keeping under cover by day, safely reached a telegraph station 40 miles from Fort Laramie just before the Indians attacked and burned it, sent his dispatches, pushed on to Fort Laramie and found that his dispatches had been received and troops were preparing to go to the relief of the endangered garrison.

His heroism was without promise of any special reward, but was executed with rare skill, patriotism and success. His mission practically rescued the whole country from Indian outrages and brought that section immediate relief.

It is impossible to state more strongly the value of his services, which were never adequately requited; and affiant knows of no soldier of the army whose services more absolutely demand recognition for the sake of his family than do those of the brave, modest, faithful John Phillips, since deceased, leaving his widow in a destitute condition. The heroism of Phillips had a tender and noble aspect.

That is the testimony of a brave soldier concerning the heroism of a brave man. And now, after 32 years, the congress has concluded to reimburse his widow for actual losses sustained; but not one penny is given in recompense for his splendid services in saving so many human lives.

AFTER 20 YEARS.

A Lady of Grand Rapids Strikes the Right Thing.

Many extraordinary cases of the work of the little conqueror are coming to light in Michigan. Hundreds of them have been investigated by our representative and each but gives added strength to those which have gone before. Such well deserved words of praise are daily showered on this modern wonder-worker from all parts of the Union. Speaking of her experience a lady of Grand Rapids, Mrs. Jno. Gardner, who resides at No. 309 Second street, says: "For over twenty years I was bothered with kidney trouble, and despite treatment by physicians and using almost every remedy that came to my notice I received no permanent relief until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. No one except those who have been through the mill of kidney complaint can tell the torture that one endures. The constant pains across my back extending up the right side; totally unable to lie on my right side; the stiffness and numbness of my limbs; the excruciating pain; is something much more easy to think about than to express. Many a time my husband has had to rub my back to get up the circulation before I was able to get on my feet. My family prevailed on me to try Doan's Kidney Pills but as I had used dozens of other remedies I had very little hope of finding relief. They persisted in their advice and in the fall of 1897 I used three boxes. I felt like a different person. I was in better health than I had been in years. The pain in my back left, I slept well at night, I could do my house work as well as I ever could, and I give the entire credit Doan's Kidney Pills. I make this statement so that other women who suffer as I suffered may be in a position to know what to use if they wish to get rid of that too prevalent disease, kidney complaint."

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

BRIEFLY STATED.

Interesting and Important Occurrences Reported from Various Localities.

The American Chemical company has purchased the Bay coal mine located near Bay City.

There will be an abundant fruit crop in the belt surrounding Bloomingdale. Wheat also promises well.

The Grand River Valley Masonic Picnic association will hold its annual picnic at Lake Odessa on July 27.

M. L. Stewart, of Owosso, has just completed the fortieth year of continuous business life in that city.

The Muskegon Woman's club has purchased a lot in the central portion of the city and will build a club house.

George L. Lusk, representative from West Bay City, is a candidate for state senator in the Twenty-fourth district.

The number of miners at work in the lake copper country is about 11,000, an increase of 4,000 over four years ago.

The Lake Shore grain elevator at Tecumseh has changed hands and will be enlarged to double its present capacity.

Farm property in the vicinity of Lambertville, Monroe county, was damaged $10,000 by a heavy windstorm.

S. R. Noobler, ex-representative from Arenac county, is a candidate for representative on the silver ticket in that county.

Fred T. Smith, aged 22, a Chicago traveling salesman, was drowned in Lake Michigan near Benton Harbor while bathing.

The bank clearances in Lansing for the first six months of 1898 were $949,657, a very large increase over the corresponding period last year.

Harvesting is in full blast in St. Joseph county. The wheat and hay crops will be very large. The berry crop was the largest in years.

A movement is on foot at Benton Harbor to organize a Pingree presidential club. It is proposed to carry the organization into other states.

Cadillac is soon to have another mammoth woodworking institution. It will be a maple flooring mill and will give employment to about 200 men.

The work of drilling for rock salt at Bay City has been started. It will take six months, working day and night, to put the well down to the desired depth.

The Comstock block and other realty in Big Rapids has been ordered sold for the benefit of the creditors of the failed Mecosta County savings bank.

The attorney-general will set experts at work on the books of the defunct People's savings bank of Mount Pleasant. Nothing will be done until the experts make their report.

Mason county fruit men are shaking their heads and prophesying a very light peach crop this year. Curl leaf, they say, has practically destroyed what promised to be a very large crop.

The bank clearings at Grand Rapids for the last six months aggregate $24,095,704, an increase of 51 per cent. over the same months last year. The June clearings showed the largest increase, being nearly double those of June, 1897.

The Genesee savings bank of Flint has issued a statement proclaiming that there was an increase of a quarter of a million dollars for the six months of 1898 just ended, against a corresponding figure of last year of bank deposits and other resources.

The Michigan Portland Cement company, of Detroit, with a capital stock of $2,500,000, and the Michigan Copper Mining company, with a like capital, have filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The latter corporation will operate the old Minnesota mine in Ontonagon county.

Honored at Harvard.

Boston, Mass., June 30.—At Harvard commencement Friday the following degrees were conferred upon graduates from Michigan: The degree of bachelor of arts was conferred upon Louis Chauncey Ling, of Detroit; bachelor of law upon Walter Dubois Brookins, of Benton Harbor, and Benjamin Williams, Ph. B., of Jackson.

Bennett's Stable Sold.

Jackson, July 2.—The horses and trappings belonging to the late C. E. Bennett were sold at auction at the fair grounds, and generally brought good prices. Rosseli, bay mare, record 2:18¼, brought $325. Rondo, no record, $170, and others in proportion.

Brewery Changes Hands.

Grand Rapids, July 3.—The largest real estate deal for some time has just been consummated in the sale of the Merrick brewery property to J. R. Peterson and Albert Damskey, for $17,000. The brewery was established here 40 years ago by Peter Merrick.

A Good Showing.

Lansing, July 2.—The balance in the state treasury at the close of the fiscal year was $1,216,212, as against $783,888 last year. This increase is due to the prompt payment of state taxes and the fact that $12,000 of the proceeds of the sale of war bonds are on hand.

Honors for a Minister.

Owosso, June 30.—Rev. W. S. Ament, of this city, has just been honored by Oberlin college with the degree of doctor of divinity. Dr. Ament has been a missionary in China 20 years and is home on a leave. He returns to Pekin in September.

Two Miners Killed.

Iron Mountain, July 2.—Prosper Duclann and Charles Cuscol, miners, were killed at the Aragon mine Friday by a fall of earth. Five other men were badly hurt.

Badly Hurt.

Sturgis, July 1.—The son of Charles Ginther, of Sherman township, while driving a binder fell on the elevator and was terribly mangled.

FARM & GARDEN

SIMPLE FISH TRAPS.

They Work Well at the Seasons When the Funny Creatures Are Running Up the Streams.

Fish traps are very convenient methods of taking fish at the seasons when they are running up the streams. They are generally made of laths in the form of a V, with the apex pointed up the stream. Wings are fitted inside, as shown in the upper part of cut, so as to hold the fish which enter, as they have the habit of following around the sides, and in every instance miss the opening by which they entered, and are thus imprisoned, and easily dipped out with a hand net. This method of taking fish is mostly used to take eels, which always come up streams to spawn in the spring, and thus these traps are commonly called eel traps. Other fish which spawn in the fall are thus taken at that season.

There is no reason why the traps should not be made of wire netting, which should not be less than one-inch mesh, so as to let the small fish go through, except that a good many fish will get caught in the meshes, and die before they can be taken out. This is an objection against making the wings of wire, for many fish would be caught by the net and be either lost or be taken out with difficulty. The ordinary method is to place a row of stones in the form of wings from the lower end of the trap across the stream; these turn the fish to the mouth of the trap, which they enter rather than try to get over the stones. This, however, is only possible in shallow streams, and in the shallowest parts of the bed. The trap is generally set in the deepest water, for the fish naturally choose this passageway. The wire netting, of course, would be open to the objection that it would catch all the floating trash going down the stream, and be thus very likely to be broken. This might be easily removed, however, and it is the only objection, except the cost of it, that lies against it.

Another form of trap for fish is also shown in the lower part of the cut. This is a box of any convenient size, set in a stream, with wings placed to direct the fish to the opening. It is open at the front, of course, and the top as well, and two rows of bars, or in this case, of wire netting, are set across as shown. The fish go over the bars and, being stopped by the end of the trap, go down between the bars, and, like a chicken hunting the hole in the fence through which it got into a garden, try everywhere but at the right place. A few may escape, but very few will.—Rural New Yorker.

ALL AROUND THE FARM.

Every animal on the farm should have salt within easy reach.

If you are real, real neighborly you will not borrow much.

All preparation for the season's work should now have been made.

Perhaps the contrary animal thinks you are an unreasonable creature.

Fix up the fences before the stock is turned on pasture. One weak place may prove expensive.

Keep the pocketbook where the wife can get at it. That is right; she helped fill it, if it is filled.

When you are 60, young man, nature will present a bill for all the wild times you are having, and you will pay it, too.

Some people whose fields are weedy and buildings are all to pieces can tell a beautiful story of how to be a model farmer.

Much of the "pure white lead paint" has no white lead in it. It is often best to buy the white lead and oil and mix your own paint.

The demand for pure cider has diminished, it is said, because of the imitations and a poor quality of cider. That sort of thing does not seem to affect the whisky business.

The Illinois experiment station says that corn can be grown, independent of rent, for eight cents a bushel. That includes husking. These people who can grow corn for six and eight cents a bushel are marvels to us. That is all we can say.—Western Plowman.

Clover for Sandy Soil.

On all kinds of soil clover, when fully grown, is a benefit. Its roots break up the heavy clay soils and make them permeable to air and moisture. But on sandy soils a clover growth as often as every two or three years is a necessity. It is only thus that what vegetable matter it contains can be kept from being washed or burned away and wasted. It is often difficult to get a clover catch on sandy soil. Clover needs mineral fertility, both potash and phosphate of lime. In both these sandy soil is generally deficient. There is no better single manure for sandy soil than wood ashes. If from hard wood these will also furnish some lime and phosphate.—Prairie Farmer.

SHORTER CORN STALKS.

Superfluous Growth Which Entails a Very Heavy Loss to Farmers Every Single Season.

In growing farm crops the past 30 years if we could have saved what we have lost directly or indirectly from the superfluous growth of stalk we could easily add several acres to the farm. It took us a good while to discover this. Many people have not even thought of it.

A stalk of corn eight feet high cannot support the ear as easily as one six feet high. Some think that the biggest stalk will bear the biggest ear. No doubt this is true now and then, but it holds true about as often as the biggest cow gives the most milk. The tall stalks are more liable to be blown down than the shorter ones. One year we tested four varieties side by side. The tallest variety was so badly tangled at cutting time that it required twice as much time to put it in the shock as for the others. For a like reason the ears were not so perfect nor so uniformly matured as were those on the stalks of the varieties which stood up. A stalk five feet high with normal growth would about fill the bill, if other things are equal, for fodder and grain. As compared with the eight-foot stalk the labor of handling would be about one-half. Corn harvesting machinery will hardly come into universal favor unless we reduce the height of the corn stalks.

In 1896 we had the best prospect of a large yield of oats that we had had for years. The stalks grew and grew until they were higher than the hedge. A violent storm laid everything flat. Our experience in cutting these oats will be remembered when many other things are forgotten. We were not growing oats for the straw, but for the grain. If the plants had been half as high we would have had perhaps twice as much grain and less unpleasant experience in harvesting.

The same is in a measure true of wheat. If the wheat plant when matured stands 30 inches high it can be easily reaped, and there will be scarcely any danger of lodging. It is a pleasure to handle sheaves which are two feet long as compared with the heavy, shapeless bundles four feet long. We always try to leave as much of the straw in the field in the shape of stubble as circumstances permit.

Our seedsmen can aid us by improving varieties along the line of shorter stalks.—Robert L. Dean, in Agricultural Epitomist.

HANDY STONE BOAT.

The Implement Here Described and Illustrated Possesses Many Advantageous Features.

A stone boat is a necessity on most farms and the one shown in the accompanying illustration will be found very handy. The runners (a) are about six inches thick with a natural crook at the forward end. The narrow strip (b) running parallel with the runner and holding down the cross boards is of three-fourths inch elm. The front plank in the platform is two inches thick. The whole structure is held together by wire spikes. In driving these use a small bit for starting the hole, as this will prevent splitting the material.

The pole (e) shown detached is an important feature and should never be omitted. The chain (d) passes freely through the mortise in the pole and by passing a small bolt through a link in the chain better control can be had of the stone boat descending a hill or backing the team. The draft, however, should be wholly from the steel coupling and not from the chain. The small standards can be used for supporting side boards if these are wanted.—Orange Judd Farmer.

How Plaster Helps Clover.

Land plaster has a great affinity for water, and where it is sown early it probably takes some moisture from the air which it carries into the soil. In this air moisture there is some carbolic acid gas and a trifling amount of ammonia, as there is in all dew. This ammonia is direct food for all plants, but for clover it acts as a double stimulus, for it excites the formation of those nodules on the roots which are known to decompose air in the soil, and make even its free nitrogen available. All air has 80 per cent. of nitrogen, but as the roots of clover decompose it, plants cannot get any benefit from it. So the small amount of ammonia in the dew which the clover attracts from the air may be likened to bait, as it secures in a few weeks an amount hundreds of times greater than itself.—American Cultivator.

Far Better Than Spraying.

Wormy apples may be prevented by placing barrels half filled with water in the orchard just as the trees are about to open their blossoms. The moths which fly between sunset and ten p. m. can be captured easily by suspending over the water in the barrel a lighted lantern. They are then attracted by the light and eventually find themselves in the water; ten lanterns to 40 trees is ample. I tried this plan and succeeded beyond question. Last season I omitted to do it, and got caught with the worm again. This season I do not propose to be caught, so am getting ready my barrels and lanterns. My contention is that the moth is captured before she has deposited her eggs in the expanded blooms.—N. Butterbach, in American Gardening.

Near Guantanamo, Cuba,
June 14, 1898.

This is to the whole family, as I have not time to write to each one. We landed here, near Santiago, on the 10th and have had a hot time ever since. Have lost twelve men, with six wounded. I am writing this on the bottom of my tin plate in the pit, back of a gun and with a Spanish pencil.

The afternoon we landed here we had a little skirmish and lost a sergeant. That night we had another attack and I was right behind the Dr. when a bullet went through his head.

As I write I can hear a lot of our men and a gang of Cubans over in the hills peppering away like sin. The Spaniards that are here are what is called the volunteer force of the Spanish army. They are more like bushman than anything else. We have about a hundred Cubans with us and some more coming. Right here I will say that I have the highest admiration for the Cubans. They are not much for looks but they have more nerve than any other class of men on earth. I would rather run into a buzz saw working over time than to get mixed up with one of those machetes.

The other night one of the men tapped my six-shooter, and said, "heap no good this good, this good," and drew out a wicked looking knife and commenced figuring with it. I jumped back and informed him that he might think it was good but I should consider it heap bad if he was after me.

The other night before our gun was mounted, I was in the rifle pits and those rifle balls were humming along over our heads like fun, and that Cuban colonel was dancing around and shouting orders to his men with the bullets spinning all around him. How he ever got out whole is more than I know. Still he never seemed to mind it. That same night I got one of those Spaniards Arthur wanted, and I'll get the other to-night, for there will be a hot time. The same night I saw a greaser stick his head up from behind a stone and get ready to start an argument. I raised up a little and jerked a couple of lumps of lead at him, and he passed out of commission immediately. I went out the next morning and got some relics, among which was a machete. I'll try and bring it back with me if I can hang on to it that long. It is very hot down here. We carry our rifles with us whenever and wherever we go. We are located on the top of a high hill, with entrenchments thrown up all around and fortified with our field pieces and two rapid fire guns. By the way those rapid firing guns are a caution. They can fire two hundred balls a minute. This morning as we were down at the foot of the hill eating breakfast, one company at a time of course, a party of Spaniards sneaked up through the bushes and fired on us, doing no damage except to stop our meal, which was enough. We jumped into the rocks and soon had them scurrying off into the hills. We shelled a block house a little way from here the first morning that we were here, put a shell right through it and it was our gun that did it, I feel a little stuck up about it. The Cubans went over to inspect the ruins. When they came back they reported 15 dead greasers in it. We have shelled the woods at different times and the Cubans says that the woods are full of dead Spaniards. I guess they thought that we were slow when we first came down here, but they have changed their opinions since then. The Cubans and one company of our men are out now and have driven the Spaniards into a block house, and as I write I can hear the guns of a gunboat knocking it about their ears. Last night I had a good night's rest, for the first time since I have been here. I rolled up in my blanket and slept like a log. There was no trouble except when one of their sharpshooters would get a little ambitious and try to pot one of our sentries, then the balls would go bin, buzz along over our heads. I like this: There is just enough excitement about it to make it lively. You should see this gang. We are the most rusty looking lot of mortals alive. A gun pit in this clay is anything but a clean place and our once white clothes are a sight. I am burned to a nice coffee brown. When we drove the Spaniards out of their shacks, they left in such a hurry that they left their knapsacks on the wall and their hammocks strung up with their blankets in them. I got some of their shells and some other relics before we burned the place. I will send you an article about the Marine Corps. It will help you to understand what we are. We seem to be on the healthy part of the island. There is little danger of disease. Give my regards to the Dr. and other friends. In haste and a dirty gunpit, therefore excuse appearances.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Review of Reviews continues strong on war topics. In the July number the editor reviews the whole campaign up to the landing of our troops for the advance on Santiago, showing the precise part which Lieut. Hobson's exploit had in the general scheme; Dr. William Hayes Ward treats of Hobson's career as that of the typical young American student; Edwin Emerson, Jr., the brilliant young newspaper correspondent, gives notes of his adventurous journeyings in Porto Rico last month.

George Kennan's "Story of the War," now appearing in the Outlook, is constantly growing in interest. One of his latest letters takes up the subject of the management of the Florida camps and the starting of the Shafter expedition. Mr. Kennan treats this important topic freely and frankly, but with great fair-mindedness, admitting all possible excuses, and yet pointing out many ways by which prudence and foresight could have avoided irritating delays. Mr. Kennan is now in Cuba and his comments on the Santiago campaign will be awaited eagerly. ($3 a year. The Outlook Company, 287 4th Avenue, New York.

OPEN FIRE ON SANTIAGO.

The First Shots Came from the Guns of the Enemy, and Are Soon Silenced.

LAND AND SEA FORCES WORK TOGETHER

All the Spanish Forces Are in the Intrenchments—The Opposing Forces in Line of Battle—Ready for the Final Assault—Much Talk of Peace in Madrid.

Washington, July 11.—Shortly after midnight the war department gave out the following dispatch from Gen. Shafter: "Enemy opened fire a few minutes past four with light guns, which were soon silenced by ours. Very little musketry firing and the enemy kept entirely in their entrenchments. Three men slightly wounded. Will have considerable forces to-morrow, enough to completely block all the roads on the northwest."

Bombarding the Trenches.

Word has been received from Gen. Shafter that owing to his belief, which is equivalent to a moral certainty, that all the Spanish soldiers have left the city and are in the intrenchments, he is bombarding the intrenchments with a view of saving the buildings in the city for future occupancy.

Both land and sea forces are working in harmony, Sampson throwing 1,100-pound shells from his 13-inch guns across the six miles of country separating the sea from the city, and Shafter firing from his howitzers, ten at least of which he had in position early in the day.

Much Peace Talk.

Madrid, July 11.—Information received from the most reliable sources is to the effect that the darkest pessimism pervades Madrid officialdom. The hopelessness of the war is finally reccognized and the peace idea now seems to predominate in the cabinet, and negotiations are considered urgent.

ENDS THE FIGHTING.

Gen. Shafter's Assault on Santiago Checked by a Flag of Truce.

Off Santiago de Cuba, via Playa del Este, July 12.—At half-past nine Monday morning, after several range-finding shots over the ridge protecting Santiago from the sea, the United States cruiser Newark opened fire into the city with her eight-inch guns. The signal corps officers stationed on top of the ridge reported the effect of the shots. The New York, Brooklyn and Indiana participated in the firing, at intervals of five minutes. The bombardment lasted for two hours, when Gen. Shafter reported that the shells were mostly falling in the bay and doing but little damage. The last shot, however, struck a prominent church in the heart of the city, which was heavily stored with powder and ammunition, causing a tremendous explosion. The extent of the damage is not yet known. When the warships ceased firing and before Gen. Shafter had begun a land attack, a flag of truce was seen coming from the city. The object of this is not known.

Miles Reaches Santiago.

Washington, July 12.—The war department is advised of the arrival off Santiago Monday of the auxiliary cruiser Yale with Gen. Miles and his staff and a portion of Garretson's brigade. Gen. Miles had a conference with Admiral Sampson and later conferred with Gen. Shafter by means of the signal service telephone wires.

Spanish Cabinet Resigns.

London, July 12.—The Madrid correspondent of the Times telegraphing Monday says: Senor Sagasta went to the palace and tendered his resignation and that of the cabinet. It is said that he advised the queen regent to appoint a new cabinet, largely consisting of the military element, which would not necessarily mean the adoption of a warlike policy, but probably the reverse.

THE FLAG OF TRUCE.

It Is Still Flying from the Spanish Lines at Santiago.

Washington, July 13.—The impression prevailed in official circles when public business closed for the day that the flag of truce set in the Spanish lines at Santiago at two o'clock Monday afternoon was still flying, and that negotiations continued looking to a surrender. The basis for these negotiations naturally could not be very broad in view of the injunction the president laid upon Gen. Shafter to accept nothing less than unconditional surrender, but it is supposed that time may be consumed through the indulgence of Gen. Shafter in allowing the Spanish commander to communicate by cable with Capt. Gen. Blanco in the effort to obtain his assent to the surrender. Gen. Toral undoubtedly has before his eyes the vindictive abuse heaped upon the unfortunate naval commander Cervera for surrendering at all, so that he probably will be bound by the direction of Blanco in his own case.

Miles Takes Command.

With the Army Before Santiago, via Playa del Este, July 13.—Maj. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who Tuesday morning assumed command of the American forces in the field, promised to take Santiago within three days. Gen. Miles declares that the campaign must end quickly. With that object in view the American commander, who arrived on the Yale Monday morning, hastened to the front and took charge. He found 40 pieces of light artillery mounted and ready for use. Shocked at the condition he found in Siboney, Gen. Miles immediately ordered that the town be destroyed by fire. He decided upon this as a sanitary measure, and several wooden buildings, including one in which Gen. Miles established himself temporarily, are in flames.

The Navy's Problem.

Off Aguadores, July 11, via Kingston, Jamaica, July 13.—The United States navy has the following problem presented to it: What is the best manner of effectively bombarding a city distant 4½ miles and concealed from view by a range of hills 250 feet high at its lowest part? The problem has been satisfactorily solved. So, if the army hereafter never fired a shot and merely guarded the roads, the navy could make Santiago untenable, if indeed it did not totally destroy it in a few days.

To Remove the Mines.

Washington, July 13.—The secretary of war has ordered the removal of all the submarine mines which now protect the harbors of the United States against the entry of hostile ships. This action was decided upon at Tuesday's cabinet meeting. For weeks past, in fact almost since the beginning of hostilities, the war department has been deluged with protests from the commercial centers of the country against the continuance of these mines, which operated to the great detriment of commerce.

Spain's Terms of Peace.

Madrid, July 13.—The possibility of peace with the United States is being widely discussed in the newspapers and by the public. The conservative papers declare Spain is prepared to accept peace, provided it implies only the loss of Cuba. But, they assert, Spain would prefer war a outrance if the United States should claim Puerto Rico, the Philippine islands or an immense indemnity which it would be impossible for Spain to pay.

THE HORSESHOE AT SANTIAGO'S DOOR.

Richard Harding Davis reports that the American lines around Santiago are now in the shape of a horseshoe, five miles in length.

WEEKLY WAR HISTORY.

Complete Record of Events Told in a Few Lines Covering All Important News.

THURSDAY, JULY 7.

The Spanish cruiser Alfonso XII. tried to escape from Havana harbor and was destroyed by the blockading ships.

A conference between Shafter and Sampson resulted in a decision to await army reenforcements before bombarding Santiago.

Fifty Spanish prisoners on board the Harvard made an attempt to overpower the crew and escape and six were killed and 12 wounded by the guards.

Secretary Long closed contracts for the raising of the wrecks of the Spanish warships strewn along the coast of Cuba for a distance of 20 miles west of Santiago harbor.

President McKinley issued a proclamation calling upon the American people to offer thanks to Almighty God, who has led our hosts successfully in the war with Spain, and, above all, to pray for a speedy peace.

FRIDAY, JULY 8.

Maj. Gen. Nelson A. Miles, commanding the army, left Washington for Santiago.

The auxiliary cruiser Osceola captured a Spanish lighter loaded with provisions and valued at $50,000.

A dispatch from Admiral Dewey says that Aguinaldo has proclaimed himself president of the revolutionary republic.

An urn containing the ashes of Capt. Gridley, formerly captain of the Olympia, arrived in San Francisco on a steamer from Hong-Kong.

Commodore Watson's squadron has been ordered detached from Admiral Sampson's fleet, and it is expected to start without delay for the Spanish coast.

Lieut. Hobson and his seven companions, who sunk the Merrimac in the harbor at Santiago June 3, were exchanged for one Spanish lieutenant and 14 noncommissioned officers and privates.

The death of Admiral Villamil, who was in command of the Spanish torpedo boat squadron at Santiago, and the suicide of Capt. Lazaga, the commander of the Infanta Maria Teresa, are announced.

SATURDAY, JULY 9.

Admiral Camara, with his fleet, which had passed through the Suez canal, has been ordered to return to Spain.

During a severe storm off the coast of Cuba 11 lighters en route to Santiago in tow of tugs were swamped and lost.

The mayor and civil government of Siboney have surrendered to Gen. Shafter and they assert further resistance is madness.

Col. Wood, of the rough riders, has been made a brigadier general, and Lieut. Col. Roosevelt has been promoted to the colonelcy of the regiment.

The loss of Cervera's fleet increases the danger of revolution in Spain, and extraordinary precautions are being taken to prevent a successful uprising.

Gen. Shafter's armistice with the Spaniards at Santiago was extended and an American telegraph operator was sent to Gen. Linares to permit him to open communication with Madrid in regard to surrendering.

SUNDAY, JULY 10.

Puerto Rico is to be invaded immediately after the fall of Santiago. Gen. Miles will command the expedition.

President McKinley refused the offer of Gen. Linares, Spanish commander at Santiago, to surrender conditionally.

President McKinley has decided to promote both Sampson and Schley, but has not determined to what grade they will be elevated.

Thousands of refugees from Santiago have flocked to the American lines, and the problem of feeding them is a serious one for Gen. Shafter.

MONDAY, JULY 11.

Admiral Camara's fleet sailed from Port Said for Cartagena, Spain.

Madrid is cast in deepest gloom by the recent events of the war, and the officials talk more strongly of negotiations for peace.

Admiral Sampson reported that if proper wrecking appliances were sent at once the Spanish cruisers Vizcaya, Teresa and Colon could be saved.

A detailed account has been published of Spain's naval losses—21 warships and 21 merchantmen, as against practically no losses on the American side.

The cruiser St. Louis reached Portsmouth, N. H., with Admiral Cervera, 50 officers and 692 sailors, all from the Spanish fleet destroyed on July 3 at Santiago.

The official list of casualties at Santiago on July 1 and 2 is reported by Gen. Shafter to be: Killed, 22 officers, 208 men; wounded, 81 officers, 1,203 men; missing, 79 men.

The bombardment of Santiago by the combined forces under Gen. Shafter and Admiral Sampson was begun, Gen. Toral having refused to surrender unconditionally.

Churches throughout the country, following the suggestion of the president in his proclamation, held thangsgiving services in recognition of the recent American victories over Spain.

TUESDAY, JULY 12.

Gen. Miles arrived at Santiago and held conferences with Admiral Sampson and Gen. Shafter.

Report is made that the Infanta Teresa is the only ship of Admiral Cervera's fleet that can be saved.

Madrid newspapers are urging early negotiations to secure peace in order to obtain better terms.

W. J. Bryan's regiment of Nebraska infantry has been ordered to join Gen. Lee's corps at Jacksonville.

The cruisers St. Paul and Yosemite sunk a Spanish ship at the entrance to the harbor of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

It was cabled from London that France has formally tendered to Spain her good offices at Washington for the negotiations of peace terms.

Premier Sagasta and the entire Spanish cabinet resigned because of irreconcilable differences of opinion on the question of initiating peace negotiations.

For two hours Admiral Sampson's ships threw shells toward Santiago. One of them blew up a church filled with ammunition. Just as Gen. Shafter began his land attack a flag of truce was seen, and the general believes the Spanish troops have taken advantage of the truce to flee from the city.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 13.

Sagasta said in Madrid there was no remedy for Spain but peace.

The war department purchased two Atlantic liners for use as army transports.

It is said the eastern squadron, under command of Commodore Watson, destined to attack the Spanish coast, may sail this week.

It was announced at Washington that Gen. Miles would at once organize an expedition of 30,000 troops at Santiago for the invasion of Puerto Rico.

Gen. Toral has again refused to accede to Gen. Shafter's demand for unconditional surrender and the bombardment of Santiago was expected to be resumed.

The secretary of war has ordered the removal of all the submarine mines which now protect the harbors of the United States against the entry of hostile ships.

The bombardment of Santiago by Sampson's squadron demonstrated that the guns of the fleet can easily destroy the city. The town was set on fire in four different places

The Woolen Mills are making extensive improvements in their buildings. The walls are up for the new dye house and the carpenters are framing the roof. The building has been constructed around the old dye house which is still standing. We understand it will be torn down by the employes, who will be given the material in it for doing the job which will be quite a task. Two new dressing rooms for the use of employes have been built in the annex to the south; these have been completed. The big tank in the tower is also being replaced by a much larger one and the walls are being strengthened to stand the extra strain. The tower will also be made higher to accommodate the new tank, which when filled with water will weigh 40 tons.

Rev. W. C. Stevenson, who was elected chaplain of the 35th regiment over 1000 other applicants, left for Island Lake Wednesday, where he will be examined and if passed will take up his new position.

Marvels of the Graphophone.

One of the wonders of the end of the century is the home graphophone, that will reproduce any kind of music, or any sound. One can arrange a full program of the most attractive band, orchestral or vocal music and vary it every evening. On the graphophone one can record the human voice or any sound, and reproduce it at once. You can keep the voices of your friends to be heard whenever you wish. Graphophones made for home entertainment can be bought as low as $10. Write for catalogue 30 to the

COLUMBIA PHONO-GRAPH CO.,
No. 313 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Arena's bill of fare for July is perhaps the richest that it has ever offered to the public. The famous Russian Count, Leo. N. Tolstoy, contributes an able paper, The Superstitions of Science. John Clark Ridpath has put his best work into his editorial, The Reconquest of the House of Representatives. Probably no more scathing expose of Speaker Reed and his methods of doing business has ever been written. This number of The Arena also contains a thrilling patriotic poem entitled Hobson of Alabama, in which the poet, John Clark Ridpath, immortalizes the brave young Southerner of "Merrimac" fame.

The war leads the July number of Scribner's Magazine. No one saw its beginnings under more favorable circumstances than Richard Harding Davis. As correspondent of the London Times he was accorded every privilege, and was for weeks on the flagship "New York." His account of "The First Shot of the War" and "The First Bombardment" is the graphic picture of what an eye-witness saw when the "Buen Ventura" was taken and Matanzas was bombarded. How it feels to be on a great warship in action is made vivid. Snapshot photographs by Mr. Davis add to the sense of reality. "The ship seemed to work and to fight by herself;" he says, 'you heard no human voice of command." Mr. Davis will write for no other magazine about the war and his articles will be abundantly illustrated.

UNCLE EZEKIEL OBEAR, assessor and tax collector, Beverly, Mass., who has passed the 80th life mile stone, says: "Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine has done a great deal of good. I suffered for years from sleeplessness and nervous heart trouble. Would feel weary and used up in the morning, had no ambition and my work seemed a burden. A friend recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I purchased a bottle under protest as I had tried so many remedies unsuccessfully, I thought it no use. But it gave me restful sleep, a good appetite and restored me to energetic health. It is a grand good medicine, and I will gladly write anyone inquiring, full particulars of my satisfactory experience."

GUESTS FLY FROM FLAMES

A Big Summer-Resort Hotel at St. Joseph Is Totally Destroyed by Fire.

THE DISASTER OCCURS AT DEAD OF NIGHT

One Man Loses His Life—Panic-Stricken Guests Escape a Similar Fate—Building Reduced to Ashes in a Short Time—The Loss is Estimated at $150,000.

St. Joseph, Mich., July 11.—The Hotel St. Joseph, which was destroyed by fire at 12:30 o'clock Sunday morning, was the scene of many narrow escapes as the frightened guests and employes fled before the sudden rush of midnight flame. The destruction was complete, and visitors at St. Joseph during the day, who had expected to dine at the hotel, found only the heap of ruins, in which a searching party was digging for any possible victims of the fire. The loss on the building, which was owned by the Graham & Morton Transportation company, of this city, was $130,000. The insurance carried was $17,500. The finding of the charred and blackened trunk of a man's body amid the debris of the Hotel St. Joseph about noon confirmed the fears earlier expressed that the swift flames had entrapped some occupant of the building, perhaps several, and cut off escape. No the trunk was found, the hands being entirely gone. had evidently been half suffo in the smoke, sought the main exit, and with its crash had been buried in the burning embers. For several hours the body remained unidentified, but early in the evening an examination of articles found with it showed almost conclusively it was that of A. P. Baldwin, of Logansport, Ind., an employe of the hotel.

The midnight flight of guests and servants from the big structure, which was consumed by the flames in less than a half hour, was accompanied by scenes of the utmost confusion and terror. Twenty minutes after the alarm of fire was sounded the entire roof was ablaze, and the flashing light revealed the naked or half-clad forms of men and women, who shrieked and struggled as they scrambled down the veranda steps or out of the lower windows. Many had undertaken to don their clothing, but at the second hurried warning were shoved by main force out upon the lawn in their night garments. Bystanders hurriedly relieved the distress of hysterical, crouching women by offering coats, and in many cases sheets were brought to the rescue of the panic-stricken and half-crazed refugees. A call was made for tugs and ferries to transfer the people across the canal to comfortable quarters. Before they arrived at least one-third of the women had been taken across in rowboats.

An attempt was made while the fire was raging to get the St. Joseph fire engine across the river, but before means had been provided to get it over other buildings threatened were out of danger. An alarm of fire was sounded in St. Joseph and the city department responded promptly, but its services were of no avail.

The first effective alarm was given by the steward, Mr. Shane, who slept on the second floor, at the north end of the hotel, in room No. 70. When he heard the crackling of burning timber and saw the flames and smoke he pressed the electric button and sent a bellboy running through the corridors giving the alarm of fire. Every possible means of transportation for crossing the river to the scene of the ruins was brought into service during Sunday, the hotel ferry, Richmond carrying thousands. Visitors at the scene raked the debris in search of relics. The large chimney stands to mark the location of the building, while masses of iron and other materials lie hot and smoldering around it.

The hotel was 420 feet long and 60 wide, and had accommodations for 600 guests. It was equipped with electric lights, electric bells and rapid transit elevators. In the cold storage house two car loads of fresh supplies had just been placed.

[The Hotel St. Joseph was built in 1889 by John O. Plank at a cost of $130,000. In this enterprise Benton Harbor citizens shared to the amount of $5,000; while St. Joseph's subscription was $25,000. The Hotel St. Joseph enjoyed the reputation of being one of the best planned hotels in the United States. It was run three years under the management of John O. Plank, three years under Charles Young, of Benton Harbor, one year under Miner & Colver, of Chicago, and last year under H. G. Stone, of Chicago. The hotel was refitted this year at a cost of $5,000 and C. M. Edick, of Benton Harbor, made its manager. It was practically owned by the Graham & Morton Transportation company, having been purchased by them under a mortgage in 1893.]

Battles and Diseases.

This is the story of one who participated in many naval and infantry engagements during the war. From wounds received then he suffered for years, but to-day, rejoices in renewed strength.

There is a distinctly peculiar halo that invests the being of an old soldier in the eyes of the present generation. The sight of him arouses a feeling of admiration for his brave deeds and heroic achievements.

Among those who bravely fought was Dr. L. J. Clark, who, when but a beardless boy, heard the tocsin of war sounded.

It fired his patriotic spirit to a fervency that found relaxation only in his realization of fighting in the battles.

To the call of President Lincoln for troops in the latter part of '61, young Clark promptly responded.

There was need of men in the navy, and he joined that service in the mortar fleet of Admiral Porter, which soon after began operations on the Mississippi River.

At the terrific bombardment of the Vicksburg forts, the hero of this story fell on the deck of the Juliette with a shattered arm from a charge of schrapnel.

He lay in the hospital for months, and when he had recovered sufficiently to be moved, was sent to his home at Warren, O.

Though partly incapacitated for active service, his patriotic zeal got the better of him, and when the call for more troops came, young Clark enlisted in a company formed by Capt. Joel I. Aspe, at Warren.

It became Co. H. of the 7th Ohio Volunteers and was sent to the Army of the Potomac under General Grant then campaigning in Virginia against General Robert E. Lee.

In a skirmish near Richmond, he was wounded again and was sent to the hospital. He remained there for some time, but finally recovered, and went home.

Shortly after, he began the study of veterinary surgery, and, when completed, went to Chicago, where he has resided for thirty years, and is now one of the leading surgeons of that profession in the city.

His old wounds began to trouble him several years ago. He grew weak, emaciated and thoroughly debilitated. His friends began to despair of his life.

He was but a shadow of his former self, weighing only 90 pounds, a loss of nearly 50 pounds. He had the best medical attention, but it did not benefit him.

"Finally a friend gave me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," said Dr. Clark. "After taking the pills I was so much benefited that I purchased a half dozen boxes and took them.

"They were of more benefit than the ablest physicians' treatment. By their use alone, I soon regained my strength.

"I weigh 150 pounds now, and except for injuries that can never be remedied, I am as well as ever.

"I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People the best remedy I know of to build up a run-down system."

To-day Dr. Clark is a picture of health. He is 59 years old, an active member of Hatch Post, G. A. R., and resides at 493 Ashland Ave., Chicago.

Many veterans have found Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People of inestimable value in counteracting the unhealthful effects of army life. All druggists sell these pills and highly recommend them.

PE-RU-NA'S VICTORY.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Columbus, O.

DEAR SIR: — I feel like a new woman since using your Pe-ru-na.

Your medicine has helped me so much that I can work and never feel tired out. When I first began to use your medicine I couldn't sweep my own room, run the sewing machine or lift anything, not even a chair. It even hurt me to ride or walk any distance. Now I can do all this, and I believe more, and never feel the effects of it. I feel so proud of the way it has brought me out that I tell it far and near. I can heartily recommend your medicine to any woman suffering from female disease. I know from experience that your medicine will do just what you say it will. I thank you, Doctor, a thousand times for your treatment. I shall recommend your medicine wherever I go. I know what it has done for me and I know it will do the same for others. I feel that there are thousands of other women who would, after using your treatment, as I did, be thankful. I am so glad I got your treatment. This month is the first time in my life that I can remember of having my menses without pain. Why, I can't do anything but recommend Pe-ru-na.—Miss Emma L. Bolden, Wilberforce, O.

The Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., will mail Dr. Hartman's specia' book for women, free on application, to women only. All druggists sell Pe-ru-na

The War.

It matters little to the general result and to the interests of humanity whether the American people, moved by compassion for the Cubans, have undertaken the only unselfish war in history, and are shedding their blood for others; or whether, moved by elemental passion, they are demanding vengeance for the unparalleled treachery and savagery of the destruction of the Maine—not the act of Spain, but the act of Spaniards, and official Spaniards, too; or whether a young and powerful nation has broken the leading strings imposed upon it in its infancy by its nurses, and notified the predatory powers of Europe that the future belongs to it, and it will be consulted in further revisions of the world's map: whatever theory of the impelling cause be nearest to the truth, the result will be the elimination of Spanish Captains-General from the world's tormentors, and the last and the most characteristic act of the nineteenth century will be the expulsion of the nation of the past from the continent of the future.—Fred Perry Powers in July Lippincott's.

Best Papers the Best Mediums.

There is much good solid sense for every advertiser in the following paragraph from a thoughtful eastern advertiser:

The daily paper is by far the safest and most certain method of reaching the public. It should not be difficult for any intelligent man who has lived for any time in a community to know just what papers will serve him as advertising mediums. It isn't at all necessary to examine the books in the newspaper's counting room or to get their affidavits of circulation. A paper that you read yourself and that your neighbors read and respect and that you know to be widely read and respected, you can safely rely on as a satisfactory medium for reaching people of your own kind.

Nickerson will lead the C. E. service at 6:45 p. m. Communion service in the DeSpelder church at 2 p. m.

It had always been supposed by your correspondent that the members of a church society were ladies and gentlemen, but we fear such is not always the case. At a social at Ridgeway some time since the members of a church society got so promiscuous with their patriotism that they threw fireworks on the ice cream tables, drove their partners away, set fire to a lady's gown and acted in general like the members of a band of Sioux Indians. Patriotism is a great thing but like every other good thing it is likely to be misdirected by those over zealous. It is said by those who were there that the next social given by that organization is likely to be dry on attendance.

The White Elephants of Kansas.

Court-houses were built with little regard for the needs of the counties. Out in western Kansas is a court house costing $20,000. With scarcely a load of wood in the county, there is a handsome fireplace in every office. The total population of the county is but 1500, and the bonds of the county have not yet been reduced. Several court-houses, through the process of mechanics' liens and other legal processes, have come to be owned by individuals, who have been puzzled to know what to do with them. —From "New Era in the Middle West," by Charles Moreau, in Harper's Magazine for July.

Unsolicited Advice for Wheelwomen.

Don't try to be entertaining when wheeling on a rough road; an epigram may end in a "header."

Bear in mind that a puncture is greater than etiquette, and a flattened tire a leveler of social distinction; hence it is safe to regard the man whose tool kit saves you from walking home as an instrument of Providence.

Remember that the popular wheelwoman is the one who always helps herself, and always pump up your own tires.

Trundle your own wheel up a hill.

Change your own saddle when it is not properly adjusted.

Carry your own wraps.

Learn to mount without assistance, and save time, trouble and friends.

Never make the mistake of regarding your escort in the light of an express company.

Don't hesitate to play the good Samaritan to wheelers, whether men or women.

Don't discourage beginnings; the wheel will do all that is necessary in that line.

Don't turn corners sharply; for, however much pedestrians may admire your skill, their pleasure is sure to be tempered by the shock to their nervous system.

Don't establish an amateur repair shop in the middle of a narrow highway. You will win admiration and perhaps assistance by considerately keeping out of the way.

Don't permit your sense of the eternal fitness of things to be disturbed because of the attention lavished upon "sporty" bicycle girls; any variety of eccentricity will receive as much.

On the other hand don't be flattered if bystanders notice you; the chances are that your hat has blown askew or that you have made an awkward motion. —From "Bicycling for 1898," by Mary Annable Fanton, in Demorest's Magazine for July.

With five German warships facing Admiral Dewey's fleet at Manilla and the intentions of the German Kaiser still a matter of some doubt, the leading article presented in The Cosmopolitan for July will be read with interest. The forty-six portraits and poses of the Emperor William which illustrate the article are in themselves an extraordinary exhibit. They might be described as "The Evolution of an Emperor shown by forty-six human documents." Undoubtedly so large a number of portraits were never before gathered together of any royal or imperial personage.

John Gibson, who lives southeast of this place, attended the show at the opera house Monday evening leaving his horse under the Congregational church sheds. Early in the evening he was notified that the animal was loose, and to guard against accidents, Mr. Gibson unhitched the horse from the buggy and again tied him under the sheds. When ready to return home, the gentleman found that his intelligent horse had slipped the hitching rope over his head and again ran away. The family rode home with a neighbor and two days thereafter found the horse on the farm of Nate Blanchard.—Hudson Post.

WHAT STAMPS THE GENTLEMAN

Courtesy the Coin that is Always Current in the Best Society.

"In all questions of manners a young man should always remember that while politeness is a good trait to acquire, courtesy is infinitely better," writes Edward Bok on "What Makes a Gentleman" in the July Ladies' Home Journal. "Politeness is manners, but courtesy is heart. Mingling in good society can give us that veneer which the world calls a polish of manners, and true politeness is not to be made little of nor scoffed at. Politeness is a fine art, but is an art pure and simple, even at its best. Infinitely better is the cultivation of that courtesy of refinement which enters into the feelings of others and holds them sacred. What we want our young men to have is courtesy of manner not regulated by social code or professional censor. It is idle to say that courtesy is a relic of old-fashioned days and is no longer looked for. It is as much the current coin of good society as it ever was. More than any other element or grace in our lives, it is instantly felt and recognized, and has an unfailing influence. It calls for respect as nothing else does. Courtesy of manner and courtesy of speech are the gifts a young man should cultivate."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address. F. J. The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

We notice by an exchange that the rule of the road is not in all cases safe. Two cyclists going in opposite directions attempted to pass a loaded vehicle. The wheel going the same way turned to the left, the wheel meeting turned to the right and the consequence was two wheelmen were piled up with broken heads, yet both followed the law of the road. Sharp eyes and good judgement are a material help to any good cause.

Santiago has fallen. The telegram received yesterday afternoon stating this fact was corroborated this morning. General Toral surrendered his entire command to General Shafter at 2 o'clock yesterday, including all the eastern portion of Cuba, its harbors, forts and cities. The Spanish troops will be shipped back to Spain, these number about 30000 men. It would seem that it would have been better to let 'em go back as they came or swim. This last decisive victory we hope will be the means of bringing the war to a speedy ending.

CAMP SURROUNDINGS.

In Camp Thomas, July 11, 1898.

Mr. J. J. Orr,

DEAR SIR AND FRIEND:

I have been here now nearly two weeks and have written on an average about three letters a day, some to the papers, some to societies and the greater number, of course, to friends at home. I am detailed for fatigue today, but as there was no work for this afternoon I was told to go to my quarters and wait orders. While I am thus waiting I will write what I can. From the fact that I don't know the history of your career, how much you are acquainted with army life and the customs of the people in the south here, I hardly know what to write. There is but little that happens in a camp where the soldiers are restricted to a rigid military discipline that is of interest to the outside world, so you will pardon me if I let the affairs of the camp rest and tell you something of the people I have seen here.

The third battalion of the 31st Mich., consisting of Companies A, B, C and G, have twice made forced marches to a rifle range 9 miles east, or nearly so, of the Park, where they have had target practice. It was on these marches that I had the opportunity to study the people and their ways.

I may say at the outset that our feed is simple bread or hard-tack, sow belly and coffee. This all the cooks furnish. Most of the boys think this is poor fare to walk nine miles on and carry a gun, blankets, haversack, canteen, etc., and they buy liberally the pies, cookies, cakes, boiled eggs, fried chickens and all such stuff the farmers bring along to sell. Wednesday and Thursday when we were there we fared sumptuously, at the mercy, however, of our pocketbooks. But there was a sad misunderstanding that made many a Co. C man go hungry to bed Saturday night. The second battalion was out there Friday and Saturday and told the citizens as they term themselves—there would not be any one out there till Monday or Tuesday. Uncle Sam seems to have no regard, however, for the hallowed day while war is on and sent us out just the same on Saturday afternoon; and while the good and pious citizens were worshiping in a little country church not half a mile from the range, our rifles were making the woods and hills ring with their reports. These people not expecting us, had nothing cooked; our cooks, anticipating we would buy our grub, did not take anything much, and we were there hungry with nothing to eat and nothing to buy. I succeeded in getting a couple of pies from a straggling peddler and a few boiled eggs from another. This served me fairly well for supper and breakfast, and for dinner I, in company with Osborne, Doolittle and Hall, went to a farm house about half a mile from where our tents were pitched. This was the best meal I ever saw, at least it seemed so. We had a meal a good deal as a farmer's wife sets out for threshers and the way we piled away the chicken, eggs, biscuits, string beans, dumplings, cookies, cakes and pies along with a dozen kinds of jellies and sauces was a caution. We ate like tramps and only had to pay 35c apiece.

The house was very much like most of the houses around here. 'Twas made of logs and was one story high, having only one room with two beds in one end and the other household furniture, mostly hand-made, was distributed around the house, some of it out doors. The house was 14x18 feet and a little on the aristocratic order as it had a kitchen range instead of the always and ever-ready fireplace at one end of it. The range was a little square stove with four gridles and an oven, the whole thing about the size of a modern gasoline oven. As I said, the house was made of logs and sealed up inside and shingled with boards and shingles split from oak logs. The chimney was built upon a shelf in one corner and was about two feet high, 18 inches in diameter at the base—being conical shape—and 6 inches at the top which was about 4 inches from the roof. It was made of little flat stone and mudded up instead of mortared, looking on the whole like an overgrown chimney swallows nest. There are, of course, better farmers than the one whose house I speak of and who have better dwellings, but this is the kind which is greatly in evidence.

The family consisted of the man, his wife, mother and three children. It was a humble home and a primitive dwelling, but in these same homes is formed and reared a part of our nineteenth century civilization. They are a simple and harmless people who believe in the right and have not ambition enough to attempt to beat you. They are our friends and welcome the sons of those who defeated their coveted idea of an independent soutnern government.

While waiting for my turn to shoot I had the pleasure of a conversation with an old Southern soldier. I told him I had wished to get a talk with one and we visited for an hour. I asked him particularly about the feeling here in the South toward the Northern people and he told me the old prejudice had become pretty well lived out and had died. "There are, of course," he said, "some fools who croak the old complaints of the sixties, but they are few." "As far as I am concerned," he added, "I have not the least bit of enmity toward my Northern brother. I never refuse him entertainment at my house and if I knew him to be a Northern soldier I would take special pains to make my home his resting place. We were defeated in what we thought a just and holy cause, but had the common people known what they now know the war would never have been." He farther went on to say he did not like the sentiment expressed on the buttons, "To Hell with Spain" and the like, and he believed the common people of Spain were human, having pity and sympathy as well as others, but that they were the victims of selfish and unjust rulers. He told me that during the Civil War he had often given his canteen to a wounded Yankee who was crying for water, and then watched his chance to pick up another from a dead man or one that had been lost, and he added that if he were in this war he would do the same for his wounded Spanish brother.

The people here have a characteristic slowness of action and speech. The climate is not conducive to hustle. One had rather sleep or lie in the shade. Their crops are very poor. Ten bushels of corn per acre is a good yield, but they tell me the greater part of the state is very fertile, that this is the largest section of poor land anywhere in the state.

I am getting used to the water and climate first rate. My health is excellent and, though I sleep on the ground with only a rubber blanket under me, I sleep like a tired child at home. The prospects for our going to the front now look very doubtful as, I am told, we have been changed from the 1st to the 3rd division. There is the report that we are liable to go back to Michigan to some fort, but it may be only one of the many reports which are only reports. If you have time and inclination I should be pleased to hear from you.

Yours truly,
HOLLIS TAYLOR,
Co. C, 31st Mich.

A Prayer.

The following is a prayer specially authorized by Bishop Davies for use in churches during the present war:

O, most glorious and gracious Lord God, who sittest on the throne judging right; in this day of war on the land and on the deep, fervently we implore that thou wouldst take the cause into thine own hand, that the safety, honor and welfare of thy people may be secured. We ask thee to guide the counsels of our government, to inspire with true patriotism our people, to protect from the violence of enemies, from sickness and from every evil to which they may be exposed, those who are called into the field, that they may return in safety and honor, or after this painful life ended may dwell with Thee in Life Everlasting; to comfort the loving hearts in the homes they have left, with patience under anxiety and faith in Thy providence; and finally to hasten the return of peace to our land. All to Thy glory, through our blessed Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen.

The Brooklyn Exponent says: "It is discovered that farmers are prohibited from killing crows which devastate their corn fields by an act of the legislature of 1897. Act No. 159 provides that certain birds, except black-birds, blue jays, English sparrows and butcher birds, must not be killed in this state. In reply to an inquiry from E. R. Bloomer, of Farmington, the attorney-general holds that the crow is an insectiverous bird, and as it is not excepted under the statute it is protected by law from the shot-guns of the farmers.". This is the usual effect of about one-third of the laws passed by our brilliant legislators. The slipshod methods of making laws is something to make our ancestors turn in their graves and groan.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

We were invited to take a look at the new engine at the car shops by Master Mechanic Stokes Tuesday and incidentally took in the rest of the buildings. The engine which was made by the Buckeye Engine Works of Salem, O., has been placed in position and started by the painstaking and conscientious work of the company's expert, Mr. James Goshen, who spared no pains to explain the workings of the big machine. The speed has been reduced so that the horsepower is about 100, and standing twenty feet away one would scarcely know the engine was in motion it runs so quietly and this too with no load whatever to steady it. The exhaust steam passes through a series of coils which warm the water before it enters the boiler and in winter this exhaust steam will be used to heat the big building. This engine is the latest model of its kind and fed by the two mammoth boilers, adjacent will furnish oceans of power for the machine shop. A big well has also been dug just south of the shops which supplies all the water necessary for running the plant, a large pump in the boiler room doing the work of raising the water. In the stable we found men busy washing out the locomotive boilers which after three or four runs become clogged with the minerals and impurities of the boiled water. The flues also become encrusted with a scale which even constant washing fails to remove and after a year's run a locomotive boiler has to have a new set of insides, the flues are taken out and replaced by new ones and the scale which is as thick as the iron itself is knocked off, the ends trimmed up and new pieces welded on.

Mr. Stokes tells us that most of the work done in the machine shop for the next few months will be boiler work, the shops at Lima not having had the proper facilities for doing the work. A big water tank will soon be built along the main track and water for the engines pumped from their own well by their own power and supplied independent of the D. T. & M. tank from which the engines at present get their liquid refreshments.

Wm. Askin was busy laying a cement floor in the boiler room and workmen were putting a plank floor in the machine shop. Partitions will be put in here and the divisions of labor kept separate, the engine will also be enclosed in a little room of its own to protect it from the dirt of the shop. In the paint shop a number of painters, some of them local men, were putting the finishing touches on a finely painted and decorated car which is one of three which will compose a train soon to be seen running over the line. Mr. Stokes states that the work about the buildings now is of the dragging kind, has to be done but is slow tinkering work and that if this was completed he would at once have the big force here and at work. Asked how many men would be employed, he said that would be regulated by the amount of work the road required but that there would be a big force.

We came away thinking that the car shops were something for Tecumseh to be proud of and feeling under great obligation to the Master Mechanic and Mr. Goshen for their many courtesies extended.

In the past few weeks, the Toledo & Northwestern project shows signs of new life. Its projectors are working on the right of way to Hanover. At that point the road would connect with the D., T. & M. which lets the new road into Toledo. It is reported that the promoters are endeavoring to secure the co-operation of Mr. Brice. He is not asked to invest in the enterprise, but to assist in securing certain rights of way for the new road. It is argued that the Toledo & Northwestern would form a good feeder for the D., T. & M. The offices of the Toledo & Northwestern have been opened again at Albion, and every effort is being made to push the project. About three months ago the work on the road was suspended, and it was generally believed that it would go the way of hundreds of other proposed lines. Later developments seem to indicate that the promoters have not given up the fight. Time will only tell what they can accomplish.—Toledo Blade.

The Evening Journal says all the general offices of the Detroit and Lima Northern railroad will be moved to Detroit on the 15th of this month. At present the offices are scattered, some being in Tecumseh, Lima, O., and New York city, and one or two in Detroit. The entire sixth floor of the Hammond building has been leased for the use of the road. Among the officials who will be located here are: J. R. Megrue, general manager; C. A. Chambers, general freight and passenger agent; E. W. Hiner, assistant general freight and passenger agent; J. R. Hawkins, general superintendent; W. S. Allen, auditor; W. C. Brown, treasurer; C. H. Roser, chief engineer; W. H. Yeazell and W. O. Hunt.—Times.

Charles Haskell, vice president of the D. & L. N., was in the city this morning on his way to St. Marys. With him were other gentlemen interested in the new road. Mr. Haskell stated this morning that the road from St. Johns to St. Marys will be rapidly pushed to completion, and that already rails were being laid west of St. Johns. By the first of next month the management of the D. & L. N. system expect the extension to Columbus to be completed and in operation.—Lima Democrat.

Gene Pattison brought in a collection of photographs from Camp Thomas Chickamauga, Tuesday, which were sent to him by his son Harry who is a member of Co. C. 31st. The pictures show several scenes from the top of Lookout Mountain, the 31st regiment band, the boys digging trenches and a typical camp barber shop with all the appliances thereof. The chair is made of pieces of timber and drygoods boxes, the shop is roofed by the blue sky and a big shade tree. Eddie Gray is the tonsorial artist, the man in the chair is not known to us, but several of our boys are standing around waiting for the call, "next."

Jelly tumblers 25c. per doz. at Moore's.

The Norvell Correspondent of the Brooklyn Exponent tells this on an old Tecumseh boy who will no doubt Walkeround some one's collar for giving the thing away even in Jackson.

A pathetic little incident took place a few days ago fourteen miles west of here. A young man who passes through here every day, as a government employe, and has relatives up town, possesses what he is pleased to call his flower garden, in which is to be found everything from sweet peas to pig weeds, all in full vigor; among the rest some choice beets. On the occasion in question he pointed dramatically to a beet, and asked a lady friend what the difference was between that and himself? She replied, "That's alive! Young man (ruminating) "Live beet" —"Dead beat"—"Aw!" Is that original? Better notify our Norvell friends that they may wear proper mourning.

The war with Spain may soon be ended. We are making war on the price of shoes for a short time. Come and get the best. KARNER BROS.

Tuesday was an unlucky day for wheelmen on the bicycle path between here and Ridgeway. Some one who is supplied with anything but brains carefully planted carpet tacks along the path with the desired results. No less than half a dozen wheels came in with a sample of new tacks and one or more holes in their tires. The samples were big headed fellows and were undoubtedly bought for the purpose. Most of the punctures were easily repaired, but the tires on one young lady's wheel were ruined. Now we're only guessing but we doubt if it would be very healthy for the sower of those tacks to be found out and as there is a liklihood that he may be, we can't promise what won't happen to him. It has been by hard work for years that the wheelmen, drivers and pedestrians have finally got on an amicable understanding; of course there are a few left in each class who will act hog and play dirt, but we are glad to say they are gradually growing less.

Monday's Detroit Free Press contains a portrait of Aunt Maria Hixon, of Clinton, together with a brief sketch of the venerable lady's life. She was for two years a resident of this village when she came to Michigan in 1826, but has since that time lived in our neighboring village and has hosts of friends in both places.

The animotoscope afforded an interesting and highly enjoyable entertainment at the Croswell last evening. The pictures being the best ever exhibited in Adrian and were deserving of a much larger crowd than witnessed them. The scenes reproduced were wonderfully realistic and lifelike. The marching soldiers, the wreck of the Maine, the funeral procession of the Maine victims were reproductions of photographs taken by special arrangements of the New York Journal.—Adrian Press.

If a word to the wise is sufficient there must be a lack of wisdom among wheel riders here. Both local papers have called attention to the fact that wheelmen, and wheelwomen too, should observe the rules of the road. Those who do net know these rules are unfit to use the streets. This is especially true in the evening when one may count fifty wheels in sight at one time. Remember if you get your wheel smashed or even get crippled for life while riding on the left side of a street, you have no redress. Neither have you any rights there and may be run down with impunity by those going in an opposite direction. Tuesday evening a party started out to investigate this practice and they found that at least one-third of the riders would stick to the left side if the path happened to be better there. A tandem, driven at a hot pace, was met on Pottawatamie street with no light on and religiously keeping to the left. Why not make a path on both sides before some one gets killed, or a complaint is made for violating the ordinance which covers this point; while it hardly seems necessary yet this may be the only way to bring riders to their senses.

Elegant Lemons at Moore's.

The worldly effects of the late George C. Martin have been moved into the Cheever block and will be sold at auction by the administrator, Jas. H. Heck. Gathered together in this small space is the life work of an eccentric man. Tools of every description all of the best, a library consisting of over 500 volumes, antique furniture of every description, paintings carvings, a chemical laboratory, an immense Swiss music box and a thousand other articles of interest grouped into one museum. Last but not least is the exact reproduction in the minutest detail of the battleship, Dakota. This model is about ten feet long and in its palmy days was capable of running 4 miles an hour. Its armament consisted of 94 brass cannon and the expense of the boat was $1,500. Before building this model Mr. Martin expended $60 in books to read up on naval construction, and spent several years in study. Then when confronted by a knotty point in his design he would hunt up some Jack tar or man-of-war's man and secure the desired information. One may well believe in looking over the collection that this little man was endowed with a great brain and an indomitable will power. As we have said, these things were his life and he devoted himself assiduously to them.

Letter from Chickamauga.

Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga.
Co. C, 31st Mich. July 10, 1898.

A notorious American, commonly known as G. C., once said, "The soil remains in its place." The 31st Mich. is still in Chickamauga and bids fair to remain there indefinitely. Of course, there are many rumors of removal but they are practically without foundation. Our friends can make up their minds to address us at this point for some time to come. This was almost the first regiment of volunteers to come to this point and it looks very much as if it would be the last to leave. During the week just past the 2nd and 3rd Wisconsin and 16th Pennsylvania left for Santiago by way of Charleston, S. C. They are being hurried to the relief of Gen. Shafter. Our boys looked at them as they marched out with envy in their hearts.

Wednesday afternoon our battalion went on a twenty-four hour forced march to the rifle range near Greyville, Ga. The weather was abominably hot and our arms, haversacks, canteens, blankets and shelter tents got tremendously heavy before the eight mile march was over. To cap the climax, it rained during the evening which added to the discomfort. About eight hours practice was had on the range and some very good scores were made. Capt. Kyle made fourteen out of a possible fifteen at 100 yards. One battalion goes to the range each day and our boys repeated the dose again yesterday.

Tomorrow morning there will be regimental inspection in the field near Alexander's bridge. This will be in heavy marching order. The inspection will be the most severe we have ever had. Arms, clothing, tents and everything will be inspected. This may presage a movement somewheres. Everyone in the regiment hopes so at any rate.

One of the most amusing things—to witness—in camp life is the weekly wash day. It is supremely ridiculous to see a great big six-footer standing over a washboard with aching back, laboriously washing out his unmentionables. And then to see them wring their clothes. Two strong men holding each end of a pair of trousers will tug and twist as if they were having a tug-of-war and then won't get them half as dry as one feeble woman in the last stages of consumption. It took me four hours this morning to wash four pieces and they are not clean yet.

Water melons, peaches, cantaloupes, apples, blackberries and plums can be had in great abundance and at reasonable prices. I saw a 400 acre strawberry patch a few days ago.

We received our pay about eleven o'clock last Sunday night so the boys are once more able to enjoy some of the good things of life. All the regiments in camp have now been paid off and business is booming in Chickamauga.

All of Co. C remain in good health except a very few suffering from minor ailments. Private Spofford, who enlisted from Ann Arbor, has been transferred to the ambulance corps, much to the regret of his comrades. Several corporals and a sergeant will be appointed in a short time.

The new recruits are rapidly taking on the ways of veterans. They stood the forced marches remarkably well and are a valuable addition to the company. In fact nearly all the boys are good on the march, very few dropping out before the end of the journey. Since we have shot at the target no one can say we have not smelled powder for Cuba. FRANK C. DUDLEY.

AN ATTRACTIVE PLANT.

New Ornamental Asparagus Which Is Very Popular Wherever It Has Been Introduced.

One of the best and most attractive house plants of recent introduction is Asparagus Sprengeri, which is rapidly superseding the once so popular smilax for floral decorations. Our engraving shows its graceful form and habit when grown as a pot plant, but it is equally well suited for planting in hanging baskets. Its fronds are frequently four feet long, of a rich shade of green and very useful for cutting, retaining their freshness for weeks after being cut. As a house plant it has exceeded expectations, as it stands dry atmosphere better than the older kinds of ornamental asparagus, and is not particular as to any special position. It delights in a well-enriched soil, rather light in composition, with plenty of drainage, and grows very rapidly. It is decidedly pretty when in bloom, its little flowers being pure white on short racemes, and the anthers are of a bright orange color.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Cream Cake for Tea.

Beat three eggs until thick and light, add gradually two cupfuls of fine granulated sugar, and beat again. Dissolve one scant teaspoonful of soda in one tablespoonful of boiling water, stir it into three cupfuls of thick, sour cream, and add to the eggs and sugar. Stir in quickly one-quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half of a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg and sufficient sifted flour to make a thick drop batter. Beat hard for three minutes, divide into two pans, and bake in a moderate oven. A delicious cake, which must be eaten within 24 hours after baking.

How to Remove Spots.

Spots and marks on woolen gowns are easily removed by rubbing them well with a cake of magnesia. Hang the gown away for a day or two and then brush thoroughly. If the spot has not entirely disappeared repeat the process. Other gowns besides those of wool can often be cleaned by this means, and laces that are slightly soiled are freshened by rubbing them well with magnesia and allowing it to remain on the lace for a short time.

Position When Sleeping.

Doctors say that insomnia is sometimes brought on by incorrect position. Medical authorities recommend that people should lie on the right side, because when the body is thus placed the food gravitates more easily out of the stomach into the intestines, and the weight of the stomach does not compress the upper portion of the intestines. Children should not be permitted to sleep with the arms thrown over the head.

The Sweet Young Thing.

Emma—And you say she was married ten years ago, and it has not changed her a bit?

Eliza—Not a bit; she is still only 18 years old.—Yonkers Statesman.

MEATS AND VEGETABLES.

A List of Those Which, According to the Highest Authorities, Should Be Served Together.

Roast beef may be served with tomatoes prepared in all styles; baked, mashed and roasted potatoes, baked or browned sweet potatoes, asparagus, spinach, Brussels sprouts, string beans or cauliflower, lima beans.

Fillet of beef—With stuffed tomatoes, stuffed peppers, potatoes prepared in fancy styles, asparagus heads or artichokes.

Beefsteak — Lyonnaise potatoes, French fried potatoes, plain fried, chips, fried tomatoes, asparagus or spinach.

Mignon of fillet—Vegetables, macedal, timbals of vegetables, potato balls.

Beef a la mode—Carrot balls, potato balls, green peas, asparagus heads, glazed onions.

Sour roast — Potato dumplings, stewed prunes.

Braised beef and pot roast may be served with any kind of vegetable in season.

Corned beef—Boiled cabbage, cabbage rolls, sprouts, boiled beets, turnips, carrots, beef salad or tomato salad.

Roasted mutton and lamb—Green peas, string beans, Savoy cabbage, cauliflower, spinach, green corn, potatoes, white and Russian turnips, Brussels sprouts, Lima beans.

Boiled mutton—Cabbage, string beans, white turnips, creamed Russian turnips, cauliflower or boiled potatoes.

Lamb and mutton chops—French fried potatoes, baked potatoes, Lyonnaise potatoes and plain fried, fried tomatoes, egg plant, green corn, creamed corn, stewed and boiled tomatoes or potato balls with parsley sauce.

Veal, roasted—Spinach a la creme, potatoes mashed or plain boiled, or cauliflower au gratin or a l'Allemande, French peas, carrots a la Julienne, Brussels sprouts or asparagus.

Veal cutlets—Tomato sauce, potato straws, French fried, mashed, baked or plain boiled; potatoes creamed, wax beans a la creme, asparagus or spinach.

Pork, roasted—Mashed turnips and potatoes, apple sauce, red cabbage, German style; sauerkraut, potatoes plain, boiled or mashed, creamed corn or beans of all kinds.

Rabbit, roasted—Red cabbage a l'Allemande, and potato croquettes.

Venison—Vegetables, or with compote and salad. It is nice with currant jelly or currant jelly sauce and crouton or small potato croquettes or red cabbage cooked with claret.

Canvasback ducks or other wild ducks are generally served with fried hominy and currant jelly.—N. Y. Press.

How to Press Velvet Goods.

If there is velvet to press heat a soapstone quite hot, cover with a damp cloth, lay it on the velvet with the right side up, and brush lightly and quickly with a clothes-brush until the surface is as smooth and velvety as when new. As the damp cloth over the stone becomes dry, it must be wet again, as it is the steam, with the brushing, which lifts up the tiny threads and restores the beauty of the velvety surface.

HANDSOME GOWN IN ROSE AND GRAY.

A Hint for Brunettes Who Would Like to Possess an Elegant Dinner Dress.

For a handsome dinner gown, if you are a brunette, get gray chiffon, or any thin gray material, Henrietta will do, and embroider it with tiny pink rose-like figures.

Into the bodice set a vest of rose velvet edged with gray chiffon and trim the neck and sleeves with the same.

The rose velvet is pretty if embroidered in green threads, thus giving all of nature's best colors, rose, gray and green.

Two panels of chiffon can be put upon the skirt in jabot shape.

Line the dress with an inexpensive material, half silk, or use the silk muslins that come for this purpose.

TOLD OF GREAT MEN.

Attorney General Brewster Locked Up in a Washington Park.

The Amusing Arrest of Assistant secretary of State Adee—A Good Joke on Attorney General Miller.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"I WAS on the staff of Gen. Gresham," says one of the veteran newspaper correspondents of Washington. "I became very intimate with him, and while he was postmaster general and secretary of the treasury I saw him nearly every day. During the summer of 1884 we very frequently took long walks about the city at night, and on one occasion, about half-past 11 o'clock, we sat down upon one of the benches in Franklin park smoking and chatting on general topics. At that time all of the public parks in Washington were surrounded by iron fences from eight to ten feet high, and the gates were closed at midnight.

"We did not realize that the midnight hour had come until we heard the clanging of a gate near by. Just as we arose, the watchman opened the gate and came forward, saying that he had seen the light of a cigar and did not want to lock us in. We were very glad to get out, because if the gates had been locked we would have been obliged to spend the night out in the park, just as we used to do so many years ago on the old camp ground."

"That reminds me of a similar circumstance," said the oldest correspondent in Washington, who is generally called the Nestor of the press. "When Benjamin Harris Brewster was attorney general during the Arthur administration, he went to his office every night and worked very late. During the day he found it impossible to accomplish any business on account of the numerous calls which were made by public men, and so all of the study which he gave to important legal propositions before the department was done at night. After having performed a hard day's work, and after he had spent several hours after supper in his office, he walked over into Lafayette park near midnight, sat down upon a bench near the statue of Andrew Jackson, and there under the stars, before he realized it, he fell sound asleep.

"About one o'clock in the morning he awakened, realized where he was and started for home. When he reached the gate he found that it was locked and that he was practically a prisoner in the park for the remainder of the night. He took a seat near the gate and sat there watching and waiting for some one to go by, when in a short time a policeman appeared and the attorney general called him to the gate. When he informed the policeman who he was the bluecoat started to find the watchman. He located the residence of that official about three-quarters of a mile away, and inasmuch as the cars had stopped running he was obliged to walk the distance. The watchman was surprised when he was awakened and found a policeman at his door and feared that he was to be arrested for some cause unknown to himself. When he was informed, however, that the attorney general was locked up in LaFayette park he hastily dressed himself and went with the policeman.

"When the gate was unlocked the attorney general came forth and gave the watchman and the policeman each a dollar for their kindness, and walked on to his residence. He often told the story afterwards in a very humorous manner, giving in detail all of the thoughts that passed through his mind when he discovered his situation, and realized that it might be that he would be required to remain in the park all night."

"Your reminiscence of Gen. Gresham," said another correspondent, "reminds me of a joke on Assistant Secretary of State Adee. You know that he is as deaf as a post and could scarcely hear the sound of a cannon. Well, in September, 1884, while Secretary Gresham was postmaster general, he was appointed secretary of the treasury, and it was necessary that he should receive the oath of office that very night because the constitutional and legal time limit had expired for making the appointment. President Arthur had delayed the matter until the very last minute. Postmaster General Gresham sent for Assistant Secretary of State Adee and told him that the commission should be made out at once and requested him to call on Judge Wiley and have him come to the residence of the postmaster general to administer to him the oath as secretary of the treasury. Mr. Adee went to the residence of Judge Wiley, rang the bell and waited long for a reply. He rang the bell repeatedly and finally Judge Wiley, who was looking out of the window and calling to him for his name and a statement of the object of his business, became convinced that it was some bold confidence man who was trying to secure admission to the house, and he telephoned for a policeman.

"In the meantime, poor Mr. Adee, who had heard nothing and seen nothing, kept on ringing the bell and was surprised when he found himself in the clutches of a guardian of the peace. He vainly endeavored to explain to the policeman what he was there for, and gave his name and his high position, but the policeman would not listen to him, nor give any credence to his statement. Finally, after walking Mr. Adee nearly half way to the station house, the policeman consented to go with him to the residence of the postmaster general, and there the assistant secretary of state was identified in a satisfactory manner. The policeman then accompanied him to Judge Wiley's residence, rang the bell, and stated the object of the visit, and Judge Wiley immediately dressed, came downstairs and went with Mr. Adee to the residence of Postmaster General Gresham, and administered to him the oath of office as secretary of the treasury.

NO MONEY TO PAY FOR HURRAHS.

"Mr. Adee begged Judge Wiley and Secretary Gresham to keep the story to themselvse, and they promised to do so. But promises of that kind can never be kept. Each one of them confidentially told a few personal friends of the ludicrous circumstance, and ultimately it became public property. Mr. Adee has long since come to regard it as a great practical joke and sometimes tells the story himself."

"That story about Attorney-General Brewster," said another correspondent, "reminds me of an incident in his official career which is not generally known. Between the big building in which the department of justice is located and the corner of Fifteen and a Half street there used to be a row of very ancient and disgraceful-looking tumble-down frame shanties. Attorney-General Brewster, foreseeing the growth of the department of justice and the necessity for the public ownership of the ground, secured an appropriation for the buildings occupying that ground, and they were all torn down. The space was converted into a park, which was for a long time known as Brewster park. Right north of this open space stood the Blaine mansion, which has been torn down to make room for a new theater.

"All of the ground in Brewster park and upon the ground where the Blaine mansion recently stood will, in the near future, be required for the erection of a suitable building for the department of justice and the supreme court. It is now 15 years since Attorney-General Brewster secured an appropriation to make the first purchase of the ground in that vicinity, and the time is now approaching when his foresight will result in great advantage to the government."

"Speaking of attorney generals," said Nestor Shaw, "reminds me of Brewster's predecessor, Charles Devens, of Massachusetts. Attorney-General Devens had a nephew, Richard Devens, who was made disbursing agent of the department of justice. Dick Devens went to the Chicago convention in 1884, and, as soon as the nominations were made, Dick telegraphed his uncle: 'Hurrah for Blaine and Logan.' The telegram came 'collect,' and when Attorney General Devens read it he handed it back to the messenger boy saying: 'Tell your Chicago office to collect charges on this message. I have no money to pay for Dick's hurrahs.' And Dick Devens had to pay for his own telegram.

"I know a good one on Attorney General Miller, of the Harrison administration," he continued. "They say that after Miller had been attorney general for about six weeks, he went to Indianapolis to look after some private business. He rode on a street car with an old acquaintance, with whom he had practiced law for many yeras. They were together for nearly half an hour, and finally Miller said: 'Of course you know I have been made attorney general.'

"'Oh, yes, I read it in the newspapers,' was the indifferent response.

"Then Miller asked: 'What do the people at home here generally say about it?'

"The reply was sudden and startling: 'They don't say anything, Miller. They just laugh.'" SMITH D. FRY.

AN AGED VETERAN.

A Detroit Veteran Talks of the War and a Legacy it left him.

When the Annual Reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found Veteran O. P. Newcomb of Detroit, at his place of residence No. 237 Second street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words of advice tersely told. He said:

"A lake covering about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of eighty mules, is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed through during the Civil War, and it is no wonder that G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these troubles can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or any one suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

CROSSED THE DARK RIVER.

Ex-United States Senator Omar D. Conger Expires at Ocean City, Md.—His Career.

Ocean City, Md., July 12. — Ex-Senator Conger, of Michigan, died unexpectedly at the Plimpimon hotel here Monday at the age of 83 years. He came here from Washington two weeks ago so ill that he was unable to walk. He picked up rapidly, however, and had apparently recovered. Monday morning while walking about smoking a cigar after breakfast he became cold and then swooned. Upon recovery he walked up to his room, declining assistance, as he said: "Where there is a will, there is a way." He lay down to sleep and sleeping passed away. His wife and son, ex-postmaster of Washington, were with him.

[Omar D. Conger was born in 1818 at Cooperstown, N. Y.; removed with his father, Rev. E. Conger, to Huron county, O.; pursued his academic studies at Huron institute, Milan, O., and graduated in 1842 at the Western Reserve college. He was employed in the geological survey and mineral explorations of the Lake Superior copper and iron regions in 1845-46-47, and in 1848 he engaged in the practice of law at Port Huron, Mich. He was elected judge of the St. Clair circuit court in 1850, and senator in the Michigan legislature for the biennial terms of 1855-57 and 1859, and was elected president pro tem. of the senate in 1859. In 1866 he was elected a member of the constitutional convention of Michigan, and was a presidential elector on the republican ticket in 1864. He was elected to the Forty-first, Forty-second, Forty-third, Forty-fourth, Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh congresses, and to the United States senate as a republican to succeed Henry P. Baldwin, and took his seat March 4, 1881. His term of office expired March 3, 1887, and he since resided in Washington.]

MAIL FOR SOLDIERS.

Directory Showing Present Whereabouts of Michigan's Troops—How to Address Letters.

Lansing, July 11.—Letters for soldiers in the field should be addressed plainly. Name, rank, company and regiment should be stated. The name of the state from which the organization comes should always be given, because there may be regiments in the same army or camp from various states having the same number. Michigan troops at present are located as follows:

Thirty-First Regiment—Camp Thomas, Chickamauga, Ga.

Thirty-Second Regiment—Third division, Gen. Coppinger's army; First brigade, Brig. Gen. Jacob Kline, commanding, Camp DeSoto, Tampa, Fla.

Thirty-Third Regiment—With Gen. Shafter's army, before Santiago.

Thirty-Fourth Regiment—With Shafter's army before Santiago.

Michigan Naval Reserves—United States steamer Yosemite, on cruise, with Sampson's fleet, in Cuban waters.

A RUINOUS FROST.

Serious Loss from the Cold Snaps Reported from Various Points in the State.

Detroit, July 12. — A heavy frost at East Jordan Sunday night resulted in serious damage to corn and vegetables.

Charlotte: Heavy frosts damaged corn and beans on low grounds Saturday and Sunday nights.

Gaylord: Frost Sunday night severely injured potatoes, corn and oats.

Evart: Very heavy frost Sunday night. Great injury to crops.

Traverse City: For the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitants, frost fell sufficiently severe upon low lands to cause much damage to tender vegetables.

Onondaga: Frost Saturday and Sunday nights did considerable damage to beans and corn, killing whole fields.

OFFICIALS UP IN ARMS.

Refuse to Patronize Express and Telegraph Companies Because of Their Ruling on War Stamps.

Lansing, July 11.—Following the example set by the governor's office, the various state departments are resenting the action of telegraph and express companies in compelling their patrons to pay the revenue tax which the law contemplates should be paid by the companies. All articles heretofore forwarded by express are now being substituted by either mail or freight, while the telephone is being substituted for the telegraph in every possible case. It is generally conceded that the short-sightedness of these companies will result in the election this fall of a legislature that will favor raising their taxes and restricting their privileges.

FAIL TO MAKE REPORTS.

Corporations of Michigan, to the Number of 700, Do Not Comply with the Law.

Lansing, July 12. — The secretary of state has reported 700 corporations to the attorney general for failure to make their annual reports. The law as amended makes each director liable for all the debts of a delinquent corporation, and subjects him to a fine of $25 and a penalty of $5 for each day after March 1 that the delinquency continues. It is the duty of the attorney general to proceed against the directors, and that official will act promptly.

Trainmen Shot by Tramps.

Sault Ste. Marie, July 13.—Two tramps boarded Soo Line passenger train No. 86 at Rudyard, where they were ejected by trainmen. While being put off a second time near Dafter, 12 miles from here, they opened fire on the train crew. Arthur Clark, brakeman, was shot in the hip, Thomas Midgby in the shoulder and Frank Fuller, express messenger, in the arm. The tramps escaped.

Kalamazoo, July 16.—Great activity is being put forth to raise the necessary amount to secure a new building for Kalamazoo college. Kalamazoo expects to contribute $10,000, and Detroit has promised $20,000 if the other $30,000 is raised at once.

HER LOOK.

Time may set his fingers there,
Fix the smiles that curve about
Her winsome mouth, and touch her hair,
Put the curves of youth to rout;
But the "something" God put there,
That which drew me to her first,
Not the imps of pain and care,
Not all sorrow's fiend accurst,
Can kill the look that God put there.

Something beautiful and rare,
Nothing common can destroy;
Not all the leaden load of care,
Not all the dross of earth's alloy;
Better than all fame or gold,
True as only God's own truth,
It is something all hearts hold
Who have loved once in their youth.

That sweet look her face doth hold
Thus will ever be to me;
Joy may all her pinions fold,
Care may come, and misery;
Through the days of murk and shine,
Though the roads be foul or fair,
I will see through love's glad eyne
That sweet look that God put there.

Rope Walker's Romance.

The Narrowest of Pathways the Scene of a Thrilling Incident.

NO ONE who saw the tawdry finery of his tinsel trappings and the cheap appointments of the famous Signor Salviatoria as single handed and alone he prepared the paraphernalia for his tight-rope performance which had brought him his glory would have ever imagined that there was time or space in his busy life for a romance. The signor was a peripatetic perambulator of the rope, and his field of performance lay in country towns, where it was his wont to stretch his narrow pathway across a street from roof to roof of houses whose owners were willing to extend that privilege to him in exchange for tickets to "the Great and Only Megatherian Concert," which followed the outdoor exhibition. Yet he had a romance, and there were in it those elements which one greater than Signor Salviatoria might easily have crystallized into a melodrama that would have stirred the applause of a thousand galleries.

"The greatest act I ever done," he said, with a natural and easy disregard of accent and syntax, "I done in an Ohio town about ten years ago. I was doing my turn there for a week, and it was the county fair season, and I was following their trail like a sleuth, for they brought people to town and helped my business, never none too good. The third night of my performance, which was a half-hour exhibition in midair before the concert had begun, I had gone up on the roof to git things ready, and while I was pottering around snuggin' up the rope and seeing that there wasn't any loose cogs to be dropping, I heard a screech up through the scuttle hole leading to the roof, and the next second out popped a woman like one of these here jumping jacks. It give me a hard pull on my nerves, but I flew over to see what the matter was. It was my landlady—and here I want to say that when I stop for any time in a town I go to a boarding-house where I can get a rate that won't break me. Got to do it in this line. Can't give it all to railroads and hotels.

"In this case I not only stopped at this boarding-house, but the landlady let me stretch my rope from her roof to the roof of the house across the way, and as it was the main street of the town, it was convenient all the way round for me. The only drawback was that the lady had a half-crazy husband that never had done anything for her when he had his senses, and now she had to support him and take his abuse of her every time he got a jealous fit, which was every time she had a new boarder that was anything for looks and style."

Signor Salviatoria stopped a moment at this remark, stroked his little chin whisker, and smiled retrospectively.

"She had only been polite to me because I had been polite to her, as any gent should be when there is a pretty woman around, and the landlady was the prettiest little woman, about as big as a piece of soap, I had met.

"As I was saying, when I got to her she had slung the cover to the scuttle hole over it and was sitting on it with her jaw set and trying to stick her toes into the roof to help hold it down. In a mighty few words she told me her husband was on the chase after her with a hatchet to kill her, and he would be up from below in a minute. She wasn't as bad scared as I was, for I didn't have much experience in that kind of business and didn't know what to do. I didn't have anything to defend myself or her with, either, and the more I thought of the situation the more I began to think how many things there were that was more dangerous than walking a tight rope 50 feet above the earth, and me as innocent as a babe. The little woman told me to bring a barrel half full of sand there was over in one corner of the roof, and we'd set it over the cover of the scuttle to hold it down. I done it as fast as I could, and when we had the barrel there and about fixed, the crazy husband came slashing up with his hatchet. As luck would have it the sand fell in on him and knocked him off the ladder below, and the barrel got stuck in the hole, so the little woman and me had a minute or two to think, and she done the thinking.

"'Are you afraid?' says she.

"'Some,' says I, nodding toward the scuttle hole.

"'I mean of me?' says she, smiling.

"'Not much,' says I.

"'Are you strong?' says she.

"'That's part of my act,' says I. 'But not against a crazy man with a hatchet,' says I, wondering what she would do next and about how long it would be till the crazy man was on deck with his tomahawk gleaming in the air.

"'Then,' says she, 'grab hold of me right quick and carry me across the rope over to Mrs. Peck's house so's my husband won't get at me with that ax.'

"She had more nerve in a minute than I had in a week, but when she said that my professional pride come to me, and without any more talk I reached for my balancing pole, and stooping down so she could get on my back, which she didn't like very much, I made a quick run for the end of the rope just as the crazy husband came out of the scuttle through the barrel and tumbled down on the roof half smothered with sand. I told her to hold tight and do the prayin' for both of us, and I thought I could get her through safe. I don't know how I ever got on that rope with her on my back, for that wasn't the way my profession done business, but I got there, and as I shot out with the woman clinging to me the people in the street below set up such a yell as I never heard before, and I come near losing my balance, for I knew, as they didn't, why this feature that wasn't on the bills was being showed.

"The crowd yelled about twice, and then all of a sudden got so still I could hear the little woman's heart beat. Anyway, I thought I could, but maybe it was my own. I knew when they done that the crowd had seen the man on the roof with the hatchet, and recognized him, for all the people in the town knew the kind of a fellow he was. At the same time the crowd got still something came to me telling me to nerve myself, for the crazy man would cut the rope and drop me and my load in the street, to be crushed into a shapeless mass, and I came near letting go and dropping before I was dropped. I couldn't see what was going on behind me, and all the little woman knew she was whispering to me to go ahead, because we were safe if I only kept my path. I didn't know whether she thought about the man with the hatchet or not. Likely she did. It wasn't her to mention it, though, under them circumstances.

"While I was thinking about him cutting the rope I was getting along it toward the safe end as fast as I could, the little woman hanging on till she nearly choked me, but it didn't hurt, and I was standing it beautiful. It's funny how a man will find pleasure in life when there's so much in sight that ain't, and I nearly forgot the man with the hatchet thinking about the little woman's arms holding onto my neck as the one hope of her life. But it was only for a second; then I felt a jar on the rope and I choked and braced myself, for I was sure that the crazy man was beginning to cut, and I knew that three or four licks would be enough. I waited for the second jar, but it didn't come, and in its place come a spring to the rope, as if a weight had been taken off of it, followed by a swishing sound and a dull thud on the sidewalk 50 feet below us. At the same time the crowd sent up a groan as if every person in it was hurt. I didn't know for sure what had happened, but I guessed that that crazy man, like most any crazy person or a mad dog, only had room in his mind for one thing at a time, and when that was there there wasn't space for any more. He wanted to kill his wife, and the only way he knew how to do it was with the hatchet by cutting her to pieces. It did not strike him that he could kill her by cutting the rope and letting her drop to the ground. That was too much for him. He knew an easier way, and, as she was out there on the rope not 40 feet from him, he would go out there and kill her. Crazy people have such a crazy way of doing things, don't they? He did, and when he took his second step out on the rope he went over and down to his death. That's what had made the rope spring back. I guess the little woman must have felt that something awful had happened, though she never said a word, because when I at last stepped safe on to the roof and the crowd yelled a hundred times louder than they did before they knew what they were yelling about, the little woman let go her hold around my neck and dropped at my feet in a dead faint; and I didn't blame her, either; it was time for somebody to faint, and if she hadn't a done it I would, sure pop. Her doing it gave me something else to think about, and I got her downstairs as quick as I could, where the women took charge of her and soon brought her out all right.

"I guess that's all there is to it," smiled the signor, picking up his balancing pole and pointing to a date line and some initials on it. "This is the one that steadied us over, and the little woman had them put on there when she became the blushing bride of Signor Salviatoria," and the signor bowed with a sweep that would have entranced an audience of millions.—N. Y. Sun.

Air and Rest for House Plants.

As regards airing the plants, it is perhaps sufficient to say that what in this respect is healthful for human lungs will suit the plants. But do not forget that the plants cannot take a walk on a pleasant day, hence fresh air should frequently be admitted to them from the window. In nature all plants and trees have their seasons of growth and of rest, a principle that must be observed in house plant culture. When, therefore, any plant, after a period of growth and bloom, shows signs of lessening growth, water also should be somewhat withheld. In a state of rest from growth most kinds can get along with lessened light also, and this we may take advantage of by putting some kinds of fuchsias, oleanders, hydrangeas and scarlet geraniums in a light cellar, while growth is suspended. Almost without exception it is best as the end of the resting season approaches, say in late winter, to shake the old soil from the roots and repot the plants into fresh earth.—Vick's Magazine.

HER LATCHKEY EXPERIENCE.

Adventure That Befell Her the First Time She Made Use of It.

It was her first experience with a latchkey, and it wouldn't open the door, try as she would, says the Chicago Times-Herald. Presently a man passing along the silent street hesitated, looked at her for a moment, ascended the steps. If he had spoken to her she would have screamed; as he didn't speak, she screamed anyway.

Two seconds later that obstinate door was flung violently open and the entire family, in varying stages of negligee attire, precipitated themselves upon her and the front steps. Several masculine members of the family seized the intruder, who was actively engaged in making peculiar and wordless gestures, and dragged him into the glare of the hall lamp.

"What did he do to you?" "What's the matter?" "Call the police!" and sundry kindred exclamations rent the air of the hallway and were hurled at the head of the offender, and it was some time before the unintentional cause of all the disturbance was able to make his unoffending voice heard at all.

"I board next door to you," he managed to whisper hoarsely, at last, "and I saw the young lady couldn't open the door, so I was going to offer assistance when she screamed. And I've such a beastly sore throat that I couldn't speak loud enough to make you hear when you fell upon me."

Explanations were in order promptly and forthwith, and the episode ended peacefully, but it will be many a day before the heroine of it ventures out alone at night again, and the new boarder next door hasn't done a single thing toward extending the acquaintance begun so inauspiciously.

A GREAT HUNTING CHEETAH.

Animal Is the Property of Rajah Bommadevara of India.

In India the wild beasts of the jungle are trained—a strangely incongruous circumstance—to hunt in behalf of man the tamer game of the forest, says the Philadelphia Times.

The cheetah is the animal used for this purpose. He is a strange beast, a lithe, graceful, leopard-like creature belonging to the cat family, but having when tamed all the characteristics of a dog. He hunts with the precision of the best of deer hounds, principally tracking the deer, though he is as able in running down other animals.

He is affectionate and obedient as a dog, following his master about with great fidelity, and obeying his slightest command. When taken out for a hunt he is usually blindfolded by a hood until the quarry is sighted, when the hood is removed and he starts on his merciless errand. He never relents, often trailing a deer for miles before finally securing him. Usually, however, he approaches so noiselessly that he pounces upon his prey without the slightest warning and brings him to the earth in short order.

The cheetah of Rajah Bommadevara, Venkata Narasuntra Naidu Bahadur, is the most renowned hunter in India, and is so highly prized by his master that it is said he could not be bought for half such a principality as that over which his master rules.

DRYING DAMP WHEAT.

New Process for Extracting Moisture from Grain Under a Vacuum.

A new process for artificially extracting moisture from wheat was put to a careful test in Berlin recently, says the London Times. The trial was carried out at the instance of Mr. Yerburgh, M. P., who sent over 50 quarters of English wheat to be submitted to the process. The result was entirely satisfactory, over six per cent. of moisture being taken from the wheat, which was a very dry sample in excellent condition—while the heat to which it was subjected could not possibly affect it injuriously.

The principle of the process—viz., that of drying under a vacuum—has been applied to many articles of commerce, and the result of this trial is to show that it is equally well adapted to wheat. It is hardly necessary to point out that the subject is one of great interest to British farmers, who would be greatly benefited by the provision of facilities for getting their wheat into condition, particularly in a wet season. The full details of the trial will be laid before the agricultural committee on corn stores.

A French Lawyer.

Brunetiere, the French critic, has given an amusing account of a trial in which he, as editor of the Revue des Deux Mondes, was sued for refusing an outraged playwright his legal "right of response" to criticism in that magazine. The plaintiff's counsel, Maitre Goudinet, made a tremendous onslaught in his opening address. "Who are you, to pretend to deny us the right to speak?" This after the man had roared away for three hours! "By what right do you condemn us to silence?" The windows were rattling at that moment with his bellowing. "Is this France? Is this the end of the nineteenth century? Was it our grandfathers who razed the Bastile?"

The Queen Regent's Charities.

Even if Spanish revenues are at a low ebb the queen regent has some money to spare for charity, says an exchange. She has given to the authorities of Barcelona $2,000 to help the sufferers from the recent floods. A number of women of Barcelona who were taking active interest in helping the flood sufferers called on Cardinal Sancha for a contribution. His eminence's treasury being exhausted, he gave them his pectoral cross and archiepiscopal ring to swell the fund.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

"Let me kiss your Dewey lips," urged the youth in the parlor. "Young man," roared a voice from above, "the bombardment will open as soon as I can get down stairs." Then the hapless youngster organized himself into a flying squadron and made a fleet disappearance.—Petersburg Sun.

Fred Werner and Fred Haag are plucky fellows. Though twice rejected they made another attempt by going to Island Lake last Friday, where they passed the medical examination and were received into the 35th regiment. Fred Deatle also went. The above named, with Will Holt, make four Manchester boys in the 35th.—Enterprise.

The Toledo Ice Company is evidently composed of cautious and thrifty people. It has recently leaked out that when they began to build their big ice house at Whitmore they took out an accident policy of $10,000 for their men. After the accident they promptly settled with the injured at as low a rate as possible and came out with a nice little part of the $10,000 left as profit on the accident.—Ann Arbor Register.

Miss Effie Gilson had a narrow escape from losing her eyesight through an accident last week. She was using corrosive sublimate and it accidentally splashed into her right eye. It effected the eye so badly and the other optic through sympathy, that she was nearly blind for a few days, and has to use glasses yet as her eyes are still very weak.—Blissfield Advance.

It is stated that one of Manchester's brave soldier boys, Dave Haschle, who went to Santiago with the 34th regiment, was the first private to set foot on Cuban soil. It is also reported that he was wounded in the battle before Santiago. Though there is no positive evidence of the truth of the above statement our citizens naturally expect Dave to make his mark, and regret to learn that he is wounded.—Enterprise.

Home-Seekers Excursions.

On the first and third Tuesdays in July, August, September and October, 1898 the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway will sell round-trip excursion tickets (good 21 days) from Chicago, Milwaukee and other points on its line, to a great many points in South and North Dakota and other western and southwestern states at about one fare. Take a trip west and see the wonderful crops and what an amount of good land can be purchased for a little money. Further information as to rates, routes, prices of farm lands, etc, may be obtained on application to any coupon ticket agent or by addressing the following named persons: W. E. Powell, Gen'l Immigration Agent, 410 Old Colony Bldg., Chicago; H. F. Hunter, Immigration Agt. for South Dakota, 291 Dearborn St., Chicogo, or Geo. H. Heafford, General Paseenger Agent, Chicago, Illinois.

With five German warships' facing Admiral Dewey's fleet at Manilla and the intentions of the German Kaiser still a matter of some doubt, the leading article presented in The Cosmopolitan for July will be read with interest. The forty-six portraits and poses of the Emperor William which illustrate the article are in themselves an extraordinary exhibit. They might be described as "The Evolution of an Emperor shown by forty-six human documents." Undoubtedly so large a number of portraits were never before gathered together of any royal or imperial personage.

Unsolicited Advice for Wheelwomen.

Don't try to be entertaining when wheeling on a rough road; an epigram may end in a "header."

Bear in mind that a puncture is greater than etiquette, and a flattened tire a leveler of social distinction; hence it is safe to regard the man whose tool kit saves you from walking home as an instrument of Providence.

Remember that the popular wheelwoman is the one who always helps herself, and always pump up your own tires.

Trundle your own wheel up a hill.

Change your own saddle when it is not properly adjusted.

Carry your own wraps.

Learn to mount without assistance, and save time, trouble and friends.

Never make the mistake of regarding your escort in the light of an express company.

Don't hesitate to play the good Samaritan to wheelers, whether men or women.

Don't discourage beginnings; the wheel will do all that is necessary in that line.

Don't turn corners sharply; for, however much pedestrians may admire your skill, their pleasure is sure to be tempered by the shock to their nervous system.

Don't establish an amateur repair shop in the middle of a narrow highway. You will win admiration and perhaps assistance by considerately keeping out of the way.

Don't permit your sense of the eternal fitness of things to be disturbed because of the attention lavished upon "sporty" bicycle girls; any variety of eccentricity will receive as much.

On the other hand don't be flattered if bystanders notice you; the chances are that your hat has blown askew or that you have made an awkward motion.—From "Bicycling for 1898," by Mary Annable Fanton, in Demorest's Magazine for July.

Now for the Blue Ribbon Meeting.

Michigan has already been affording the light harness steppers opportunities for bread winning this season, but these earlier contests will be greatly eclipsed when the famous Grand Trotting Circuit opens at Detroit July 18 and continues until July 23. Never before in the history of the sulky has there been such an array of speed as is now bottled up awaiting the tap of the bell at the magnificent course so beautifully located near the banks of the River St. Claire.

The first three days of Blue Ribbon week will be especially attractive as the liberal reward of $30,000 awaits the successful in the nine events set down for that part of the program. Interest naturally centers in the exciting struggle for the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Stake for which a field of sixteen fleet young trotters will compete. This is set down for Tuesday in accordance with the time honored custom established since 1889 when the first race for this rich prize took place. Most of the horses engaged for the tenth of these noted contests have shown great form this season, an example being furnished by Lurline McGregor who took a record of 2:11 3-4 last week. The pacers in the Chamber of Commerce Stake are even faster so that heats below 2:10 are sure to result from this race.

One of the big sensations of the week is on Monday when seven of the fastest sidewheelers in the world meet in the 2:04 pace. There is Chehalis, the California wonder that recently won a great victory at Denver, stepping one mile in 2:05 1-4, an unheard of feat for June. His neighbor, Anaconda, that forced him out there, will renew the conflict at Detroit, and besides the cracks from the Pacific Slope there are Frank Agan and Frank Bogash, the redoubtable Indiana whirlwinds; Bumps, who carried everything before him last year and is faster than ever now; Rubinstein, the magnificent Ohio champion, one of the handsomest horses on the turf, and Giles Noyes from Chicago, a hard nut to crack even in this select company.

This great race has been arranged for the opening day so that those who take advantage of the one fare rate for the round trip on all the railroads and steamboat lines running to Detroit may get full value for their money. After seeing this brilliant commencement persons from a distance holding excursion tickets may remain until Wednesday and witness the exciting contests for the Merchants' and Manufacturers', Chamber of Commerce and other rich stakes. Every lover of clean sport in Michigan should take a week's vacation and celebrate the recent triumph of American manhood on land and sea, by witnessing the prowess of our peerless horses in the greatest of our National recreations.

THE STARS AND STRIPES.

They Now Proudly Float Over the Famous Spanish Capital of Eastern Cuba.

THE AMERICAN TROOPS IN SANTIAGO.

An Impressive Scene Marks the Ceremony—Gen. McKibbin Made Military Governor—The Terms Agreed Upon—President Thanks Gen. Shafter and the Army.

Santiago de Cuba, July 18.—Amid impressive ceremonies the Spanish troops laid down their arms between the lines of the Spanish and American forces at nine o'clock Sunday morning. Gen. Shafter and the American division and brigade commanders and their staffs were escorted by a troop of cavalry, and Gen. Toral and his staff by 100 picked men. Trumpeters on both sides saluted with flourishes. Gen. Shafter returned to Gen. Toral the latter's sword after it had been handed to the American commander. Our troops, lined up at the trenches, were eye-witnesses of the ceremony. Gen. Shafter and his escort, accompanied by Gen. Toral, rode through the city, taking formal possession. The city had been sacked before they arrived by the Spaniards. At the palace elaborate ceremonies took place. Exactly at noon the American flag was raised over the palace and was saluted by 21 guns by Capt. Capron's battery. At the same time all the regimental bands in our lines played "The Star Spangled Banner," after which President McKinley's congratulatory telegram was read to each regiment. The Thirteenth and Ninth regiments of infantry will remain in the city to enforce order and exercise municipal authority. The Spanish forces are to encamp outside of our lines. Gen. McKibbon has been appointed temporary military governor.

An Impressive Scene.

The ceremony of hoisting the stars and stripes was worth all the blood and treasure it cost. A vast concourse of 10,000 people witnessed the stirring and thrilling scene that will live forever in the minds of all the Americans present. A finer stage setting for a dramatic episode it would be difficult to imagine. The palace, a picturesque old dwelling in the Moorish style of architecture, faces the Plaza de La Reina, the principal public square. Opposite rises the imposing Catholic cathedral On one side is a quaint, brilliantly-painted building, with broad verandas—the club of San Carlos—on the other building of much the same description is the Cafe de La Venus.

Old Glory Hoisted.

As the chimes of the old cathedral rang out the hour of 12 the infantry and cavalry presented arms. Every American uncovered, and Capt. McKittrick hoisted the stars and stripes. As the brilliant folds unfurled in a gentle breeze against a fleckless sky the cavalry band broke into the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner," making the American pulse leap and the American heart thrill with joy.

The ceremony over, Gen. Shafter and his staff returned to the American lines, leaving the city in the possession of the municipal authorities, subject to the control of Gen. McKibbon.

The Terms.

First. All hostilities shall cease pending the agreement of final capitulation.

Second. That the capitulation includes all the Spanish forces and the surrender of all war material within the prescribed limits.

Third. The transportation of the troops to Spain at the earliest possible moment, each force to be embarked at the nearest port.

Fourth. That the Spanish officers shall retain their side arms and the enlisted men their personal property.

Fifth. That after the final capitulation the Spanish forces shall assist in the removal of all obstructions to navigation in Santiago harbor.

Sixth. That after the final capitulation the commanding officers shall furnish a complete inventory of all arms and munitions of war and a roster of all the soldiers in the district.

Seventh. That the Spanish general shall be permitted to take the military archives and records with him.

Eighth. That all guerrillas and Spanish irregulars shall be permitted to remain in Cuba if they so elect, giving a parole that they will not again take up arms against the United States unless properly paroled.

Ninth. That the Spanish forces shall be permitted to march out with all the honors of war, depositing their arms to be disposed of by the United States in the future, the American commissioners to recommend to their government that the arms of the soldiers be returned to those "who so bravely defended them."

Thanks Shafter and Men.

Washington, July 18.—The following messages were sent Saturday by President McKinley and Secretary R. A. Alger:

"To Gen. Shafter, Commanding front near Santiago, Playa: The president of the United States sends to you and your brave army the profound thanks of the American people for the brilliant achievements at Santiago, resulting in the surrender of the city and all of the Spanish troops and territory under Gen. Toral. Your splendid command had endured not only the hardships and sacrifices incident to campaign and battle, but in stress of heat and weather has triumphed over obstacles which would have overcome men less brave and determined. One and all have displayed the most conspicuous gallantry and earned the gratitude of the nation. The hearts of the people turn with tender sympathy to the sick and wounded. May the Father of Mercies protect and comfort them.

"(Signed) WILLIAM M'KINLEY."

"To Maj. Gen. Shafter, front, near Santiago, Playa: I cannot express in words my gratitude to you and your heroic men. Your work has been well done. God bless

AFFAIRS AT MANILA.

Admiral Dewey Sends a Protest to the German Admiral.

London, July 19.—The Hong-Kong correspondent of the Daily Mail says: United States Consul Wildman informs me that as the German cruiser Irene was passing Mariveles, off Manila, the other day, the United States gunboat Hugh McCullough was sent after her to ask her to stop. As the Irene refused to obey a shell was sent across her bow and a small boat went to discover what she was doing. The German admiral protested and insisted that German ships had a right to enter the harbor without being searched, a claim which Admiral Dewey declined to recognize.

Dewey Protests.

Admiral Dewey has protested against the German admiral's disregard of the blockade at Manila. He has addressed that individual in firm language, saying if Germany is at peace with the United States he must change his methods.

TO HOLD SANTIAGO.

It Has Been Decided That Gen. Shafter's Army Must Stay There.

Washington, July 20.—War department officials feel that they are fully justified in their decision to retain practically all of Shafter's army at Santiago by the press reports that reached them indicating the growth of serious friction between the American forces and the Cuban troops growing out of the latter's exclusion from Santiago by Gen. Shafter's orders.

Gen. Garcia is said to have decided on Gen. Castillo for governor of Santiago and expected the control of the city to be turned over to the Cubans. This is thought to be one of the chief causes of the friction between the insurgents and the American army.

Prisoners Number 22,789.

Washington, July 20.—The war department has received a dispatch dated Monday from Gen. Shafter saying that the roster of prisoners was handed in by Gen. Toral and that the total is 22,789 men.

Shafter's dispatch added that the prisoners turned over to him far exceeded in numbers the strength of his own army.

GEN. SHAFTER'S MESSAGE

He Tells of the Occupation of Santiago by the Army Under His Command.

THE SWEEPING EXTENT OF THE VICTORY

The General Predicts That to Have Taken the City by Assault Would Have Cost 5,000 Lives—Gen. Blanco "Bottled Up"—Gen. Miles Leaves for the Puerto Rican Campaign.

Washington, July 18.—The American flag is now waving over Santiago. The first message conveying the news of Santiago's formal surrender was received at the white house shortly before 11 o'clock, just as the president was preparing to go to church.

Gen. Shafter's Dispatch.

Late in the afternoon the official dispatch came from Gen. Shafter giving in brief military fashion an unusually clear statement from the general of the day's events. It was entirely satisfactory from every point of view, showing that the American army was in complete control of a city that it would have cost 5,000 lives to capture by storm. Moreover, it was very encouraging from a medical view, in that it showed, contrary to what had been expected, that there was little sickness and scarcely any yellow fever in Santiago, but a great deal of suffering and distress. Following is the dispatch:

"Santiago de Cuba, July 17.—Adjutant General United States Army, Washington: I have the honor to announce that the American flag has been this instant, 12 o'clock noon, hoisted over the house of the civil government in the city of Santiago. An immense concourse of people present. A squadron of cavalry and a regiment of infantry presenting arms and band playing national air. Light battery fired salute 21 guns. Perfect order is being maintained by municipal government. Distress is very great, but little sickness in town. Scarcely any yellow fever. A small gunboat and about 200 seamen left by Cervera have surrendered to me. Obstructions are being removed from mouth of harbor. Upon coming into the city I discovered a perfect entanglement of defenses. Fighting as the Spaniards did the first day it would have cost 5,000 lives to have taken it. Battalions of Spanish troops have been depositing arms since daylight in the armory, over which I have guard. Gen. Toral formally surrendered the place and all stores at nine a. m.

"W. R. SHAFTER, Major General."

Arms Surrendered.

At 11:05 o'clock Sunday night Adjt. Corbin made public the following dispatch from Gen. Shafter:

"Headquarters United States Army, Santiago, July 17.—To Adjutant General U. S. A.: My ordnance officers report about 7,000 rifles turned in to-day and 600,000 cartridges. At the mouth of the harbor there are quite a number of fine modern guns, about six-inch; also two batteries of mountain guns, together with a saluting battery of 15 old bronze guns. Disarming and turning in will go on to-morrow. List of prisoners not yet taken. SHAFTER,

"Major General Commanding."

"Blanco Bottled Up."

Washington, July 18.—It is probable that Gen. Shafter will act as censor of Blanco's dispatches to the Spanish government in the future. Shafter is in possession of the cable office in Santiago, through which all of Blanco's dispatches have passed. Blanco is cut off from communication with the outside world, and will be unable to send advices to his government unless he is willing to submit his dispatches to Gen. Shafter for approval. Blanco had full swing as long as Santiago was in possession of Toral, and, judging from his reports to Madrid, he achieved many great journalistic triumphs.

OFF FOR PUERTO RICO.

Gen. Miles, with a Small Force, on His Way to San Juan.

Washington, July 19.—After three days' consultation between the president, Secretary Alger and Gen. Brooke the details of the Puerto Rican expedition were perfected, and the expedition itself was gotten under way, Gen. Miles, with some artillery and troops, sailing Monday for Puerto Rico on the converted cruiser Yale, to be followed quickly by an army of about 30,000

Blew Up the Magazine.

Oakland, Cal., July 20.—The works of the Western Fuse & Explosive company were blown up by a murderous Chinaman at 5:30 Tuesday morning. Five deputy sheriffs and constables who were trying to arrest the murderer were killed. The dead are: Deputy Sheriffs Charles White, son of Sheriff White; George Woodsum, D. C. Cameron; Constables Gus Koch, J. J. Lerri, Mrs. Hill and Goong Chung. The Chinaman had fortified himself in the magazine and blew it up when the attempt to arrest him was made.

Four Girls Drowned.

Salt Lake City, Utah, July 20.—A special to the Tribune from Paison, Utah, says: Four girls were drowned in Utah lake Tuesday afternoon. Their names were Lucky Keel, Emma Keel, Susie Keel and Steener Bauer, their ages ranging from 15 to 20 years. The girls were floating on a plank. One fell off and was drowned and the others lost their lives in trying to rescue her.

Four Men Killed by Lightning.

New York, July 20.—New Jersey and part of New York were on Tuesday swept by a storm which caused great destruction to life and property. Four men were struck by lightning and instantly killed and five others were badly injured while seeking shelter from the storm under a tree near Boonton, N. J.

Killed by Lightning.

Elma, Ia., July 19.—Lightning struck Mrs. John Dewer and her two daughters Monday afternoon in their farm home near here. The mother and one daughter were killed. The other daughter is very low.

Zola Flees from Arrest.

Paris, July 20.—M. Emile Zola, who was sentenced to a year's imprisonment and a fine of 3,000 francs on the charge of libel, has gone to Lucerne, Switzerland, to avoid arrest.

By Absorption.

Catarrhal sufferers should remember that Ely's Cream Balm is the only catarrh remedy which is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the diseased membrane. It does not dry up the secretions, but changes them to a limpid and odorless condition, and finally to a natural and healthy character. The balm can be found at any drug store, or by sending 50 cents to Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York, it will be mailed. Full directions with each package. Cream Balm opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays inflamation, thereby stopping pain in the head, heals and protects the membrane and restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils.

From Extreme Nervousness.

THAT no one remedy can contain the elements necessary to cure all diseases, is a fact well known to everyone. Dr. Miles' System of Restorative Remedies consists of seven distinctively different preparations, each for its own purpose.

Mrs. L. C. Bramley, 37 Henry St., St. Catherines, Ontario, writes: "For years I suffered from extreme nervousness and annoying constipation, developing into palpitation and weakness of the heart. I was unable to sleep, suffered much from headache, pain in my left side, palpitation and a constant feeling of weakness and prostration. I began using Dr. Miles' Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills and the Anti-Pain Pills to relieve sudden paroxysms of pain and headache. I soon felt much improved and the pains and aches and weariness left me. I then took Dr. Miles" Restorative Tonic and am now restored to my former good health."

LITERARY NOTES

The broadening theatre of our war with Spain will be thoroughly covered by the staff of Harper's Weekly correspondents during the coming month. Its special artists and writers will follow every movement of our forces on land and sea, and the important events at Washington will receive careful attention. Mr. Stockton's serial, "The Associate Hermits," will run during the summer months.

Two striking works of fiction are notable attractions of the August number of Harper's Magazine—"The Monster," by Stephen Crane, and "The Lord Chief Justice," by H. B. Marriott Watson. A valuable and suggestive estimate of the character of the Prince of Wales is contained in an article entitled "If the Queen had Abdicted." The number also includes "The Convict System in Siberia," by Stephen Bonsal; "Under the Spell of the Grand Canon," by T. Mitchell Prudden, and the concluding chapters of "Roden's Corner," by Henry Seton Merriman.

Lieutenant-Colonel Andrew S. Rowan will tell in the August number of McClure's Magazine the story of the secret journey he made from Jamaica into and across Cuba in order to learn from Gen Garcia what support and co-operation we were to expect from the Cuban insurgents in the present war with Spain. Gen. Miles pronounced Rowan's execution of this journey "an act of heroism and cool daring that has rarely been excelled in the annals of warfare." The article will be illustrated from sketches by the Cuban general, Enrique Collazo, who accompanied Rowan through the latter half of the journey.

What a Graphophone Does.

A Graphophone will make your home a happy one, for it is always ready to entertain. It will reproduce the music of bands, orchestras and soloists. You can have music of any kind at any time, and need no skilled performers to render it. The music is there, the record that will set the waves of melody in motion again whenever you touch the button. On a Graphophone too you can record your own voice or music or any sound and reproduce them immediately. These varied and wonderful powers make the Graphophone a marvelous entertainer for the home. Graphophones can be bought for $10 and up. Write for catalogue 30 to the COLUMBIA PHONOGRAPH CO., No. 313 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

An old lady came into the Democrat office Monday morning and in a trembling voice asked to see the editor. When she entered, Editor Ward cautiously observed her from his desk in a retired corner. She did not look dangerous so he boldly showed himself. She wanted to pay her subscription. Charley was gentle-voiced, accommodating and as polite as a Frenchman. The old lady watched him with wondering eyes. At length, when the payment had been duly credited on the subscription books she breathed a long sigh of relief as she rose to go, "Well I'd thought to stop your paper, but I guess I won't. You're a pretty decent feller after all. You ain't half as savage and sarcastic as you write. Them editorials always took my breath away." A MILITARY FUNERAL.

Last Honors Paid at Monroe to the Late Capt. Gutmann, Who Died at Camp Thomas.

Monroe, July 16.—The funeral of the late Capt. John Gutmann, of company M, Thirty-first Michigan, who died of fever at Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, was held here at three o'clock Friday afternoon, and was the largest ever witnessed in this city. From nine until eleven o'clock in the morning the body lay in state in the armory. The drill hall was beautifully decorated with the national colors, and there was a profusion of flowers. Nearly every person in the city and hundreds from the country visited the armory during the two hours to take a last look at the features of the dead captain. The funeral services were held at the Gutmann residence. The dead captain was given a military funeral. Six members of the company which Gutmann took with him to Island Lake, and who were rejected, acted as pallbearers. Ex-members of Gutmann's old company, the new company just formed here, and the local G. A. R. post acted as military escort. The streets through which the funeral procession passed were lined with people.

HAS TWO FORTUNES.

Frank Phiscator Returns to St. Joseph with a Second Load of Klondike Gold.

St. Joseph, July 19.—Frank Phiscator arrived here Monday afternoon from his second voyage to the Klondike with $120,000 in gold and nuggets. Phiscator two years ago was an unknown and humble farmer living near Barado, a small village five miles south of this city. He now has gained a wide notoriety. His success as a miner caused the government officials at Washington to have an interview with him early last winter in regard to the best route to be taken in reaching the gold fields with the reindeer relief train. Mr. Phiscator two years ago, after enduring great hardships, landed in the Klondike region, and returned one year ago with $100,000, and after a short visit in this city went to New York city, where, through his attorneys, he sold his claims to a London syndicate for $500,000. Thinking he could discover more valuable claims, he left this city last February for the Klondike, and as a result has made himself a millionaire.

ORCHARDS ARE RUINED.

A Furious Storm Causes a Great Amount of Damage in the Fruit Belt.

Benton Harbor, July 20.—The country three miles east of this place was visited by a cyclone Tuesday morning, destroying one house and four barns and demolishing an apple orchard. Peach and cherry trees were badly damaged and wheat in the shock was scattered over the surrounding fields. The cloud as seen from a distance was of a ball shape. Coming near the earth, it burst, changing in color from black to white. The rain here is worth thousands of dollars to the owners of blackberry patches, which were drying up.

Menominee reports a terrific wind and thunderstorm. Several small vessels in the bay had their sails and masts carried away. Several yachts are missing, but are thought to have reached the east shore in safety. Wires are in bad shape.

Exempt from Tax.

Lansing, July 16.—Auditor General Dix has been advised by the internal revenue commissioner that "all documents which the state or municipality require for the full and free exercise of the proper functions are specifically exempt from tax." This includes all receipts, certificates and tax deeds issued by county, township or municipal officers.

A New Organization.

Lansing, July 17.—The Ideal Reserve association, a new fraternal insurance association, has been organized here, the supreme officers of which are C. A. Gower, president; Frank A. Welch, secretary, and A. A. Platt, treasurer. A local organization was also effected. Many influential men are interested in the new organization.

Boom in Copper Mining.

Houghton, July 17. — The Winona mine has resumed the work of sinking its shaft. The compressor is set up and power drills will be put to work at once. Work will be begun on the Mattapan property. The Arcadian has 300 men working this week. More will be added as soon as lodging and boarding accommodations can be supplied.

Berries Given Away.

Niles, July 15. — The great crop of raspberries in this vicinity cannot be picked and fruit growers offer to give the berries away to the people who will take the trouble to pick them.

Has Been Paroled.

Lansing, July 17.—Gov. Pingree has paroled William B. Kegler, who was sent from Detroit to the reformatory at Ionia for ten years for highway robbery.

New Era in Medicine.

This tells of a discovery that alleviates suffering and prolongs life. It is inexpensive, effective. Medical science is revolutionized over this, one of the greatest achievements of modern times.

The fact that several dollars spent for the right medicine has effected a cure where a skilled and expensive physician aided by the latest and most ingenious instrument of science, had failed, is a matter of much importance.

Important, because it opens to downcast sufferers a new, inexpensive and sure avenue to the restoration of health and the full enjoyment of the pleasures of life.

Such was the experience of Mrs. Ada M. Herr, of 439 North Charlotte Street, Lancaster, Pa.

From a weak, nervous, desponding person, she was made a strong, active woman and a cheerful, helpful wife.

Her story is interesting.

Mrs. Herr suffered terribly from female disorders. Her nerves became unstrung, cramps griped her and caused the most intense pain.

So weak and physically demoralized was she, that the slightest labor wearied her and household duties were a burden.

The most alarming symptoms of her malady were the frequent fainting spells that afflicted her.

In the midst of her work, or in a conversation, dizziness would come upon her and she would fall prostrate in a swoon.

She consulted a reputable physician. He diagnosed her case and prescribed the usual remedies.

Instead of improving, she continued to grow worse; the ailment that was robbing her life of the joys of young womanhood became more pronounced.

It seemed impossible to correct or even check the disorders.

"I had become greatly weakened," said Mrs. Herr, in telling her story to a reporter, "and the awful cramps and the frequency and nature of the fainting spells alarmed me beyond belief and shattered my system.

"I tried electric treatment; it failed, and I did not know where to turn for help.

"A friend told me how her mother had been greatly benefited by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"I had but little hope for success; but decided to give these pills a trial.

"I took two boxes and was much benefited. After taking six more boxes I was cured. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People had done what all the previous treatment had failed to do.

"I am fully restored to health now, and do things that I had hardly dared attempt before."

No discovery of modern times has proved such a boon to women as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Acting directly on the blood and nerves, invigorating the body, regulating the functions, they restore the strength and health to the exhausted woman when every effort of the physician proves unavailing.

These pills are recognized everywhere as a specific for diseases of the blood and nerves. For paralysis, locomotor ataxia and other diseases long supposed incurable they have proved their efficacy in thousands of cases. Truly they are one of the great blessings ever bestowed upon mankind.

Woman's Mission.

Successful competition in any field depends on physical health.

FAMILIAR questions about woman's future are constantly asked.

Shall women vote? Shall they practice law? Shall they compete with men in every field? Whatever woman's mission may finally be declared to be, it is certain that something must be done for her physical health.

Ignorance, superstition and mystery surround woman's delicate organism. Heroic efforts to endure pain is part of woman's creed. Many women's lives are a constant struggle with lassitude; many are violently ill without apparent cause, and few indeed are in normal health.

This is all wrong and might be different if women would follow Dr. Hartman's advice. Perhaps the most practical printed talk to women to be found anywhere is Dr. Hartman's book called "Health and Beauty," which the Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., will mail free to women only. It is certain that Dr. Hartman's Pe-ru-na has proved a perfect boon to women's diseases of the pelvic organs. It treats them scientifically and cures them permanently. All druggists sell it.

"I received your book and commenced the use of your medicine at once," writes Mrs. H. D. Amoss of Greensboro, Ga., to Dr. Hartman. "I took five bottles of Pe-ru-na and two of Man-a-lin. I feel like a new woman. When I commenced taking Pe-ru-na I could hardly walk across my room; now I am doing my own work and can walk to church. I shall never cease to thank you for prescribing for me. I had been under the treatment of two doctors but never received any benefit until I commenced taking your medicine. I wish every woman who was suffering as I was would send for one of your books. May God bless you and spare you many years to relieve women who are suffering as I was."

Fifty thousand women will be counselled and prescribed for this year free of charge by Dr. Hartman, president of the Surgical Hotel, Columbus, O. All women suffering from any disease of the mucous membrane, or any of the peculiar ills of women, may write to him and the letters will receive his personal attention. Write for special question blank for women.

Various topics of interest and importance to women will be treated in Harper's Bazar during the coming month by such well-known writers as Marion Harland, Dr. Grace Peckham Murray, and Mrs. H. M. Plunkett. Mr. Howell's serial, "Ragged Lady," is fulfilling the promise of excellence given in the opening chapters, and will be a most attractive feature of the periodical during the remainder of the year.

A timely naval story by James Barnes entitled "The Blockaders," opens the number of Harper's Round Table for August. Joseph H. Adams' directions for building a house-raft will prove of interest and value to many, being fully illustrated by pictures and working plans. The issue also includes the winning story of the recent "Short Story Competition," further instalments of "The Adventurers" and "The Copper Princess," and the usual variety of entertaining fiction and instructive articles. Suiting the paper to the season, the proprietors are making the attractive offer of a summer subscription of three months for twenty-five cents, which will undoubtedly attract considerable attention.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address. F. J. The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Company C Letter.

31st Mich. Rifle Range, near Greyville, Ga. July 18, '98.

In spite of the fact that yesterday was Sunday the third battalion of the 31st put on their "pup" tents, guns, haversacks and other harness and marched out to the rifle range for forty-eight hours practice. Now if anybody thinks these eight mile forced marches are pleasure jaunts, let him hang about eighty pounds of old iron on his back and "pike" it down the road to Britton and back with the thermometer at 100° in the shade. All the practice today was at 500 yards and some surprisingly good shooting was the result. The better the boys get acquainted the better shots they are.

The news of the fall of Santiago was received with great enthusiasm in Camp Thomas. The bands played and cheering was almost continuous for over an hour. It is believed that the capture of Toral and his forces will result in a speedy movement on Porto Rico. Gen. Brook, who will be the military governor of that island, was hastily summoned to Washington during the week and rumors of an immediate movement of the First Corps are more persistent than ever before. This is great good news for the boys as they have become exceedingly tired of eating their hearts out in camp. If we don't go there will be as badly a disappointed set of men in Camp Thomas as anywhere in the world.

There have been sensational rumors of an epidemic of typhoid fever in Camp Thomas. They are totally without foundation in truth. There is a population in camp of over 50,000 men and there are but 92 cases of typhoid. There has been but one case in the 31st, that of Capt. Guttman, of Co. M, which resulted fatally. Co. M is from Monroe and the captain was a well-known resident of that place. He was a prominent business man and had been connected with the National Guard for a dozen years. The remains were taken to Monroe Tuesday morning. Maj. Kirk left for Ypsilanti Friday on sick leave. He is suffering from malarial fever.

The orders about leaving the Park without permission are very strict and a number of the boys have been fined for going to Chattanooga without leave. The fellows, who are selling tinned goods, fruits and lemonade to the boys, are making big money since pay day. They all carry happy smiles and big rolls of long green. They say they have never seen such good times since the civil war. Some of the boys are already looking forward to the next pay day. Inactivity in camp gives lots of opportunities for spending money which would not arise if we were at the front.

The health of Co. C is remarkably good. The boys are the most active and into more innocent mischief than those of any company in the regiment. Nevertheless, they manage to keep well and are always in good spirits. Col. Gardener said a few days ago, "The boys of Co. C. may be a little mischievous but those are the kind of fellows that make good fighters." We hope and a few of us pray we may have a chance to prove the truth of his words.

Aside from war rumors and "pipe" stories, there is little news of interest in the 31st this week.

Yours.

FRANK C. DUDLEY.

Herbert Smith, formerly of this place, writes from Guantanamo.

Guantanamo, Santiago Province, Cuba, June 19, '98.

DEAR SISTER:

I will head it that way but it will have to do for the whole family. I have not received any mail for a long time, but I know that it cannot reach me immediately. The last letter I wrote you I finished in a hurry to give to a reporter to take to the states.

I believe I mentioned in that that I could hear the Cubans and our fellows over in the hills debating with the Spaniards. Well, I turned round from the reporter to get my gun to join a volunteer party to go out and reinforce them. You see I still have my old trait, I wanted to see. This is what got me into that scrap. We got out there and found that our boys had a gang of the Spaniards penned up among the rocks at the head of a big gulch and were feeding them lead as fast as they could take it. We went up on the sides and head of the ravine and what we did to them was a plenty. They were not the regular Spanish troops, but guerillas, and they were afraid to give in for fear they would be killed. They hung out until we had plugged sixty of them, and then eighteen gave themselves up and a few got away. We walloped them in great shape. There are a only few left near us. The main body has left. We can't bring about a pitched battle. They havn't the spunk. A Cuban colonel was in camp the other night and I heard him say in his peculiar accent, "You have the worst enemies of the whole island to fight. They are the guerillas of Monzel." Who Monzel is is more than I know, but I hear that he is a black rascal who is a brigand during peace and a guerilla during war times.

By the way, where is that regular army that we have heard so much about? Here are 600 marines, landed, raised the first flag, driven off the dagoes and the army not in sight yet. They may be horse marines, but they have a good record to which to point and they are keeping it up. I'll have it to say when I get back, that I was in the first company to raise the American flag on Cuban soil, and what is more, we have held it against great odds. Last Sunday night six companies of 200 each made a bluff at driving us off, but they got left so badly that they have not shown up yet to plant the ones they left behind, and we had to do that.

I came down here looking for an adventure and I am getting it. I have been in two old-fashioned knock down scrapes and a half-dozen skirmishes. The only dangerous duty that we have now is outpost duty at night, watching the roads. I was on the other night. When the sergeant posted me he said, "Challenge once, then open on them." Along about one o'clock I saw coming up the hill, four straw hats that I felt reasonably sure belonged to a Spanish scouting party. So I turned and gave each of the four fellows with me a kick to waken them, and we squatted down behind the cacti. I let them get up pretty close, then I said, "Halt! Who goes there?" They did not find their tongues very quick so we rose and cut loose, then dropped down and joined the main outpost according to orders. There next morning we found a good Spaniard and two straw hats, one of which had a bullet hole through it, with a piece of wool sticking in it. On the whole very suggestive I hate to have these fellows shot, you have to bury them so plaguey deep and it is no fun scratching out a hole in this rock. Their comrades do not think enough of them to come after them.

You must excuse the soiled appearance of any letter that you get from me down here, as everything in this camp is battered, rumpled and dirty. We are a rusty looking lot of marines. I am writing this letter with no idea as to where I am going to get the envelope for it. Guess I will have to make one.

This is a great country. Along the coast here it is mountainous and healthy. I am still growing straight up. All the fellows call me "slimmy." But I tell them that I have the best of them. When the Spaniards let go a volley at us, I just turn edgewise and it is almost impossible to bag me. He'll have to be a good line shot if one gets me. I thought I had enjoyed sleeping in a bed but I never enjoyed that half as much as I do when I roll out of my blanket in the morning after bunking on the stones in a gun pit. I never supposed that a little piece of ground with the biggest stones picked out could feel as comfortable as this does. I have been sleeping so much that way that I believe that I could sleep on top of a picket fence and enjoy it.

June 21.

I started this letter a few days ago and had to break it off. I'll try now and finish it. I received your letters this afternoon. The guerillas down here are the meanest kind of an enemy to fight. A few of them will sneak up in the bushes at night and let go a volley at the rifle pits and then lay still. Of course that arouses the whole camp. I have lost more sleep on that account than any other. A couple of times we fooled them. We located them and put a shell square into their midst, then when they ran we cut loose at them with the rifle and I don't think they will act so fresh in the future.

I received all of the papers you sent, and was glad to get them. I am collecting some pretty good relics down here. Will send them home at the first chance.

Yours,

HERBERT.

S. A. Williams, the promoter of the Toledo and Northwestern, is the authority for the statement that his line will be built as far as Hanover this fall. Further than this, Mr. Williams, who was interviewed by The Blade this morning, will not discuss his plans. He was in the city today to confer with the D. T. & M. relative to traffic arrangements and with W. E. C. Coxe, the representative of the Cambria Iron Co. Mr. Williams is a quiet unassuming gentleman. He is just the man who would push a large project to a successful completion without making much noise. At Charlotte Mr. Williams has already closed a deal for traffic arrangements with the Grand Trunk. When he has extended his line to Hanover, he will give the Grand Trunk an entrance into Toledo, in connection with the D. T. & M. but this in all probability, is only temporary arrangement unless the Grand Trunk is behind Mr. Williams in his project. In that event, of course, all that is necessary to connect Toledo with one of the largest systems of the continent, will be the construction of a short line from Hanover to this city. Mr. Williams says his line, when completed as far as Hanover, will be able to bring good local business into Toledo, and make excellent connections for through traffic.

'ROUND ABOUT US.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

During the removal of the Times office to the opera house block this week, the committee on transportation lost a box of Lisemer's editorials. Finder will put out red flags and notify the board of health.—Ann Arbor Democrat

George Smith lost considerable wheat in the shock Tuesday evening. The fire caught in the middle of the field a quarter of a mile from the railroad and some mystery surrounds its origin, as no one had been in the field since early morning. Mr. Smith wisely concluded to thresh out what was left in order to avoid further accident.—Britton Citizen.

Neal, of the Northville Record, woke about 3 one morning to find his horse was out of the barn. Clad in a flag of truce, he slipped down and chased the horse around for half an hour, and finally in the moonlight discovered it was his neighbor's nag. He was so mad that he went to caucus the next day and elected a Spalding delegate to the county convention.—Adrian Press.

Don Stark, the Ann Arbor boy who was wounded at Santiago, has had his left arm amputated below the elbow. The first report had it that his entire right arm had been blown off by a shell. He was insured for $2,000 in the Home Forum company, and that company has notified his family that they are ready to pay over $500 for the loss of his arm as soon as they furnished a doctor's certificate.—Ann Arbor Argus.

Elsewhere it is officially announced, by the township board of health, that a case of small pox—so pronounced by Drs. Older, Stevenson and Lusty—exists near Seneca Station. The patient is Joseph Powell, son-in-law of ex-Supervisor Metcalf, and how he contracted the disease is problematical. Dr. Lusty, of Seneca, has charge of the case, and Friday it was reported that Mr. Powell was better.—Morenci Observer.

Levi Wheeler, of Adrian, followed his usual habit last week and got drunk and then sent his son to the store after tobacco. The boy was not swift enough to suit his father, and when he returned was whipped. The mother interfered and for her trouble was choked by the drunken brute. Then her father took a hand and was also getting the worst of it when an officer put in an appearance. Wheeler is in jail and unless the wife relents, will be held for trial.—Hudson Post.

Every person, of course, desires to know his or her true value and here is a method of finding it mathematically. Put down the figures representing the year in which you were born; to this add 3, and then add your age at your nearest birthday; multiply this sum by 1,000 and from the total thus obtained deduct 686,423; then substitute for the figures thus obtained the corresponding letters of the alphabet, that is, substitute A for 1, B for 2, C for 3, and so on. The letters thus obtained will divide themselves into three words.—Ann Arbor Argus.

Last Saturday evening at the Walker store East Side, there was a water melon eating contest, which greatly pleased the audience, and completely filled the principal actors. There was a large melon in the store, weighing 26 3-4 lbs. Al Jones proposed to pay for it providing Art Keigel and Shine Brown would eat it. If they failed to be in at the finish, they must pay for the melon themselves. The melon was cut and the pair waded in. Slice after slice disappeared, and for a time the men who feasted seemed to like it. Then their appetites were evidently gorged, but they kept on, until the last vestige of melon was gone, and when they proudly stood up as victors, there was a strain on their waist bands which made their admirers close their eyes for fear of a flying button might destroy some one's vision.—Hudson Post.

There is more house building going on at present in town than for many years past. The big raise in house rents have convinced many people that it is much cheaper and better to be their own landlords. What is now needed is some good renting cottages, which would compel owners of old shells to either repair them or build new.

It is no great feat to be a prophet when the thing foretold is bound to happen. Two collisions from left handed wheel riders occurred Saturday evening, one between two wheelmen and one between a cycle and a carriage. In the first instance both riders were going slow and no damage resulted, in the second case the wheelman turned a corner riding very fast and instead of keeping to the right attempted to make the path on the left and in so doing ran into the rear wheel of an approaching buggy. Mr. Wheelman flew into the air like a stone from a catapault and lit on his nether ear in the middle of the pike. Wheel somewhat worse for the experience, man we hope some what better. Something novel in the social way was given here Wednesday evening in the form of a progressive bicycle party. Refreshments were served at the homes of five young ladies in different parts of the village, the trips between places being made on wheels. The first course was served at Edyth Corey's, second at Mabel Clements', third at Florence Brewer's, fourth at Julia Hicks', fifth at Viola Shull's. Unique individual menu cards and souvenirs were issued. Each guest also carried a Japanese lantern so they would be sure not to miss any of the places where refreshments were served.

The animotoscope entertainment for the benefit of the G. A. R. had to be postponed from Monday to Wednesday evening, because the electric light manager refused to furnish light for the instrument. While there may have been an excuse for this we are informed that every reasonable means was used to secure the service with no avail, the reason assigned being that customers were using all the current the plant produced. This is unbecoming in Mr. Mills, for if the plant cannot furnish extra light at this season of the year when people are using lights only one third as long, where in creation do they get it in winter? It was a swipe at the G. A. R. and public, and served as the best kind of advertisement for the show, which was largely attended Wednesday evening an especial lighting arrangement having been secured from Detroit for the occasion.

COMMODORE SCHLEY.

One of the Most Daring Officers in the American Navy.

His Rescue of the Greely Expedition Was a Brilliant Feat, and So Was His Firmness at Valparaiso.

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE newspapers have recently been saying a great deal about Commodore Schley; and many people are becoming interested in his history. The name is pronounced "Shly."

Commodore Schley has been in the navy almost ever since the civil war and was made a commodore less than two years ago. He became a captain nearly 20 years ago, and was the commander of the Trenton on her trip around the world—the last trip around the world made by any vessel of our old wooden navy.

The first newspaper prominence given to Schley was in 1884 when he went to the relief of Greely, the arctic explorer; a man now holding a commission as brigadier general in the army, in charge of the signal corps.

In 1880 Lieut. A. W. Greely, of the Fifth United States cavalry, went north under instructions of the chief signal office to take charge of the American station at Lady Franklin bay. Before departure it was agreed and arranged that relief expeditions should be sent the summers of 1882 and 1883, bringing stores of food and clothing to the colony.

In 1882 an expedition was sent in charge of Lieut. Beebe, but it was a failure, and returned to the United States with the information that Greely and his party had not been found.

Public interest was aroused in Greely and his party at that time by constant publications in the newspapers; and finally public indignation was aroused to such an extent that a second expedition was sent in 1883, under command of Lieut. Garlington, of the Seventh cavalry; and this relief expedition likewise proved to be a failure.

When Garlington and his party had returned to this country, and reported that Greely had not been found, it was generally believed that the signal officer and his men were starving or freezing to death somewhere within the arctic circle, and every newspaper in the land from day to day published articles concerning the country where Greely was last heard from, and many theories were advanced concerning the proper plans to be pursued to rescue the party. President Arthur became greatly interested in the matter and appointed a commission to determine upon a definite plan for the relief expedition. In the meantime congress adopted a joint resolution authorizing the secretary of the navy to prepare an expedition regardless of cost, and send it as promptly as possible to the relief of the colony. Secretary Chandler purchased the Thetis and the Bear, two sealing vessels, and the British government presented the Alert to the government of the United States without conditions.

Commander Winfield Scott Schley was appointed by the secretary of the navy to have chief command of the relief fleet at the Brooklyn navy yard, and under his direction the vessels were fitted and supplied for the special service.

Commander Schley took the Alert, which was the largest vessel of the small fleet, and used it as a supply ship. Provisions for two years were placed upon that vessel and a large supply of coal was also provided. Commander Schley took the Thetis for his flagship. The crews of the vessels were especially enlisted as volunteers for this service. The vessels assembled at St. Johns, Newfoundland, where they purchased additional supplies of sealskin clothing and dogs for sledging. They left St. Johns on the 12th of May, 1884, sailing direct to Greenland.

The remainder of the story may best be told in the words of Commander Schley himself. In a dispatch to the secretary of the navy, dated at St. Johns, announcing the rescue of the Greely party, Commodore Schley said: "Thetis, Bear and Loch Garry arrived here to-day from West Greenland. All well. Separated from Alert 150 miles north during a gale. At nine p. m., June 22, five miles off Cape Sabine, in Smith's sound, Thetis and Bear rescued alive Lieut. A. W. Greely, Sergt. Brainerd, Sergt. Fredericks, Sergt. Long, Hospital Steward Biederbeck, Private Connell and Sergt. Ellison, the only survivors of the Lady Franklin bay expedition. Sergt. Ellison had lost both hands and feet by frost bite, and died July 6 at Godhaven, three days after amputation, which had become imperative. Seventeen of the 75 persons composing the expedition perished by starvation at the point where found. One was drowned while sealing to procure food. Twelve bodies of the dead were rescued and are now on board the Thetis and Bear. Greely abandoned Fort Conger August 9, 1883, and reached Baird inlet September 29 following, with entire party well. Abandoned all his boats and was adrift for 30 days on the ice floe in Smith's sound. His permanent camp was established October 21, 1883, at the point where he was found. During nine months his party had to live upon a scant allowance of food brought from Fort Conger; that cached at Payer Harbor and Cape Isabella by Sir George Nares, in 1875, but found much damaged by lapse of time; that cached by Beebe at Cape Sabine in 1882, and a small amount saved from wreck of the Proteus, in 1883, and landed by Lieuts. Garlington and Colwell on the beach where Greely's party was found camped. When these provisions were consumed the party was forced to live upon boiled strips from their sealskin clothing, lichens and shrimps, preserved in good weather when they were strong enough to make exertion. As 1,360 shrimps were required to fill a gallon measure, the labor was too exhausting to depend upon them entirely to sustain life.

"The channel between Cape Sabine and Littleton island did not close on account of violent gales all winter, so that 240 rations at latter point could not be reached. All of Greely's records and all instruments brought by him from Fort Conger are recovered and are on board. From Hare island to Smith's sound I had a constant and furious struggle with ice in impassable floes. Solid barriers of ice were overcome by watchfulness and patience. No opportunity to advance a mile escaped me, and for several hundred miles the ships were forced to ram their way from lead to lead through the ice, varying in thickness from three to six feet, and when rafted much greater. The Thetis and Bear reached Cape York June 18, after a passage of 21 days in Melvale bay, with the two advance ships of the Dundee whaling fleet, and continued to Cape Sabine. Returning seven days later, fell in with seven others of the fleet off Wostenholme island. Returning across from Melvale bay, fell in with the Alert and Loch Garry off Devil's Thumb, struggling through heavy ice. The Greely party are very much improved since rescue, but were critical in the extreme when found, and for several days after. Forty-eight hours' delay in reaching them would have been fatal to all now living. The season north is late and the closest for years. Smith's sound was not open when I left Cape Sabine. The winter about Melvale bay was the most severe for 20 years."

COMMODORE WINFIELD SCOTT SCHLEY, U. S. N.

The most significant part of this story as told in that dispatch is the sentence: "Forty-eight hours' delay in reaching them would have been fatal to all now living." That shows the disposition of Commodore Schley to be on time in any serious business. His recent exploit in directing the movements which resulted in the destruction of the Spanish fleet freshly attests that characteristic of the man.

Admiral Sampson was under orders from Washington to confer with Gen. Shafter, who was ill. Therefore Admiral Sampson in the performance of his duty was seven miles away when the Spanish warships emerged from the harbor. Commodore Schley was in command of the American squadron. He was on board the swift cruiser Brooklyn; but that vessel is not heavily armored, and it was dangerous for her to go under the fire of the heavy ordnance of the Spanish fleet. Nevertheless Schley signaled the battleships and cruisers to begin the battle, and he rushed into it himself. He was on time, alert and courageous. Any commander lacking those qualities would have been unable to prevent the escape of the Spanish fleet. Commodore Schley was the right man in the right place.

Then again Schley was in command of the Baltimore, at Valparaiso, when our sailors were assaulted in the streets by a riotous anti-American mob. Schley conducted himself like a hero on that occasion. The scene is too fresh in memory to require description. It occurred in 1891, and came near resulting in war. Schley and the Baltimore remained there until the incident was diplomatically closed. But the guns of the Baltimore were shotted, and ready for instant action day and night. Commodore Schley is all right. SMITH D. FRY.

ELEPHANT BLOCKED THE WAY.

English Clergyman While Cycling Has a Strange Experience.

This story comes from Birmingham, England: The clergyman of a neighboring town was returning home on his bicycle. He had been preaching in an adjoining village, and this means of locomotion was the one most suited to his tastes and to his convenience. The night was dark, and the rays of the reverend gentleman's lamp did not pierce far into the gloom. Suddenly something seemed to loom large, vague and ominous before his eyes. He had a short sensation that he was rushing on to some unknown doom; there was a collision with something soft and of shape most curious, and away flew the machine one way and the cleric the other. When the reverend cyclist had pulled himself together he heard noises, and there was a gleam of a lantern near at hand, flickering as though indicative of much agitation. Through the darkness came a sleepy-looking man, rubbing his eyes. From him the cleric discovered that there was an elephant stretched across the rather narrow road. The animal had been as awkward as "My Lord the Elephant" of Rudyard Kipling creation. True, he was not blocking a pass, but he had fallen in the road on his side, and had stopped there, refusing to move. He belonged to a circus, did this trunked obstruction, in course of transition from one town to another, and since his fall had been left in charge of two men with lanterns, who appear to have fallen asleep. Beyond a few quiet and quaint utterances, the elephant did not mind. What the front wheel of the bicycle thought about it is not known.

GIANTS OF PATAGONIA.

The Tehuelches Average But Little Under Six Feet.

The tribes to the east of the Cordilleras, in southern Patagonia, belong to Araucanian stock, and are a superior race, says the Boston Transcript. The Tehuelches—as they call themselves—of southern and eastern Patagonia are the people whose unusual stature gave rise to the fables of early days to the effect that the natives of this region were giants, averaging nine or ten feet in height. It is a fact they are the tallest human beings in the world, the men averaging but slightly less than six feet, while individuals of four to six inches above that mark are not uncommon. They are in reality by no means savages, but somewhat civilized barbarians. They are almost unacquainted with the use of firearms, notwithstanding some contact with the whites, but they have plenty of horses and dogs.

Unsurpassed hunters, they capture the guanaco and the rhea, or South American ostrich, and from the skins of these and other animals they make clothes and coverings for their tents. They make beautiful "capes" or mantles, of fur and feathers, which are highly prized by Europeans and find a ready market, most of the proceeds being spent for bad whisky, which is brought into the country in quantities by traders.

SEAL CATCHES KILLIES.

Lightning as a Swimmer, Much Faster Than the Little Fish.

Almost all the larger fishes of the aquarium like killies to eat when they can get them, and in this respect the New Hampshire seal is like the fishes. There is a great disproportion in size between the seal and the killie, but there is nothing clumsy about the seal, and, big as it is, it is a lightning swimmer, and it can double on itself with the greatest facility. It is much faster than the killie, and the killie is powerless to escape it, says the New York Sun.

On being tossed into the pool the killie makes off from where it struck the water as fast as it can go, with the seal after it. There are steps at one end of the pool leading to the platform on which the seal sleeps at night. The killie may hug one of these steps, but it does not thus escape. The seal humps it up there and, catches and eats it, or starts it out across the pool again. The seal can get it practically whenever it wants to. When chasing up the killie the seal sometimes flaps its side flappers like wings, and then it seems like a big bird rushing along under water.

It would take a good many killies to make a meal for the seal, and they are rarely fed to it—only when the seal is a little off its feed and needs something different as an appetizer.

The Gold Product.

The preliminary estimates of the director of the mint indicate that the world's gold product for 1897 amounted to about $240,000,000. This is an increase of nearly 20 per cent. over 1896. All of the great sources of supply show a gain. The United States leads the list, with a product of $61,500,000; but is closely followed by Africa with a product of $58,000,000, and Australia with $51,000,000. Russia, Mexico, Canada and India follow in the order named—Russia with $25,000.000, Mexico with $10,000,000 and Canada and India each with $7,500,000.

The Barometer and Weight.

A man weighs less when the barometer is high, notwithstanding the fact that the atmospheric pressure on him is more than when the barometer is low. As the pressure of air on an ordinary-sized man is about 15 tons, the rise of the mercury from 29 inches to 31 inches adds about one ton to the load he has to carry.

AN AGED VETERAN.

A Detroit Veteran Talks of the War and a Legacy it left him.

When the Annual Reunion of the G. A. R. is held, Michigan is always well represented. Around the camp fires of the encampment our boys tell of the hardships they have gone through and the listener who knows nothing of war will wonder how they lived to tell the tale. Few men who followed old glory and escaped the shot and shell returned home without some legacy as a constant reminder of their war days. Our representative found Veteran O. P. Newcomb of Detroit, at his place of residence No. 287 Second street. Mr. Newcomb told him how the little conqueror had rendered him invaluable service. We give his account here and some words of advice tersely told. He said:

"A lake covering about two acres in extent, containing the dead bodies of eighty mules, is not tempting water to drink, but I was one of many who drank it, and all of us would have done so if we had known there was death in every swallow. This illustrates but one of the many hardships and privations passed through during the Civil War, and it is no wonder that G. A. R. men suffer from aches and pains, the most prevalent of these being due to kidney disorders. I am pleased to note that a great many others who passed through as trying ordeals as I, have now learned how these troubles can be mitigated. When I say Doan's Kidney Pills will cure them I not only speak from experience but from observation. To all old soldiers or any one suffering from kidney complaint my advice is to try that remedy."

FROST HURTS CROPS.

Considerable Damage to Corn and Potatoes Is Reported from Various Localities.

Lansing, July 15.—Michigan's corn crop is sure to be light this year, the agricultural department having received authentic information that the frost of last Sunday night practically ruined the entire crop in a number of the counties in the northern portion of the lower peninsula. Along the lines of the Michigan Central and Grand Rapids & Indiana railroads vast fields are reported to have been completely cut down, no portion of them having escaped. It is estimated that the damage in a dozen or more counties will range from $200,000 to $300,000 each. In some of the counties potatoes also suffered severely.

Will Contribute $50,000 Monthly.

Grand Rapids, July 17.—Sales of proprietary and documentary war tax stamps from the local revenue office for the western district of Michigan to date amount to $29,366.31. On this basis the district will contribute about $50,000 monthly to the support of the government from this source alone. Receipts from the sale of tobacco and liquor stamps show an increase of about twenty per cent. also.

Insane Per Capita Cost.

Lansing, July 16.—The joint asylum boards of the state and the state board of corrections and charities will meet at Traverse City July 21, to consider the price per capita to charge inmates of asylums for the ensuing year. Last year the price was reduced from 44 to 42 cents per day, but it has been found that the price is a trifle too low, and an increase will probably be made.

Has a Tax Deed to Copper Mines.

Lansing, July 19.—J. Everett Ball secured a tax deed of the property of the Ridge Copper company, including mines, machinery, etc., representing an investment of $500,000, by paying the taxes of 1893, upon which the company had defaulted. Monday the supreme court declared that Ball was entitled to a writ of assistance to put him in possession of the property.

Gets a Big Order.

Buchanan, July 18.—The zinc collar pad factory of Buchanan received an order for 10,000 pads for the government to be made immediately. This is the only place where these pads are made. The pads are to be half of leather and half of zinc. The zinc pads were to be delivered in 24 hours and the others in five days. The order will be filled in the allotted time.

Miner Loses His Life.

Ishpeming, July 15. — Richard Stevens, one of the most prominent miners in this district, was instantly killed by falling into a shaft at the Lake Angeline mine. He was president of the Garfield club and much respected.

Fate of a Little Child.

Bad Axe, July 16.—The two-year-old child of A. Steadman, living five miles northeast of here, was burned to a crisp Thursday. The child's parents were away from home at the time.

Big Wheat Crop.

Milan, July 15. — The harvest of one of the best crops of wheat this section has ever known is now in progress. Oats are doing very well, but need rain.

For Congress.

Lansing, July 15. — Judge Quincy A. Smith, of Lansing, was nominated for congress Thursday by the Sixth district fusionists.

A Good Advocate.

ONE morning McElway Robson opened his newspaper to the column "Male Help Wanted" and studied it with a selfish interest. At 33 he was about to do his work. Not that he cared to work or knew how to do any useful kind of work, but he had a vague apprehension that unless he worked he would starve to death.

For the first time in his life he was in actual need of money. Except as to money he was well equipped. Against the wall in his room at the hotel were two trunks filled with clothing. The man himself was in robust health.

He had graduated at an eastern university, dawdled in Boston society, traveled in Europe and led the lazy life of a clubman. When his father died the estate dwindled away under a settlement, and McElway came into a few thousands, which he spent generously but in no haste.

When the thousands had been reduced to hundreds, McElway Robson began to dread the prospect of showing his poverty to his Boston friends, so he folded his numerous trousers into trunks, and with two hatboxes and a bundle of sticks and umbrellas he hurried away to Chicago. He had been told that Chicago was the place for a young man without capital.

After a week in town and a promenade along Michigan avenue every sunny afternoon he counted his money and found that his capital had not increased, in spite of the fact that Chicago had been recommended to him. That is why one morning he had to look at the column "Male Help Wanted."

He shivered as he glanced at the list—bakers, cutters, feeders, horseshoers, tailors and so on. He turned to the subdepartment, "Miscellaneous." Clearly, he was one of the "miscellaneous." He noted that "agents" were wanted. He shivered again. Then his eye fell on the following:

WANTED—SOCIETY YOUNG MAN TO undertake light employment; liberal pay; must have complete wardrobe, speak the modern languages and be a good conversationalist. No one well known in Chicago need apply. Address X X X 21.

"That's my description," said McElway Robson, reading it again; "but what in the world does it mean?"

He wrote a note to X X X 21, using his own stationery, with the gilt crest, and carried it to the newspaper office. Then he went to his room and had a reflective smoke, and that afternoon took his usual turn in Michigan avenue. When he came back to his hotel he found a communication summoning him to room 718 Cloud building, Dearborn street. As he opened the door into 718 he saw a short and ruddy man at a rather bare desk making signs of dismissal to a slender youth in a crumpled sack suit.

"Have I the honor of addressing Mr. Robson?" asked the little man.

"Yes, sir; my name is Robson."

"Won't you be seated? Yes, it was very good of you to call. I—" and the little man stopped and beamed in admiration.

"Will you be kind enough to tell me what kind of employment you have to offer?" asked McElway, carelessly patting his knee with a glove and looking at the little man with a cold politeness.

"Beautiful!" exclaimed the other, still regarding him with a pleased smile.

"Pray explain yourself—and permit me to tell you that I do not know card tricks and my comic songs are very bad."

"I'm not looking for anything of that kind. Let me ask you a few questions first. This is confidential, of course."

Mr. Robson saw no harm in telling about himself. The little man at the desk beamed with increasing satisfaction.

"Mr. Robson, you're just the man I want."

"Quite so—and what am I to do?"

"You are to attend an occasional dinner party and say pleasant things about your host or hostess, as the case may be. That's not hard to do, is it?"

"No; but why should I do it?"

"In the first place, because I will pay you liberally. In the second place, because your host or hostess needs—well, a good advocate. Let me explain. Suppose a family with money comes here to Chicago, takes a house or fine suite of rooms and wants to get into some kind of society—not the best, perhaps, but good. What that family needs is a little outside influence. It is vulgar for any family to sound its own praises. Somebody else must do that. Suppose I have a client living at a swell hotel—"

"A client?"

"That's what I call him. Suppose he and his wife want to get acquainted with the best people in that hotel. They can't give a dinner and invite all these people. Somebody else must do that."

"Then you want me—"

"No, that isn't your part. I know plenty of bright and trustworthy women who are willing to give dinners if somebody else will foot the bills—understand? What I want you to do is to be there to help along the couple that wants to break into that set, if I must put it plainly."

"I understand perfectly well, and I must say that I don't fancy the job."

"Perhaps not, but you need the $50 which I will pay you for every engagement. You will meet charming men and dine beautifully, and no one will know your real position except the one who employs you, and he will be forever bound in secrecy. Now, a man who travels in pretentious society has to lie more or less, anyway—"

"More," said McElway.

"Then what's the difference between lying free of charge and lying for money?"

"None at all," replied McElway, greatly refreshed by this original view of the situation. "I am in your hands."

"Good! I need you to morrow night. Mrs. Skemer, of the St. Augustine hotel, is to give a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Bloxom, who have just arrived from a place called Delafield. I promised Bloxom that I'd provide him with a man who would see him through in good shape."

Next evening, according to instructions, he went to the St. Augustine hotel, and there he met Mr. and Mrs. Bloxom, who were middle-aged and dressed up and clearly in more or less trepidation. Robson greeted them cordially and said: "I heard you were here," and that was all the explanation necessary. He asked, most casually, about Delafield, and then went into Mrs. Skemer's apartments and was presented to eight very gorgeous persons, one of whom, Mrs. Skemer told him in advance, was a power in "society." Mrs. Skemer was delighted to meet him. Robson wondered if she knew his secret as well as he knew hers.

They went in to dinner, and Robson surprised himself. He gave himself to the novel task with all his powers of invention and his skill as a talker. He told of his delight at being so fortunate as to meet Mr. and Mrs. Bloxom again. He repeated to the whole table Mrs. Bloxom's frightened whispers to him, and gave them such an elaboration as to make them appear witty and scintillating.

Late in the evening he told Mr. Bloxom that he would accept the invitation to dinner if all the others would come again. Mrs. Skemer joined his appeal. "The power" gracefully consented, and the first triumph of the couple from Delafield was complete.

The morning after that he received a note of congratulation from Mr. Helly and a summons to come to the office.

He found that little man greatly pleased.

"Well, sir, Bloxom is tickled to death," said Mr. Helly. "He said all the women were crazy about you. They want to meet you again."

"That's kind of them," said Robson, not visibly flattered. "Have you some more work for me?"

"Yes; something particular. A widow, Mrs. Hawley, just from Cedar Falls, with a barrel of money—living at the Grand Bellevue apartments. She's been here a few weeks and is trying to get a start. Devilish handsome woman, with plenty of style and apparently all right, but people seem a little touchy because they don't know much of her history. She married an old fellow at Cedar Falls and he died, and now she has his money—that's about all we know. We have a couple of good women pulling for her, but after your success with the Bloxom case I think you can do better than they can. You can go to that dance out there to-night and tell those people how well she stood in Cedar Falls, and that she left there because the society wasn't good enough, or something like that—understand?"

"I will construct a past of which she will be proud," said Robson.

Robson was at the Grand Bellevue apartments at eight o'clock. A maid admitted him to a pretty parlor. He sat and philosophized on his occupation.

Presently he looked up and saw a tall and beautiful woman in an evening gown. It was Lizzie—the Lizzie who had kept the flower stand in the rotunda of the Beacon Hill hotel in Boston.

She saw him and took a backward step. The color leaped to her face.

"Mr. Robson!" she faltered.

"Is it actually you, Lizzie?"

"Why—yes," she said, gazing at him as if frightened.

"What are you doing here?"

"I live here. Didn't you know? I'm Mrs. Hawley. How did you find me? Are you the—" and she stopped embarrassed.

"You've guessed it, Lizzie. I'm 'the'. The guv'ner died and left me next to nothing. I found myself here in Chicago, and—well, I had to do something. But you! This is the surprise of my life. What does it all mean?"

"Well, it means this: You know, three years ago my brother—I don't think you knew him; he's in politics—he got me a ticket to Cedar Falls, where my sister Ella lived. She's married and out there. I went out on a visit and the funniest thing happened. Mr. Hawley fell in love with me. I met him at a big picnic, and he didn't give me a moment's peace until I married him. Rich? Why, Mr. Robson, my lawyers tell me I'm worth two hundred thousand. After he died and I waited a decent time I just said to myself: 'I'll get out of this place. It's too quiet for me, after Boston.' Of course I couldn't go back to Boston and make any splurge. Every fellow in town knew me when I was at the Beacon Hill there. So I came to Chicago, and here I am. And you've lost your money, Mr. Robson?"

"You might know I have, Lizzie, or I wouldn't be out here to help you—"

"S-h-h-h! Don't! Between you and me, Mr. Robson, I don't care much for society. What I want is a good man, and I don't care if he hasn't—"

"Well, Lizzie, when you were at the Beacon Hill I told you every day that I loved you."

"I didn't believe it then."

"Well, possibly I didn't mean it, either; but it strikes me there is something providential in this meeting. You have the money and want to see life with a good companion. You know me. Don't you think that, under the circumstances, we could come to an agreement? You know my story, and I know yours. You need my experience to guide you, and, to be candid, I need money."

"Mr. Robson, when you used to buy a bunch of violets and talk that way, I knew better. But I believe you're in earnest now. And don't I wish there wasn't to be any dance! We could go to a show."

When it came time for the Bloxom dinner the star attraction was missing, and Mr. Helly could not produce him. He had married the widow from Cedar Falls.—Chicago Record.

BEAR THAT SAVES LIFE.

Walks Into Town Carrying Lost Child in Its Mouth.

Residents of Apalachin, N. Y., had a bad scare recently, reports the New York Press, when a four-year-old child started out alone to look for trailing arbutus. It was half an hour before she was missed, and then all trace of the little one was lost. Her distracted father and his neighbors joined in the search.

While passing through a ravine they were startled to see an uncouth object shambling toward them some distance up the road, carrying a bundle in its mouth. Closer inspection proved to the terrified searchers that the object was a bear and the bundle a child. It is many years since a bear was seen in this section, but the men, though unarmed, prepared to give battle, one of their number going back for help. But the bear trotted toward them as though totally unconcerned, and when a few yards away carefully laid down the child it was carrying by its dress.

When the men approached and took up the little one the bear did not show fight, and a closer investigation proved he had a ring in his nose. Later it was found the bear belonged to an Italian who was camping in a near-by barn, making a tour of the country. He had purchased the animal when a cub and reared him in a New York tenement, where he was allowed to play with the children, and it was there he had learned the trick of carrying the little ones.

WAGES IN LUMBER CAMPS.

Experienced Woodsmen Go to Work Without Stipulating Their Pay.

"What wages are you receiving this winter?" was asked of a well-known woodsman the other day, reports the Menominee (Mich.) Enterprise.

"I don't know," was the reply. Evidently seeing a look of surprise, he continued: "You see, when we come up into the woods we never ask what our wages are going to be. We simply get our job, pack our turkey and start for camp. In the spring, if we do our work satisfactory, we get the highest pay that's going. A good man always gets fair wages, and the companies invariably treat him right when he gets down in the spring in the matter of pay. No, I never ask when I hire out what my wages will be. There is one very good reason for this. In the fall the towns are always full of men hunting for jobs in the woods and naturally the wages offered to those who ask are not very large. Along toward the 1st of January these fellows get weeded out. Some of them are dissatisfied with their work and quit, which leaves a scarcity of men, and wages go up again. Now, if I should ask what my wages were going to be when I hired out in the fall I certainly could not expect more than had been promised me. Experienced woodsmen understand this, and never ask, and when they settle up in the spring they get good pay."

HIS LARGE NOSE.

How the Boys in the Class Tormented Him About It.

There was a certain exciseman in Shrewsbury who was very trim and neat in his attire, but he had a bottle nose of more than usual size, says "Life and Letters of Dr. Samuel Butler." As he passed through the school lane the boys used to call him "Nosey," and this made him so angry that he complained to Dr. Butler, who sympathized, and sent for the head boy, to whom he gave strict injunctions that the boys should not say "Nosey" any more.

Next day, however, the exciseman reappeared even more angry than before. It seems that not a boy had said "Nosey," but that as soon as he was seen coming the boys ranged themselves in two lines, through which he must pass, and all fixed their eyes intently upon his nose. Again Dr. Butler summoned the head boy and spoke more sharply. "You have no business," said he, "to annoy a man who is passing through the school on his lawful occupation. Don't you look at him." But again the exciseman returned to Dr. Butler, furious with indignation, for this time, as soon as he was seen, every boy had covered his face with his hand until he had gone by.

TIRED OF HIGH LIVING.

Reason a Boy Gave for His Collection of Bottles and Cans.

A member of the police force came across a boy the other day, says the New Orleans Times-Democrat, who was wheeling home a load of oyster cans and bottles, and, curious to know what use the lad could put them to, he made a direct inquiry:

"Going to throw them over into our back yard," replied the boy. "I took two loads home yesterday."

"But what do you use them for?"

"It's a trick of the family," grinned the lad.

"How trick?"

"I'd just as lief tell," continued the boy, as he spit on his hands to resume hold on the barrow. "We are going to have some relashuns come in from the country. We may not have much to eat, but if they see these cans and bottles and boxes they'll think we've had isters, champagne, figs and nuts till we've got tired of 'em and are living on bread and taters for a healthy change."

The officer scratched his ear like a man who had received a new idea.

THIS YEAR WORTH WATCHING.

Not Since 1651 Has There Been So Peculiar a Numerical Combination.

A German statistical scientist, in an article in the Magdeburg Zeitung, calls attention to the remarkable attributes of the year 1898. No man in the present generation has lived or will live under such peculiar circumstances, a condition that has not appeared since the year 1651 and will not appear again until the year 2119. People imbued with a superstitious belief and members of 13 clubs ought to watch closely the events of this remarkable year.

As a starter, the numeral 1898 can be divided by 13, and the four figures added together gives 26, which can also be divided by 13. The numeral of the year 1898 also belongs to the remarkable group of four-sided numbers, of which only eight have existed since the birth of Christ, 1898 being the ninth. Take 1898, for example. Subtract the first figure from the third and the value of the second and fourth are received. These peculiar year numbers have been 1010, 1121, 1232, 1343, 1454, 1565, 1676, 1787, and now 1898. The last time the peculiar condition of 13 existed was in 1651. This could evenly be divided by 13, and the figures, 1, 6, 5, 1 added together give 13.

WHY YOU "SEE STARS."

Cause of the Singular Sensation Experienced by Receiving a Blow on the Head.

If a man falls so as to strike his head violently on the ice or on the pavement, or if he gets a blow over the eye he is said to "see stars." The cause of this curious phenomenon is found in a peculiarity of the optic nerve. The function of that nerve is to convey to the brain the impression of light. It recognizes nothing in the world but light. It is susceptible to no other impression, or, if acted upon by any other agent, it communicates to the brain the intelligence of the presence of that agent by sending along its fiber flashes of light only. Irritate this nerve with a probe or other instrument and it conveys no sensation of pain, but simply that of luminous sparks. The pain of the blow on the eye or the fall on the head is realized through the nerves of general sensation; but, insusceptible to pain or other feeling, the optic nerve sends to the brain its report of the shock by flashes, sparks and "stars."

They Wouldn't Draw.

Planted before a big case of Chinese ceramics in the Metropolitan museum, New York, the other day, stood three elderly women of the homespun brand. The ceramics were teapots of the most non-utilitarian design, and, if you will believe it, the three women were "choosing" which they would take if it were vouchsafed to them to take any—just as children do before the shop windows at holiday time. The women were in dead earnest. After each had picked out the one she would rather have above all others, they proceeded to select those "next to" the original choice. Their speech waxed warm and loud in the interested and important discussion, and, much to the entertainment of the stray bystanders. "Well, there's one thing," cried one of the three, at last, "not one of 'em looks as though 'twould draw."

A Tab on Millionaires.

British millionaires die at the rate of three in a year. During the ten years 1887-1896 32 millionaire estates were approved for death duty. The estates involved an aggregate personality of £51,670,000, so they averaged in value over £1,500,000.

KLONDIKE VESSEL SINKS.

A Steamer Owned by Gold Seekers from Michigan Is Lost in Alaska.

BIG ROCK TEARS HOLE IN HER BOTTOM.

The Craft Is a Total Wreck—A Dozen Men from Kalamazoo and Paw Paw Were on Board, But It Is Believed That None of Them Lost Their Lives.

Seattle, Wash., July 24.—The steamer Kalamazoo, built by a party from Michigan on Lake Bennett last winter, was totally wrecked in Thirty-Mile river. The wreck was abandoned by the party, which had arrived here. Only the upper works of the vessel could be seen above water. The pilot ran her on a rock and a great hole was torn in her bottom.

Kalamazoo, July 25.—Twelve men from this city and from Paw Paw were aboard the steamer Kalamazoo, which was wrecked on Thirty-Mile river in the Klondike region. When last heard from the party had shot the White Horse rapids and expected to reach Dawson City in five days. The names of the passengers who were going down the Yukon river on the wrecked steamer Kalamazoo are: William A. Doyle, James Doyle, James K. Evers, Arthur Richman, Stewart Campbell, Henry Greendyke, John Ensing, all of whom have families here, and Harry Denbleyker, William Unger, Fred Schied, Arthur Pierson, of this city, and Fred Longwell, of Paw Paw.

HEAVY WHEAT CROP.

Southern Michigan Yield Greater Than for Twenty Years—Fruit Crop Unequaled.

Niles, July 23.—Farmers in southern Michigan are now finishing up harvesting the largest crop of wheat in 20 years. The yield of grain has been beyond the expectations of farmers. In many instances the yield has been 33 to 35 bushels to the acre, and in some cases as high as 42 bushels to an acre. The fruit crop, too, has never been equaled, and hundreds of fruit growers are advertising for pickers to come and take raspberries and blackberries from the vines. Peach trees are hanging heavily, and new peaches are already coming into the market.

Killed by a Bull.

Fremont, July 24.—Alexander Anderson, living on a large farm six miles west of here, was killed by a vicious bull. Anderson went to the stable to let the bull out, and failed to take the usual precautions of putting a stick and ring in the bull's nose. The animal assailed him before getting out of the stable, which is 70 feet long. Though dehorned, the bull tossed and trampled him the entire length of the stable. He died shortly after being rescued.

Found Dead.

Menominee, July 26.—George F. Crowell was found dead alongside the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad track Monday morning with a bullet hole in his neck. His revolver, a 22-caliber, was found about 80 feet away. The coroner's jury has not yet arrived at a verdict. Suicide is doubted, as several parties living in the vicinity heard loud talking and several shots about ten o'clock Sunday night.

Failure of a Bank.

Lansing, July 25.—The state banking department was officially notified Saturday that the Tawas savings bank of Tawas City, having a capital stock of $25,000 and a local deposit of $15,000, has suspended. The failure is brought about by the financial embarrassment of M. H. French, of West Branch, president of the bank. The deposits were nearly all paid back before the bank suspended.

Murder in Saginaw.

Saginaw, July 23.—Jacques Labite, an Italian, owner of a fruit stand, was murdered about midnight Friday in North Warren avenue, in a thickly-populated part of the city. Two men did the deed, it is supposed, with a sandbag. His pockets had been searched. The supposed motive for the crime is robbery.

Railroad Earnings Increase.

Lansing, July 26.—Michigan railroad earnings continue to increase. For the month of May they were $2,686,580, or $468,799 greater than for May last year. The total earnings to June this year were $12,248,562, the increase over the same period of last year being $2,119,255, or 29.93 per cent.

Attacked by Relic-Seekers.

Galesburg, July 23.—The old Shafter homestead, on the outskirts of this town, is an object of great interest just now, owing to its being the birthplace of the hero of Santiago. It is being demolished by souvenir seekers. A. H. Carr, the owner, has been offered one dollar apiece for the shingles.

VILLAGE SWEPT BY FIRE.

Entire Business Portion of Coopersville Is Destroyed—Loss Over $50,000.

Coopersville, July 22.—A fire Thursday morning, which started in the basement of Cleeland's dry goods and grocery store from an unknown cause, destroyed the business portion of this town. The following places are in ruins:

Observer office, Hosmer Bros.' grocery, the bank, Asman's bakery, R. D. McNaughton's dry goods and grocery store, Hunter's shoe store, Cleeland's store, Taylor's barber shop, Van Alsbury's furniture store, Boynton's hardware store, Graham's saloon, Washburn's wagon shop, Treiour's blacksmith shop, Odd Fellows' hall, Masonic hall and E. J. McNaughton's farm implement store.

The losses will aggregate more than $50,000, with $30,000 insurance. Help arrived from Grand Rapids, or the rest of the town would have been burned.

A SPECIAL SESSION.

Legislature May Be Called to Pass Laws Enabling Michigan Troops to Vote.

Lansing, July 25.—Gov. Pingree declined to commit himself in regard to calling another special session of the legislature. Unless a special session be held to pass the necessary laws, the Michigan troops in service cannot vote this year. If the legislature should meet again, besides enacting a soldier voting law, it is probable Gov. Pingree will recommend an appropriation to pay the soldiers the difference between $13 a month salary allowed by the government and $20 a month. Vermont has done this for her soldiers, and Gov. Pingree thinks Michigan should do the same.

Telephone Men Meet.

Grand Rapids, July 27.—The annual meeting of the Michigan Telephone association, made up of the independent companies of the state, was held here Tuesday and matters of mutual interest were discussed. The Detroit company has connections with 150 towns, the Grand Rapids exchange with 290 and the Saginaw system will be in operation this week with 50 town connections. The Grand Rapids and Detroit systems will be connected next week by way of Lansing. The total number of independent telephones in the state is about 16,000.

Death of an Aged Chippewa.

Munising, July 23.—The well-known old Chippewa Indian, "Nobby," who is supposed to have been over 100 years old and who had been known in this locality for the last 50 years, died Friday after an illness lasting but two hours. "Nobby" was the possessor of something like 14 scalps that he had taken with his own hand. He had never been known to be sick, and was considered a rugged and sometimes vicious old Indian, and had walked to town, a distance of seven miles, a few hours before his death.

Great Peppermint Crop.

Kalamazoo, July 23.—The peppermint crop in southwestern Michigan this year will be an enormous one. The season has been a most favorable one, the crop getting an early start, and getting a large growth. It is now nearly ready for harvesting, and the work of distilling the crop will be begun next week. The value of the crop this year is estimated to be not less than $250,000, and is mostly raised in St. Joseph, Kalamazoo, Van Buren and Allegan counties.

Needn't Report.

Lansing, July 26.—The state banking commission has decided not to issue a call for a report of the state banks on July 14, in conjunction with the call for a national bank report. Ordinarily the state and national bank reports are called for on the same day, but as the federal government requires five reports in a year and the state law but four, the present call will be omitted by the state banking commissioner.

Die of Fever.

Washington, D. C., July 27.—The war department at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday posted the following: "Private Ward Marrs, company E, Thirty-third Michigan infantry, died at Santiago of yellow fever July 24. First Lieut. A. J. Babcock, Thirty-third Michigan, died in the hospital at Siboney of typhoid fever at five a. m. Tuesday."

Work of a Thunderbolt.

Hanover, July 23.—Lightning struck the farmhouse of William King in Pulaski township, where a church social was in progress. The flash was blinding, and 18 persons, the majority of them women, were prostrated. Several of the guests were marked with a livid streak, extending from head to foot.

Prisoner Badly Wounded.

Lansing, July 26.—William Overly, who is charged with robbing a safe at Marion, Ind., was run down at De Witt, six miles from here, by Sheriff Jordon, of Ionia county, and Sheriff Dunn, of Clinton county, Monday night. He attempted to escape, and was probably fatally shot by Jordon.

Bitten by a Rattlesnake.

Prescott, July 27.—Elsie Huntley, aged 13, while picking blackberries in Mills township, was bitten by a rattlesnake and died.

SPAIN SUES FOR PEACE.

Commissions the French Ambassador in Washington to Open the Negotiations.

AUDIENCE GRANTED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Envoy of the Suppliant Nation Is Given an Informal Hearing, the Discussion of the Terms Proposed Being Postponed Pending a Special Meeting of the Cabinet.

Washington, July 27.—The Spanish government has sued for peace, not indirectly through the great powers of Europe, but by a direct appeal to President McKinley. The proposition was formally submitted to the president at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon by the French ambassador, M. Jules Cambon, who had received instructions from the foreign office at Paris to deliver to the government the tender of peace formulated by the Spanish ministry. At the conclusion of the conference between the president and the French ambassador, the following official statement was issued from the white house:

"The French ambassador, on behalf of the government of Spain and by direction of the Spanish minister of foreign affairs, presented to the president this afternoon at the white house a message from the Spanish government looking to the termination of the war, and the settlement of terms of peace."

The First Overture.

This was the only official statement made public, but it sufficed to put at rest all conjecture, and to make clear and definite that at last Spain had taken the initiative toward peace. Although peace rumors have been current almost daily heretofore since the war began not one of them had the shadow of foundation, and until the French ambassador received instructions from Paris, last Monday night, no overtures of any kind had been received.

Suggests No Terms.

The proposition submitted by the ambassador acting for the Spanish government was quite general in terms and was confined to the one essential point of an earnest plea that negotiations be opened for the purpose of terminating the war and arriving at terms of peace. The communication of the Spanish government did not suggest any specific terms of peace, nor was any reference made to Cuba, the Philippines, Puerto Rico or other Spanish possessions. The evident purpose of the Madrid authorities was to first learn whether the United States would treat on the subject of peace, and after that to take up such terms as the two parties might suggest. Neither was there any suggestion from the Spanish government that an armistice be established pending the peace negotiations. It seemed natural, however, from the proposition that formal peace negotiations be entered upon and that pending their conclusion a cessation of hostilities would occur.

Speculation as to Terms.

Naturally the plea of Spain to open peace negotiations opens up a wide field of conjecture on what the terms of peace will be. Thus far there is no official warrant for saying what terms Spain will propose or what terms the United States will offer or accept.

So far as this country is concerned it is the general impression that the complete evacuation of Cuba and Puerto Rico will be insisted upon as a sine qua non. There is not the same certainty as to the Philippines, Ladrones and Carolines, although the belief is growing that the terms of the United States will include coaling stations in these groups. On the part of Spain it is believed that she now has reached such a realization of her misfortune that she will readily consent to terms for the evacuation of Cuba and probably Puerto Rico. The Spanish desire is very strong for the retention of the Philippines, although there is little doubt that coaling stations there and at other points will be conceded. The matter of war indemnity is for future consideration, although there does not appear to be a disposition among the officials here to pile up a heavy war indemnity against Spain in her present helpless condition.

Talked It Over.

During the late afternoon and evening the president conferred with most of the members of the cabinet, and the Spanish proposition was thoroughly canvassed. Secretaries Day, Alger and Long were at the white house during the afternoon, and in the evening the president was joined by Secretaries Bliss and Wilson and Postmaster-General Smith. There was no cabinet meeting in the ordinary sense, but these talks with individual members served about the same purpose as a formal meeting.

The Chaperon in American Society.

In connection with the summer-time girl, there is always the serious question of the chaperon to be considered, for, although the worthy personage is not indigenous to America, she has been most successfully transplanted and now flourishes throughout the country, even to the extent of an unpleasantly thrifty green bay tree.

A girl's mother is always her chaperon, where they are visiting or traveling together. If her mother is not of the party, then her deference is due the married lady whose daughter she is visiting, or who, it may be, has invited her to be of a party at some summer hotel. But if it happens, as is not infrequently the case, that the vacation must be taken alone, if at all, then it were better to eschew hotels, seek a home at some attractive cottage, where the mistress is a kindly, pleasant woman, who may, in a way, be regarded as both hostess and chaperon.

It is a fact that now-a-days in America, as well as in England, no young unmarried woman is permitted to take the entire responsibility of her life in her own hands. Good breeding demands that she accept advice about her actions and often, for propriety's sake, endure unwelcome companionship.—From "Etiquette for the Summer-Time Girl," in Demorest's Magazine for August.

Her Health Restored

THE misery of sleeplessness can only be realized by those who have experienced it. Nervousness, sleeplessness, headaches, neuralgia and that miserable feeling of unrest, can surely be cured by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. So certain is Dr. Miles of this fact that all druggists are authorized to refund price paid for the first bottle tried, providing it does not benefit.

Mrs. Henry Bruns, wife of the well known blacksmith at Grand Junction, Iowa, says: "I was troubled with sleeplessness, nervousness, headache and irregular menstruation; suffering untold misery for years. I used various advertised remedies for female complaints besides being under the care of local physicians, without help. I noticed in Dr. Miles' advertisement the testimonial of a lady cured of ailments similar to mine, and I shall never cease to thank that lady. Her testimonial induced me to use Dr. Miles' Nervine and Nerve and Liver Pills, which restored me to health. I cannot say enough for Dr. Miles' Remedies."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address,

OUR NOBLE TARS.

Story of a Notable Trip with a Party of Detroit Schoolma'ams.

"A MAN-O'-WAR'S crew is a good deal like a herd of wild horses when the men get ashore after being pent up aboard ship for any unusual length of time," said a naval officer. "That is, unless something remarkable turns up to put the curb on them. I saw this fact exemplified a few years ago in a singular and rather humorous way.

"I was attached to a vessel stationed at Honolulu when the cholera broke out there in 1895. We were doubly quarantined because a boy died on our ship. As soon as the boy's body was disposed of we up anchor and pulled into the outer harbor, where we tossed around in the swell for a few days in a jolting style that finally determined the skipper to pull away from Honolulu and the island of Oahu altogether and to make a cruise of the islands. We made a cruise that lasted nearly three months and finally got into Hilo harbor. Next to Honolulu Hilo is the most important town in the group. It is on the main island of Hawaii, and, towering nearly 15,000 feet above the sea, 60 miles or so from the town, is the great volcano of Mauna Loa. The burning lake of Kilauea is midway between the town of Hilo and the crater Loa.

"During the cruise none of the men forward was permitted to go ashore. When we reached Hilo the skipper decided to give all hands shore liberty. The boatswain's mate passed the word on deck; starboard watch was to go ashore the next day, port watch three days later, upon the return of the starboard watch to the ship, for the length of the liberty was to be three days. The yelp of joy that went up from the forward part of the ship when this announcement was made must have been heard ashore. The men waltzed around like dancing dervishes and acted as if they were already drunk. Aft in the wardroom we commiserated in advance the townspeople of Hilo, for we knew there would be the devil to pay directly those sea Indians of ours struck the beach.

"The men of the starboard watch, about 150 all told, got together and decided to make the trip up to the burning lake of Kilauea, and to start as soon as they got ashore. All hands were paid off and received their three months' money, and the men of the starboard watch turned into their hammocks early to be ready for the big jaunt the next day. As soon as they got ashore the men distributed themselves among the gin mills to take a preliminary drink or two, and then all turned up at the big livery stable in Hilo, where conveyances and horses were to be hired for the trip to the burning lake, which is 12 hours from Hilo. Most of the men felt pretty good from the preliminary drink, and most of them, too, had a good-sized jug to keep out the cold of the higher altitude on the journey. They hit up these jugs with considerable frequency while the master at arms, who was the spokesman of the crowd, made arrangements with the liveryman. He engaged a lot of stages for such of the party as wanted to travel that way, and horses for the men who preferred that means of reaching the burning lake.

"Everything was ready for the start and the men were becoming comfortably jagged, when a dozen young women, most of them pretty, and all American girls by their looks, tripped up to the stable and got into a stage that was awaiting them. The bluejackets gazed with a good deal of respectful interest at these nice-looking girls, who laughed and chatted together once they were settled in the stage, and chatted in the American language, too, which is pleasant music unto the ear of the sailorman in foreign ports. The bluejackets all perked up their ears and nudged one another.

"'Hey, there, mate,' called out the master at arms to the liveryman, 'if it's a fair question, where's that packful of young women bound—the same port as my gang's making for?'

"'Yes,' replied the liveryman, 'they're just starting for the burning lake of Kilauea, and they'll reach it at the same time your party does.'

"The master at arms, a rough man of some self-acquired education, walked up to the stage in which the young women sat. They watched his approach with interest. The master at arms removed his peaked cap with the diffidence of the salutation and spoke:

"'Young ladies,' said he, 'you're from the United States, ain't ye?'

"'We're not only from the United States,' spoke up one of the young women, smilingly, 'but we teach the young idea of the United States how to shoot. We're all school-teachers from Detroit.'

"'That bein' the case,' said the master at arms, 'it's only right and proper that you should have a United States guard, when there's one at hand, while you're in foreign parts. I've got a gang of 150 men here, all ablebodied, and 30 of 'em mounted, bound for the same place you're making for. They all wear the uniform of Uncle Sam. Young women, I place that guard at your disposition durin' the cruise to this here hell-fire lake we're bound for.'

"The girls were one and all delighted with the idea, and the girl who had first spoken told the master at arms so in enthusiastic terms.

"The master at arms saluted gravely, and walked back to where the bluejackets were standing, ready to start. He called the whole gang to attention, picked out four trustworthy men, and said to them:

"'Search all hands, and stack up here

"'We'll just leave this rum here until we get back,' said he. 'There's a coachful of young women from back home just starting out for where we're bound for. They're all right young women, too, and they teach school somewheres back inland. Being as they're going to the same place as we are we've got to be decent. If we drink rum we can't be decent. Therefore, there's no a-goin' to be a drop o' rum drunk on this trip. Anyhow, we're on duty; we're escort for this party o' young women. There won't be no drunk business on duty while I'm along. Ye all want to understand that. Now, git aboard your horses and into them land packets, and remember the first blasted jack o' ye that makes a break gets his head broke.'

"So the start was made. At the head of the line was the coach of the young women from Detroit, surrounded by the bluejacket horsemen, the master at arms in the lead, and the line of stages containing the remainder of the party of men-o'-war's men trailing after. The school-teachers enjoyed the situation hugely, from what I heard afterward. They made some efforts to engage the master at arms in conversation, but he didn't place much reliance on his conversational powers and didn't have much to say. Anybody who has ever made that trip from Hilo to the burning lake of Kilauea knows how superb the ride is on the winding road, first through beautiful green sugar plantations, then through the coffee lands, and, before the Halfway house is reached, through thick tropical jungle. When the Halfway house was reached, all hands dismounted and debarked for luncheon. The young women were escorted into a private dining-room, and the sailors, who were expected, ate in the main dining-room. They were a happy, good-natured lot, whereas, if they had brought their drink, about a quarter of them would already have had broken heads.

"Well, they made Peter Lee's Volcano house, at the burning lake, in the evening, and when the school-teachers had gone to their quarters the master at arms drew up the men and again addressed them:

"'That bar in there's wide open, you see,' said he, 'and all any man o' ye's got to do to get rum is to walk in there. But the man that does it'll walk out again with his nose on the other side of his mug.'

"'Belay there, mate, we're not hankerin' for rum,' said the men, cheerfully, and they put in the evening like decent citizens, for the visit to the burning lake was not to take place until the next day. All hands went the next day, the girls from Detroit still enjoying tremendously their escort of mounted bluejackets. The descent was made in just as good order as the ascent had been, the expedition arriving back in Hilo on the evening of the second day. The leader of the young women from Detroit made a pretty little speech to the bluejackets.

"'I'm sure,' she said, 'that none of you shall ever regret having treated us with so much kindness—knightliness, I might almost say—for, you see, when we get back to the United States we shall all do all in our power to alter the general opinion held of sailors when they are on land. That opinion is, you know, that sailors of the navy, or any sailors, in fact, when they get ashore, drink and carry on—'

"The bluejackets all grinned in a body.

"'But we shall certainly tell them differently,' and so on. The young woman did her part neatly, bade the men good-by in the name of all her companions and then the dozen school teachers from Detroit embarked on the steamer that was to take them back to Honolulu.

"Well, those girls had no sooner got out of sight than the devil broke loose among that pack of bluejackets. They split up into gangs, and within an hour all hands were up to their necks in it. Practically they tore the town of Hilo to the ground and fired a volley over it. There was no stopping them. They couldn't be stopped. They invaded the town, invested it, sacked it. There's a man named Lycurgus in Hilo, a Greek, who owns several rows of little one-roomed houses. The bluejackets rented these shacks for the occasion, a pair of them in each shack, and in these rows of houses they made their headquarters. Thence they would roll forth in parties in search of rum and other joys, such as a few dozen Kanakas to kill, especially Kanaka policemen, and in general they had a highly enjoyable time. When their three days' liberty expired about ten men came back to the ship more or less the worse for wear. The other 140 stayed ashore enjoying themselves. Patrol guards of the port watch were sent ashore to haul their wassailing shipmates back to the ship. They were glad to get back themselves. The town marshal of Hilo swore in 50 special policemen, all Kanakas. They all took to the mountains an hour after they were sworn in. That starboard watch of ours just simply owned the place. The finish came when they arrived at the inevitable stage when they began fighting among themselves. They disabled each other so that it was possible for parties of the port watch to go ashore and bring the physically wrecked men off to the ship one by one. In this way they were all gradually got over the gangway or over the side in bo's'n's chairs. It isn't strictly correct and in accordance with regulations to laugh about it, of course, but I declare they were a funny-looking lot—the tiredest-looking, smashedest-looking set of bluejackets that I ever saw before or since. They were all jammed into the brig to sober up, and when they were all quite sober the skipper had 'em piped on deck and administered to them in a body as ferocious a tongue-lashing as a man is ever likely to hear on a man-o'-war.

"'You're every one of you a disgrace to your uniform,' said the skipper.

"But the girls speeding back in the steamer to the United States didn't

How Relief Came.

This is the sequel of a terrible calamity which affected many sections of the country some years ago. A host of victims suffered disease and death. The survivors have now a new reason to rejoice.

About seven years ago the La Grippe visited various sections of the country in its deadly might scattering disease and death among its hosts of victims.

Most of those afflicted who escaped death then, have lived on in suffering, broken in health and ambition; for the after-effects of this disease are dangerous.

A large portion of the survivors have a feeling of oppression in the chest.

A little exertion causes a violent action of the heart, described as "palpitation."

There is mental anxiety, depression, blueness of the skin, indicating impaired circulation of the blood.

The sluggishness of its circulation impairs the functions of most of the organs; the stomach and intestines fail to perform their work, while the appetite and digestion become seriously affected.

This complaint has baffled eminent physicians and exhausted the results of pharmacopoeia.

Recently, however, a means for a cure has been obtained.

Among those who have been restored to health by it is Herman H. Eveler, of 811 W. Main Street, Jefferson, Mo., a resident of that city for thirty-eight years, well known as a successful contractor.

He was one of the victims of the "Grippe" seven years ago and has since been troubled with its after-effects.

"That he lives to-day," he says, "is due to a remarkable occurrence.

"I was taken with a malady just after the "Grippe" visited this section and caused so many fatalities about seven years ago.

"I was troubled with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and a general debility. My back also pained me severely.

"I tried different doctors and carefully followed their directions, but no benefit was apparent. I used numerous remedies that were highly recommended but no satisfactory results were obtained.

"I began to give up all hope of receiving relief. My condition was deplorable.

"In reading a St. Louis newspaper I noticed an article extolling Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"After making inquiries regarding them I concluded to give the pills a thorough trial.

"I used the first box and was wonderfully relieved.

"I bought two more boxes and continued taking them.

"A marked improvement was soon noticeable; the shortness of breath, the palpitation of my heart and kindred ailments began to abate.

"After taking four boxes of these pills I was restored to good health.

"I feel like a new man now, and can transact my business with increased ambition."

To add strength to his story Mr. Eveler made affidavit before Notary Public Adam Poutzong and he will gladly answer inquiries to those enclosing stamp for reply.

The reason that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are helpful in such cases as this, is that they are composed of vegetable remedies which act directly on the impure blood, the foundation of disease.

Our Cavalry is the Finest in the World.

An American citizen thinks the American soldier is the best, for the easy reason that he is an American, but there were three Englishmen whose profession had qualified them to know soldiers of every land, and who were quite as enthusiastic over the cavalry as any American could be—as is Frederic Remington, for instance. For one thing, all of our men are physically as large as Life Guardsmen, and what they lose in contrast by lack of gold and pipe-clay, and through the inferiority of their equipment and uniform, is made up to them in the way they ride a horse. A German or English trooper sits his horse like a clothes-pin stuck on a line—the line may rise or sag, or swing in the wind, but the clothes-pin maintains its equilibrium at any cost, and is straight, unbending, and a thing to itself. The American trooper, with his deep saddle and long stirrup, swings with the horse, as a ship rides at anchor on the waves; he makes a line of grace and strength and suppleness from the rake of his sombrero to the toe of his hooded stirrup. When his horse walks, he sits it erect and motionless; when it trots he rises with it, but never leaves the saddle; and when it gallops he swings in unison with it, like a cowboy, or a cockswain in a racing-shell.—From "The Rocking-Chair Period of the War," by Richard Harding Davis, in the August (Fiction Number) Scribner's.

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and will reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and lifelike.

Graphophones are sold for $10

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. The Grange is in receipt of an invitation to spend Tuesday evening with the Britton Grange at their hall.

At the missionary meeting last Sunday evening, three very interesting papers were given on our work in China and Japan. Next Sunday evening the topic for study is "The Evils of Covetousness." Luke 12 13:21. Leader, Foster Johnston. It is also expected that S. Ray Gould will address the Endeavor Society.

Without excluding other important topics, the August Atlantic is noticeably a fiction number, and contains a group of short stories of great variety and exceeding interest. Morgan Robertson, whose remarkably interesting sea-stories have been widely welcomed, tells in "Where Angels Fear to Tread" of the marvelous adventures of a crew of lake schooner sailors decoyed into a square-rigged ship for a long ocean voyage, the whole told with the odor of salt water and the touch of rugged truth. Mrs. Ritchie's tale of Ah Cho, the Chinese merchant, introduces the manners and customs of the Chinese at home, in the streets, in the shops, and in their social and family life. Especially entertaining is her description of the Chinese butlers' method of supplying all table and other deficiencies when unexpected guests arrive.

GOES TO PRISON ALONE.

Ohio Man Gets a Year's Sentence for a Technical Defalcation.

The warden of the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus was astonished to find a man at his door recently who carried in his hand his commitment papers ordering a year's imprisonment, reports the New York World. This was the first time he had ever seen a prisoner unaccompanied by an officer voluntarily come and say he was ready to begin his term. The man was Ingle W. Rush, aged 45, born and raised in Logan county, O.

By hard work and strict economy he and his faithful wife, assisted by the oldest of their eight children, had gathered together money, lands, cattle, utensils and the like worth $20,000. He had become a man of standing in the community and for several years had served as treasurer of Stokes township. By reason of some investments he made which did not realize as quickly as had been expected Rush was called upon by the board of education to turn over $4,700 of school funds. He could not do it, so he and his wife, who was not on his bond nor in any way liable, turned over all their possessions to his bondsmen to protect them in raising the sum demanded. The shortage became known before the money could be raised and the public clamor was only satisfied by Rush's indictment by the grand jury upon a charge of defalcation. He made no defense. While the crime was only technical he could not avoid punishment. It was said by members of the grand jury and Judge Duncan, who sentenced Rush to a year in the penitentiary, that it was one of the saddest duties they ever had to perform.

SERVICE IN A PALACE.

Scene of Ismail Pasha's Former Triumphs in Egypt in Use.

Church accommodations in Egypt for English and American tourists and residents are somewhat limited, and particularly in winter, when the number of visitors is greatest, are they found insufficient. In Cairo, for that reason, a service is held Sunday morning in one of the large drawing-rooms of the Gheziveh palace. This very gorgeous palace was built by Ismail Pasha and used for the reception and entertainment of his royal guests at the opening of the Suez canal. It was the millions spent on these festivities that helped ruin Egypt and were the real cause of Ismail's downfall.

Now the palace is used as a hotel and in the reception rooms Ismail's furniture and carpets are still kept, although their garish colors are not much in harmony with present-day notions. In one of these rooms the women—for some reason men are not often seen there—assemble, and, sitting on the yellow and gold embroidered chairs bearing the I. P. of the former ruler, listen to the Church of England service, which is generally led by the military chaplain of the garrison.

Letter from Chickamauga.

Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga.
Co. C, 31st Mich. July 25, 1898

The colonel of the 1st Georgia regiment announced to his troops this morning that Thursday they, together with the 31st Mich. and 160 Indiana, would break camp and leave for Porto Rico. The camp is so rife with all kinds of rumors and pipe stories that the truth is almost impossible to ascertain. Never-the-less, this comes so straight that it is generally believed. All those who are too ill to go will be transferred to the military hospital at St. Thomas, Ky., near Cincinnati. Orders have been given that all who show any signs of physical weakness shall be thoroughly examined and described and, if necessary, left behind. There is none from Co C on this list. Every man is anxious to go and has been chafing for weeks at the delay in getting to the front. It is stated that Krag-Jorgensan rifles will be furnished us at the point of embarkation, which will undoubtedly be Newport News, Va. The route taken to Newport News will be through Cincinnati which is more than half way to Michigan.

Outside of the excitement and preparations of our approaching departure, there is but little camp news of interest. The forced marches to the target range have be finished, much to everyone's delight. The 31st showed remarkably well in practice and will doubtless make a good many Spaniards bite the dust if we even have a chance to get at them. Brigade drills on battle formation for three hours are our regular morning diet at present. They are very fatiguing but they are soon to be followed with actual battle formation. Co. C usually has the honor of being in the scout and advance firing line where the heaviest fighting takes place. Dress parade is now the order of the early evening.

The International Christian Endeavor Convention just finished at Nashville brought many visitors still further south to Chickamauga. Capt. Kyle received a call from Miss Mary Hosmer, of Illinois, who was at the convention and came down to see the camp of her old Tecumseh friends. Miss Hosmer is a cousin of Miss Sena Hosmer, of Tecumseh, and was a former teacher in the high school.

The annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans was held in Atlanta last week. More than 40,000 were present from all parts of the South. This organization is to the South what the G. A. R. is to the North. The members wear the old Confederate gray uniform and carry the stars and bars. Many of them visited Camp Thomas Sunday and it was a strange sight to see the blue and gray mix in true fraternity and all inspired with the same patriotism. This war has healed more old sores than fifty years of peace. The ordinary form of salutation used by the 1st Georgia boys to the Michiganders is "brother." And while I am speaking of the Georgians, I must say that the percentage of gentlemen among them is much larger than in any similiar body of men I have ever seen. This opinion ought to have weight when I add that I am proud to be a loyal New Yorker and there are four New York regiments at Camp Thomas.

The W. C. T. U. has presented through Col. Gardener a neat and well stocked housewife to each mess in the 31st. In each one was a little pledge to be signed and sent home promising to abstain from liquor during the war. Many of them are already speeding northward.

Homesickness has entirely disappeared now that we are so soon to see action. The greatest convenience in camp is the Y. M. C. A. tent and it is liberally patronized. It is in charge of Mr. Johnson who exerts himself in every way to accommodate the boys.

Yours,
FRANK C. DUDLEY.

TIPTON.

Mrs. Alf. Gray, of Ann Arbor, visited Tipton friends Wednesday and Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson and daughter, of Angola, Ind., are visiting at Wm. Hones'.

A number from Tipton and vicinity are attending the Hunter and Wells' lawsuit now in progress at Adrian.

Rev. Blair and wife, Lon Billington and family and R. W. Mills and wife spent Saturday at Wamplers Lake fishing.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Mills, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bonk attended a picnic given by Mr. VanTyne, near Tecumseh, for the G. A. R. boys and their wives.

Miss Libbie Hunt and Mr. Bracy were married Saturday morning by Rev. Marsh at the home of Mrs. Samuel Conner. At home on the Freel Davenport farm.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Council Chamber, Village of Tecumseh,
Adjourned meeting of July 22.

Present, Clerk, Trustees Elliott, J. Heesen, H. Heesen, Eldridge, Ames. Absent, President Kyle, Trustee Hayden.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

REPORT OF OFFICERS.

Street Commissioners report presented showing labor for month of June: Fire team labor 23 days 1 1-2 hours; hired team labor 22 days 1 1-2 hours; hand labor 46 days 6 hours; poll taxes worked 13. Gravel sold 200 loads, $16.00; hay in military park sold, $1.00; lumber sold, $1.44 with Treasurers receipt for same. Also work done on streets from June 20, to July 18. Fire team, 22 days; H. W. Bird, team labor 16 days, $40; A. Titus, hand labor 22 days 2 hours, $27.75; E. Ames, 5 days 3 hours, less one poll tax, $6.19; Chas. Saul, 8 hours, one poll tax. Report accepted and Clerk was instructed to draw orders in accordance therewith.

NEW BUSINESS.

Invitation of W. C. Maybury and committee, to attend the meeting of the League of American Munnicipalities at Detroit the first week of August, read. No action.

The following proposition was presented:

To The Honorable.—

The Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh.

Thinking it to be the best interest of Tecumseh that the proceedings of the Village Council be published in both papers, we hereby submit the following proposition:

For the sum of thirty-seven 50-100 dollars to be paid to each of the undersigned we will print the proceedings of the council including ordinances in both Tecumseh News and Tecumseh Herald for the year from July 1, 1898, to July 1, 1899. Should the council desire a "Resume or Financial Statement" published, will print same for 5 cents per line for each paper.

GEO. N. STACY,
JAS. W. HINE.

Same laid on table and Clerk instructed to ask both publications for separate bids.

The following bills were presented and referred to finance committee: Chas. H. Heck, mill feed, $15.10; Thacker Coal & Coke Co., $38.40; Tecumseh Electric Co., $222.33; Jas. Elliott, purchasing Agt., $12.00; W. C. VanAntwerp, repairs, $5.10; D. H. C. Bowen, $35.80; Tecumseh Herald printing, $14 50; D. T. & M. Ry., freight, $76.78. All the above were reported upon favorably and a resolution was carried, instructing the Clerk to draw his order on the Treasurer for the different amounts.

The election of firemen at their annual election was confirmed as follows:

Pres. - B. J. Garlinghouse.
Vice Pres. - Thos. Elliott.
Secy.—Geo. H. Tansley.
Treas.—Fred Rosacrans.
Chief—C. E. Williamson.
1st. Asst.—Jos. Crosby.
2nd. " —G. H. Tansley.

The Clerk was instructed to notify Thomas Lovett or his agent that the noxious weeds on the vacant lot between Kilbuck and Cummins streets, be immediately removed and destroyed.

A resolution was adopted, instructing Marshal to serve final notice on the owners of property abutting the south line of Logan street between Oneida and Maumee streets, that sidewalks must be constructed within ten days from date of service.

Council then adjourned.

DON H. C. BOWEN, clerk.

Enroute to Alaska.—Letter No. 9.

The following letter we publish through the kindness of J. H. Smith. We are in receipt of a lengthy letter from Mr. Knapp which arrived too late for this week but will appear in our next issue.

Dawson, N. W. T., June 23, 1898.

MY DEAR JOE: How are you all back there in old Tecumseh? Should like very much to step in and see you for awhile and have a little visit and incidently call on my family while there.

Well, Joe, this is a unique city, to say the least. I wish you could be here to see the surging crowd of humanity and the strange sights. It seems that there is double the number of people here now that there was three days ago when we came, and still they come.

I had intended to write you a long letter when I got here, but have not had time for there was so much to see. The mail was not to go out till the 15th of July and I have just heard that new arrangements have been made to accommodate the great demand, and it will now go this afternoon. I only had a short time to write home and will have to make this short to you, but my wife will let you read the one I sent home and perhaps the two will be all you will care for when taken with the immense newspaper I have just stepped here to buy and send you. Please don't try to read it all at one sitting. It does not contain quite as much reading or paper as the Chicago Sunday InterOcean, but it mades up in price for all deficiency in that line. I also send one home from the other office and you can compare notes.

Well, how is everything there? According to all I can hear from outside, it is pretty dull on account of the war. I wish I had time to write you a longer letter and tell you of all the strange sights, but won't have the time for this mail; perhaps will get another chance before I leave. Have been well and enjoyed the whole trip very much and will tell you all about it when I get back. Give my regards to all. Should like to hear from you; direct to Circle City, Alaska. Yours in haste,

GEO. W. KNAPP.

A Soldier's Love.

Wm. E. Hagadorn.

She hath trod the vales of sorrow
And the mountain tops of bliss,
And the morning of each morrow
Hold no greater joy than this:
Than to feel her arms about me,
Giving courage for the day,
Strength to fight my battles bravely,
Strength for tasks which come my way.

All that's true and good in woman
In her soul hath lodgement fair;
All the love, divine and human,
In her heart she fosters there;
Always ready for the sharing
Of the pleasures Life may bring;
Always ready for the bearing
Of another's suffering.

Now her hair with silver sprinkled
Tells of years that long have fled,
And the cheek, though dear, is wrinkled,—
She is growing old, 'tis said.
But though the marks of time may show,
Though others choose a younger lover,
The world for me will hold I know
None other dearer than—my mother.

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, it has pleased Almighty God in his wise providence to summon from our midst. our valued friend and treasurer of the vestry of St. Peter's church, Lester P. Tribou, and whereas a fitting recognition of his many virtues should be had, therefore be it RESOLVED, By the vestry of St. Peter's church, that while we bow with humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, we sorrowfully mourn for our brother, who has been taken from us.

RESOLVED, That in his death the vestry and parish of St. Peter's church has lost one, who was always an earnest worker. a helpful friend and a sincere and devoted Christian.

RESOLVED, That his character will ever be before us, as an example of a faithful laborer in the vineyard of the Lord, and so "He being dead yet speaketh."

RESOLVED. That the heartfelt sympathy of the vestry be extended to the family in their affliction.

RESOLVED, That this loss falls upon the whole community; for our brother was one who always had the best interests of his fellow citizens at heart.

RESOLVED, That these resolutions be inscribed in the minutes of the vestry, that they be published in the city papers, and that a copy be sent to the bereaved family as a slight token of our sympathy.

BY THE SECRETARY OF THE VESTRY.

Notice of School Meeting.

At the annual meeting of School District No. 7 to be held Monday evening, Sept. 5, 1898, there will be submitted to the qualified electors to be determined by them by ballot this question:

"Shall the District Board raise by tax sufficient money to purchase and provide free text books for use of pupils in the public schools in accordance with the provisions of Act No. 147, Public Acts of 1889(?)" Yes—. No—.

Taxpayers only are qualified to vote upon this question.

In case this question is determined in the negative, then there will be immediately thereafter at said meeting submitted to the qualified electors the following question:

"Shall the District come under the provisions of Act No. 198 of the Public Acts of 1897(?)" Yes—. No—.

All the legally qualified voters, whether taxpayers or not, will be entitled to vote upon this second proposition.

The Board consider both of these questions of sufficient importance to the voters of the district to warrant the former in calling especial attention by this publication.

The first question is in substance whether the District shall pay for all the text books used by all the pupils in the school below the 9th grade.

The second question is in substance whether this District shall adopt and use in all its schools below the 9th grade, what is known as "uniform text books," that is to say, such books as shall be adopted by the state.

Any voter of the District desiring more specific information about these two propositions, is invited to apply to any member of the Board of Education.

A serious accident happened Tuesday evening to Mrs. Harriet Webster, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Myron H. Conklin, on Union street. Mrs. Webster, who has been for some time in feeble health, had retired for the night, but had arisen to procure something when she tripped, striking on her hip, which was badly fractured by the fall. Owing to the lady's advanced age and the state of her health, the accident is looked upon as of a dangerous nature. All possible relief still leaves the sufferer in extreme pain.

Considerable dissatisfaction is being aired in regard to the uses made of the city water. Water takers should refer to their regulations and see if they are living up to them and if not they shouldn't be surprised to find their water supply shut off. Some few consumers pay special price for the privilege of using water longer than the hours provided, but many are guilty of using the water and guiltless of paying for it. The water commissioners demand that this surreptious use of the water be stopped and propose to enforce their demand.

The administrator's sale of the personal effects of Geo. C. Martin last Saturday afternoon was well attended and nearly all were buyers. There seemed to be nothing in all the curio shop that someone didn't want. Bidding was prompt and the sale went merrily on, now a battered relic of some unknown fantasy, a fishing tackle, an electric battery, or a piece of antiquated furniture, was seized upon with avidity by those present. Like all auction sales some articles, which one would think should bring a big price, went for a nominal sum, while something, which an appraiser would place in the two for a quarter lot, went like rockets. Taken all together the sale was a decided success and we have yet to hear of a purchaser who went away dissatisfied.

The W. C. T. U. will meet at Mrs. Stewart's Friday, Aug. 5, at 2:30 p. m. The Superintendent of Social Purity will provide the program and it is hoped all who are interested in this subject will be present. The public are cordially invited. SEC.

At the children's War Concert by the Junior League, which was followed by refreshments by the Epworth League at the M. E. church last evening, the society cleared $16. Some of the best things on the musical program were three solos by little girls and a trio by little boys.

About a week ago one of Jas. Lowry's clerks took in a lot of eggs and among them found one, which he concluded was in an advanced age of incubation. He wrapped it up in woolen, put it in a warm place and sure enough in the course of a couple of days a little black chick was ushered into the world and is as lively and healthy as though he came by the most conventional route.

I will give you a great bargain on a bicycle now. Prices cut $15 to reduce stock. Come and see. C. A. SLAYTON.

The first gun of the congressional campaign will be fired at Flat Rock tomorrow afternoon in Potter's Park. The gunners will be H. C. Smith, republican nominee for congress, Grant Fellows, of Hudson, and W. W. Wedemeyer, of Ann Arbor. The Huron Cornet Band will jolly the aggregation and the Lima Northern will sell excursion tickets, one fare for the round trip from Adrian, Detroit and intermediate points.

The Y. P. S. C. E., of Macon, will give an ice cream social on the lawn of Mark Pennington, Wednesday evening, Aug. 10. The following program will be given:

Song—Mrs. B. F. Pennington.
Rec.—Miss Curry.
Song—Mr. Wirt Rowland.
Reading—Miss Cotton.
Song—Three Old Maids.

Looking backward over the greater part of 80 years, reviewing the pleasures sorrows, sunshine, showers, hopes and disappointments of a busy life time seems to the younger generations a thing of mysterious improbability. Eighty years back covers the most progressive epoch in the world's history, in which one innovation after another has tumbled over themselves in a rapid scramble toward the present age. Last Saturday afternoon about 40 relatives and friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Almira Bowen 2 1-2 miles northwest of the village to assist her in celebrating the eightieth mile stone in life's journey. The party had been in contemplation for some time back and by this means it became possible to bring together a number of elderly people from a distance. All seemed to enjoy the festivities with the ardor of children. Time was found between the visiting and telling of anecdotes to do ample justice to the tea tables which were spread, and as the evening wore away many remembrances of years ago were related and memories awakened to cheer the departing guests. The hostess through all her 80 years has been almost entirely free from sickness and retains remarkably all the faculties of youth. Of the guests present a majority have passed life's three score and ten and yet one to see them could know of no reason why the century mark should not be attained. Present from away were: Mrs. Sophia Hill, Deerfield; Mrs. Delia Allen and Mrs. Philomelia Ellsworth, of Chicago; Mrs. Amelia Crane, Adrian; Mrs. Jesse Ellsworth, Mrs. Sidney Lyon and Mrs. Dell Ellsworth, Addison; Mrs. Amanda Pegg and daughter Dora, of Clayton.

F. D. Green, of Homer, was visiting in town Friday.

Mrs. Sumner Collins, of Detroit, called on friends here Tuesday.

Miss Hattie Bates is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Barker at Adrian.

Mrs. Julia Ford, of Duluth, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Ed Putnam.

Miss Dora Henderson, of Jackson, has been the guest of Miss Anna Williamson this week.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. McKinney and son, of Detroit, are guests of Mrs. M. A Freeman this week.

C. A. Slayton's grain elevator is being rushed along and with good luck will be completed next week.

Our '98 baby carriages have arrived and they are beauties, $5.50 and up.
WHEELER & SISSON.

Mrs. G. W. Hudson and daughter Maude, of Saginaw, and Mrs. L. G. Acton, of Chicago, are visiting at J. S. Temple's.

Mrs. T. O. Perry, of Chicago, who has been spending several weeks with relatives here, left Tuesday for a visit at Gull Lake.

Bert Harrington is taking a two weeks' vacation. Walter Gillen, of Blissfield, is supplying his place at E. W. Howard's.

Saratoga, Niagara Falls and Lake Chautauqua, all visited on excursion over Lake Shore Ry. August 1st and 2nd to Saratoga.

Mrs. T. E. Webb, of Warsaw, Ind., arrived late last evening, called by the precarious condition of her mother, Mrs. Harriett Webster.

Prof. E. A. Wilson, of Benton Harbor, who is spending the summer at his parents near Ridgeway, was shaking hands with friends here the first of the week.

Wm. Jibb, senator from this district, was in town Tuesday to see if he could locate the direction of the wind at the coming Republican senatorial convention.

Mr. McClenahan and the Misses Katherine and Fannie Joselyn, of Ypsilanti, were in the village this morning. They were on their wheels enroute for Coldwater.

The projected street fair scheme expired naturally, the amount of money demanded by the promoters being deemed too high. The merchants here feel that their purse has been drawn upon pretty heavily for the last year for bonuses and it is not surprising that they should be a little conservative in this matter.

To the officers and members of Tecumseh council No. 9, R. T. of T.:

I beg to acknowledge herewith receipt of check from your Financial Sec'y, H. B. Smith, $2000 paid in full on account of policy No. 2009, issued Oct. 6, 1881, to my late husband, Jas. Kingan, who died Feb. 6, 1898 and I desire most cheerfully to testify of my appreciation of your prompt adjustment of the claim in behalf of myself and family. MRS. ELLEN KINGAN.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

A quiet but systematic effort is being made by the commercial travelers to secure a reduction in the excess baggage rates. It is contended by the commercial men that while passenger rates have been reduced, there has been very little change in excess baggage charges. The railroad men reply that there has been a corresponding reduction in baggage rates. Formerly, say the railroad managers, a passenger was only allowed 80 pounds baggage, while now, the allowance is 150 pounds. This, it is claimed, amounts to a material reduction in baggage charges. Besides this, formerly the excess baggage charges were 15 per cent of the fare, while the rate now is 12 per cent.

The matter will be taken up at the next meeting of the Central Passenger association which will be held at Chicago Thursday next.

Yesterday's Blade says: A meeting of the Michigan lines will be held in this city to-morrow for the purpose of adjusting some of their troubles. One of the principal topics which will be up for discussion, will be coal rates, which have been put into effect by the D. T. & M. This road has recently been securing very heavy coal tonnage to Michigan Central points and of course the other Michigan lines charge rate cutting. At to morrow's meeting, the D. T. & M. will be asked to show that the scenery along the D. T. & M. is such that the coal business in question would be induced to move that way.

Traffic Manager Patriarche, of the F. & P. M. and General Freight Agent Davis, of the D. G. R. & W., have already arrived, and representatives of the other lines interested are expected tomorrow.

The removal of the D & L. N. general offices to Detroit next Monday had a damper put on it Wednesday by a telegram from New York to the effect that the offices would stay where they're at for the present at least.

The working force at the general offices was increased Wednesday by the addition of seven new clerks. Business must be on the boom.

J. N. Goodrich, an old Tecumseh boy, late of the Ohio Southern, has been appointed assistant traveling auditor of the D. & L. N.

R. M. Furnas, of Lima, O., insurance agent for the D. & L. N. road, was in town on business Tuesday.

Niagara Falls and return over Lake Shore railway at low rates August 11. Special train.

Half Rates to Saratoga, N. Y. and Return.

On August 1st and 2nd the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Ry. will sell excursion tickets to Saratoga, N. Y. and return at half rates, good until August 31st. You can stop over at Niagara Falls and Chautauqua Lake on return. Consult with agents.

"Here I Am, Mother."

BY THORPE GREENLEAF.

IN 1884 I was in one of the Ohio river counties of western Kentucky, and for some weeks stopped at a hotel where a young civil engineer had headquarters. Harry Gendrin was one of those mellow, open natures who have popularity for a birthright, and was soon a favorite in the town and hotel. He liked to come into my room and sing. His voice was a deep bass; my roommate, Manis, sang a part that I was never musician enough to name; Harry's roommate, Jervis, sang a rich tenor; and I tried to carry the air. We sang "Suwanee River," "Old Kentucky Home," and such pieces occasionally, but the old hymn tunes were best adapted to our style of quartette, and I am obliged to say that we made some good music on "Old Hundred," "Sessions," "Coronation," and like pieces.

On one occasion we sang, "Where Is My Boy To-night?" and at its conclusion Harry said:

"If you care to hear the story I will tell you where I first heard that song."

"Tell it by all means," said the rest of us.

"I will have to begin by saying that until recently I was a pretty reckless chap. My father has always been a railroad prospector and surveyor, and I have been with him in camp ever since I was a mere kid. He is a good man, the leader of a choir in Evettsburg, where my mother frequently sings solos. I never hope to hear anything this side the glory gates that will satisfy me as well as my mother's voice in the First Cumberland church, at Evettsburg.

"Father was not careful enough about my companions in camp, and soon I had drifted a long way from the right. But I learned his business, and when I was about 13 years old he put me to work on one of his jobs. The pay was not large, but it was nearly all clear money and I was too young to understand the proper disposal of so much. I get into the habit of spreeing when I went to Evettsburg, or when father was not in camp.

"Well, when I was about 22, we reached a point in a job where we had been two weeks in the rain and mud, and got to the end of a section one Thursday noon. Father said that we could have to lay off until the next Monday morning, by which time he would get the next section surveyed and estimated. I determined to spend the time in the best town of the next section. We got to Evettsburg on a Friday [illegible] Saturday should be kept quiet, and handled me into his own living rooms when I became unable to care for myself.

"Father staid at his job preparing the next week's work until Saturday afternoon, when he went to Evettsburg to be present at his choir meeting, at seven in the evening. His train was delayed, and he went directly from the depot to the church. By a strange destiny, it seemed, mother was selected to sing, 'Where Is My Boy To-night?' for evening service.

"On the way home father asked for me, and mother replied that she had not seen me. They both became very uneasy, father with an inkling of the truth, mother with all sorts of nameless dreads. As I did not turn up that night father started a private policeman on a search for me next morning before breakfast. He unearthed me and got me to a hotel, where a servant was feed to sober me up. The policeman then went to report, but as my father was not at home, the whole miserable truth came out to my mother. He said as he was leaving:

"'Mrs. Gendrin, I would advise you not to go to Harry to-day. He will be all right to-morrow morning, and you can see him before he starts back to camp. You would only be needlessly distressed at what you would see to-day, and you can do him no good now. If possible, I will get him home to-night after supper.'

"Mother promised that she would not try to see me until I should be sober, and went to the morning service. Father came to me early after noon, but I was sleeping heavily and he thought it best not to disturb me. When I awoke, about five o'clock in the afternoon, I was duly sober, but had a raging headache. When I learned that it was Sunday I knew that my spree was at an end, so I called for a cup of strong coffee. While drinking it I heard from the policeman that mother knew everything.

"I was terribly cut up about it, and my mother's sorrow-laden face arose before me with great distinctness as I sat on the edge of that hotel bed. What with that face and my conscience, you can easily believe that the next few hours were simply awful. Then the church bell rang, and at the sound I aroused myself and said:

"'Mason, I'm going to church.'

"'Where at, Harry?'

"'At the First Cumberland.'

"'You are in pretty rough shape for church.'

"There were very few in the room when I entered, but in 20 minutes the immense auditorium was packed, for Dr. Darby was then in the height of his popularity and drew immensely.

"After the opening prayer my mother rose to sing her solo. This was my principal reason for coming, but I had no idea of what she was going to sing. She had sung it a time or two, and it was now by request of several that she was to sing it again. She would, if possible, have avoided it after the morning's developments, but she had been announced in all the papers and notkin new had been rehearsed, so she must, perforce, sing what surely lacerated her soul at every word. As I have already told you, it was the first time I had heard it.

"At the first line, 'Where is my wandering boy to-night?' the audience, who knew all the sad truth, was wonderfully affected. Mother did not dream that I was present, but supposed I was yet in the hotel. All her gentle, patient, loving nature stood revealed in the painful moan of those first words. Oh, how I hated myself for making it possible that she should sing those words from the heart. I dropped my head in my hands, and rocked like a tree shaken by the wind.

"Every word struck deeper and deeper into my soul. I began to pray. I asked God to forgive me for bruising that tender, loving mother's heart. I called myself an ingrate, a matricide, for her tones impressed my incoherent brain with the thought that she was dying. The refrain, peculiarly composed, as you know, gives the impression of a wail, and when she reached it a second time, I thought I should shriek aloud.

"Then I remembered that I had sinned, not only against mother, but against God. I asked His pardon and got it, just as she reached the last stanza:

"'Go for my wandering boy to-night;
Go search for him where you will;
But bring him to me with all his blight,
And tell him I love him still.'

"Then came the refrain:

"'Oh where is my boy to-night?
O where is my boy to-night?'

"When she sang the second 'where,' with all the emphasis her genius, her longing, her mother heart could give it, the agony of her soul drew me to my feet, and I walked up the aisle toward her with my arms outstretched. Further words died on her lips, the organist ceased playing, and in wondering surprise, turned to look at my mother. For the briefest moment silence reigned, then I sobbed like any child:

"'Here I am, mother.'

"How could a carefully studied melodrama have been better acted? Mother came hastily down the choir steps and folded me in her arms. Then Dr. Darby seized one hand and father took the other. The organist struck the chords of 'Old Hundred' and almost as one voice, the congregation burst into the Doxology: 'Praise God, from Whom all blessings flow,' and I think they sang it about ten times while they were shaking hands with me.

"All that was more than [illegible] years ago. I date a change in my life from that [illegible]

[illegible] I heard [illegible] repeated [illegible] different circumstances perhaps you will [illegible] as remarkable as what I have just related.

"Last summer I was making a 'horseback survey' in southeastern Kentucky. A local preacher, by the name of Logan, was guiding me, and I was to stay at his house one night.

"Several days previous he had come upon a party of gamblers in the woods. His son Thomas was one of the number, but he had impartially reported all of them to the grand jury, the first I heard of it, and had been in hiding ever since. With Spartan-like determination he had resolved that his son should suffer with the rest, but his wife was deeply grieved at the circumstance, and felt indignant that a father should immolate a son in any such way.

"After supper we sat in the soft, June moonlight, and Mr. Logan asked me to sing. Mrs. Logan was sitting father out in the yard near the 'office,' as the boys' lodging in some southern front yards is called.

"After several other pieces, I thought of 'Where Is My Boy To-Night?' My mind reverted to that blessed Sunday night in Evettsburg, and my mother's longing seemed to fill my own soul, so that the singing was particularly expressive. We were in a 'cove,' where rocky precipices hung near, and my words seemed to climb the cliffs and enter all their gloomy crevices and caverns with the wild, despairing query of the weird refrain. I don't think I was 'stuck on my own voice,' but I could not help knowing that I was singing well, and I felt a fine exhilaration in the surroundings.

"Mr. and Mrs. Logan were facing me, and did not see what I saw as I started on the last stanza. A young man walked from the shadow of the fir tree to the office. He lifted his finger in warning to me, and I proceeded with the singing as though nothing had happened, but watched him narrowly, although I could not believe that he meant harm when acting so openly. He stood still in the shadow of the office until I finished.

"There was silence for a moment, then Mrs. Logan arose in a bewildered way, tossed her arms wildly and moaned, not loud, but with searching, penetrating force: 'Oh, where is my boy to-night?'

"The figure in the shadow cried aloud the words: 'Here I am, mother!'

"She turned as Logan and I sprang to our feet. 'Tommy! Tommy!' she murmured, as the strong, young fellow folded her in filial embrace.

"Logan said, as severely as possible: 'Young man, do you know that you are wanted by the grand jury?'

"'Yes, father, but the song I just heard and mother's heart-breaking wail determined me to stand my trial and pay the penalty like a man. I was skulking near the house in order to get provisions to keep me until after the court would adjourn. Now I will stay here to-night, and to-morrow I will go to town and plead guilty. Then I shall never gamble again, please God!'

"'Amen,' said the father, and the son added: 'Mother, you will never again have to ask in earnest: "Where is my boy to-night?"'"—Union Signal.

SAND FOR CHILDREN.

The Cheapest, Most Satisfying and Altogether Least Objectionable of All Playthings.

"First in a child's outfit should be a sand heap if the young ones are quite young," writes Charles M. Skinner of "Gardens for Children" in the Ladies' Home Journal. "Almost the first thing that human beings want to do, after they learn to eat, is to dig. A cartload of sand is one of the cheapest and most satisfying playthings in the world. It is worth a houseful of dolls, and painted monkeys on sticks. Watch Johnny and Nelly at their work and you will wish most heartily that you could find the same novelty and enthusiasm in your employments. That sand pile is very cosmos. Mountains are builded from it with the use of tin shovels and beach pails; there are caves in the cool depths near the foot of those Himalayas—caves big enough for the cat to turn around in; Johnny makes a fort on his side, and Nelly lays out a garden on hers. Johnny's fort mounts murderous clothespins, and the garden has trees and flowers and fountains made of burned matches, wisps of paper and broom straws, while china dolls walk abroad there and take the air. 'What trifling!' did you say? Not so. This is one of the most serious affairs in life. Don't you see that in this play the little ones are learning? Probably they acquire more exact information in an hour than they gain all day in school. They are gathering ideas—facts—about this physical world that they must use their whole lives long, for all knowledge rests upon them; ideas about substance, gravity, density, form, distance."

How to Round the Throat.

To have a rounded throat exercise the throat by singing; sing, whether you have a "voice" or not, deeming the exercise valuable. At night wrap the throat in a linen cloth, wet with scented oil. This will nourish the skin and soften its outlines. Exercise the throat every day by turning the head from side to side slowly, and never fast. Try this ten minutes every night and morning. If the hair falls out change your diet and improve your general health. Friction is too rough treatment for ordinary skins. If used to prevent wrinkles it should be gentle and with a little oil on the fingers.

Homemade Cream Cheese.

Cream cheese may be made at home, providing you follow carefully the rules. Take four quarts of good, thick milk, pour into it two quarts of boiling water; turn into a bag and drain over night. Next morning rub this cheese to a smooth pulp and press through a fine sieve; add gradually a tablespoonful of melted butter or two tablespoonfuls of thick cream. Pack this into small cups and stand in a cool place for about two or three weeks; at the end of that time the top may be removed and the cheese turned from the cups for use.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Recipe for Spiced Cake.

Yellows of seven eggs, two teacupfuls of brown sugar, one teacupful of N. O. molasses, one teacupful of butter, five teacupfuls of flour, one teacupful of sour cream, one teaspoonful of soda, one pound of seeded raisins, one-half pound of citron, cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg and spice to taste.

CLEANING JEWELRY.

Plain Soap and Water Will Not Hurt Genuine Stones or Pure Metals of Any Description.

It is a common impression that water injures jewelry, but jewelers say this is not the case, provided the stones and metal are real. There is no excuse for letting fine rings and other jewelry become dirty, for gold can be excellently well cleaned by washing it in warm soapsuds, made with a pure colorless soap and further strengthened by a few drops of sal volatile. In this the ornaments must be briskly rubbed with the hands, then instantly rinsed in cold water and polished with a piece of chamois leather. Gold ornaments containing stones should not be dipped in this sal volatized water.

To clean ornaments in which stones are set use plain soap and water alone, and do not allow the ornaments to remain too long in the water, for the stones are liable to become loosened. Having rubbed the ornaments gently in the soapsuds, rinse them in cold water and dry slightly. Then make a pointed instrument out of a roll of soft paper and with this clean out the corners and underneath parts of the stones. It will be found that much dust collects below the setting of a stone, and this necessarily detracts from the luster of the jewel. Finally, breathe upon the stones and then polish them with a piece of tissue paper. Opaque stones, such as turquoise or agates, do not require so much attention as diamonds, pearls or emeralds. Silver jewelry can be efficiently cleaned with a silver paste, or ordinary chalk powder, rubbed on the articles briskly, will be found to leave them bright and clean.

Rings with stones in them should never remain upon the hands when these are being washed, as the stones are liable to discolor when frequently in contact with water.

Keep a Long Neck Covered.

Nothing so positively stamps a bodice with the hall-mark of good work as its having not only the neck finish that is in harmony with the other trimming, but also that one which is becoming to the wearer. The woman with the extremely long throat emulates the courage of the beautiful princess of Wales, and never allows herself to wear a frock cut low in the neck. The woman with a short, full throat may have her gown cut a little low and finished with a frill, if that style is suited to the gown; and if it is not, she will have a semi-high arrangement about the throat, which, while it gives the proper effect, will not make her look thick-throated.—N. Y. Ledger.

Marriage by the Glove.

In Holland, says a Scotch paper, marriage by proxy is allowed. This is the so-called "marriage by the glove," and is usually put in practice by a Dutchman who is sojourning abroad, and wanting a wife, is too poor or too far off to return home for one. In such a case he writes home to a lawyer, who selects one conformable to the requirements of his client. If the gentleman approves, he next sends the lawyer a soiled left-hand glove and a power of attorney, which settles the business. A friend marries the woman by proxy, and she is thereafter promptly shipped off to her new home.

SIX LITTLE COLLARS FOR SUMMER.

They Are All New and Stylish and All Six Are Quite Different in Design.

Six little collars have made their appearance this summer and each of them has its fashionable followers. One is shaped like big dish. It is deep and has a turnover rim which can be embroidered. A high black stock is worn with it. The style is a favorite with thin-necked women.

Another collar which is also looked upon with favor by the thin-necked sisterhood is very tall and has broad points. The plainest kind of a ribbon is worn with this collar, or it is slippel under the dress band which can be high or close fitting.

Another collar is the Salisbury, which is tall, without any turn over. It is stitched around the top and down the front. A four-in-hand is worn made of a plain ribbon with a little fringe sewed on the ends.

A very decorative collar is turned over and finished with Grecian squares. The collar buttons at the back like a clergyman's stock. A satin ribbon is hooked around the neck and finished by a tiny satin bow in front.

The nattiest collar for the tailor made girl has the very tiniest points.

A very dressy little neck affair which is, properly speaking, not exactly a collar, consists of a heavy collar linen corded with seven or eight rows of cording. This is worn with a little chiffon ruffle at the top and a chiffon bow at the throat.

TESTS PATIENCE.

The Most Patient People Must Show Annnoyance at Times.

Nothing spoils a good disposition quicker.

Nothing taxes a man's patience.

Like any itchiness of the skin.

Itching piles almost drive you crazy.

All day it makes you miserable.

All night it keeps you awake.

Itch. Itch. Itch. With no relief.

Just the same with eczema.

Can hardly keep from scratching it.

You would do so but you know it makes you worse.

Such miseries are daily decreasing.

People are learning they can be cured.

Learning the merits of Doan's Ointment.

Plenty of proof that Doan's Ointment will cure piles, eczema, or any itchiness of the skin.

Read the testimony of a Battle Creek citizen.

Mr. A. G. Ayers, book binder, of 197 West Main street, Battle Creek, says: "My hands became so sore from eczema that it was with difficulty I could bend my fingers. The skin cracked open, large scabs formed and in addition to the spot being tender they itched intolerable. I tried everything I could hear about or get hold of to stop the trouble but I was unable to do so until I procured Doan's Ointment. I had heard it spoken about by several people but as I thought it would act like all the other preparations which I tried I waited some time until I was compelled from the condition of my hands to do something. Doan's Ointment cured me. Up to date and this is some months after I stopped the treatment, I have had no indication of any return."

Doan's Ointment for sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Uncle Wash's Escape

BY NED HUTTON.

ONE night when I sat with old Washington Burns in front of the big fireplace in the old man's home up in Callaway county the conversation languished, and we dropped into a reverie as the logs burned down to glowing coals. A rat began gnawing in the casement of the mantel, and the old man, rousing himself and reaching for the tobacco jar, said:

"Thar's Hazel at it again."

I asked: "Is Hazel the rat's name?"

"It shore is, sonny," replied the old gentleman with a chuckle, "an' the way he comes by it is all on account of his liking for hazelnuts as an article ov grub. I've knowed the little varment fer a long time an' fer to kill time I'll jest call him out an' show you his leedle pecooliarity with them nuts."

Uncle Wash crossed to the corner of the room and drew forth a handful of hazelnuts from a barrel. After selecting an iron from a row on the shelf, he sat down in front of the fireplace, clasped the iron between his knees and began cracking them with an old wagon tongue pin, peering over his glasses at the hole in the casement after each nut.

When the click of the iron on the nuts began, the gnawing ceased, and presently the rat appeared at the hole. His shiny eyes surveyed the room carefully and finally settled on the old man. Then he came out on the floor, and advancing to the old gentleman's side climbed up his trouser leg and sat on his knee and waited, watching every move of Uncle Wash's hands with his little, beady eyes.

Uncle Wash cracked a nut and gave the rat the kernel, which the rat quickly disposed of, holding it between his paws while gnawing it. His capacity for nuts seemed unlimited.

By accident I overturned a chair I had been twirling, and the rat jumped from his perch and scampered to his hole in apparent great terror.

"Hazel is mighty pecooliar thataway," said Unc Wash when he had finished the nuts and was smoking again. "He shore likes hazelnuts, an' will quit eatin' up the house any time fer a mess ov 'm, but fallin' chairs makes him nervous, kinder. Jes' the minute what he hears me crackin' nuts here in front of the fireplace, that air rat'll quit the most important piece of gnawin' he's got on hand an' come pokin' in here fer his sheer, but when a racket like that happens, the leedle varment gits in a fidget fer to leave an' he does it in a hurry."

"I recollect once when he comes racin' in here lookin' fer nuts like he did jes' now, an' he run up aginst more'n he bargained fer an' raised a racket that fetched your Uncle Wash outen a difficulty that was a pinchin' him mightily, an' I reckon the rat recollects it, too. It was mighty embarrisin' to the rat, an' to another party who was here present, but it shore tickles your Uncle Wash, an' that's why I think so much ov him."

"Yaas, sir," continued the old gentleman, chuckling to himself. "Yaas, sir, that pore leedle insignificant animal shore saves your Uncle Wash from gittin' married to a widder woman onct on a time, an' on that account I kinder takes pains to look out fer him now, an' sorter comfort him when he gits skeered at chairs or the dogs movin' 'round under the house an' growlin' in their sleep.

"This here widder woman I'm goin' to tell you about was called Mis' Sile by all the neighbors 'round here. Her name I dun fergot now, 'cause I never was much interested in this female nohow, but she uster sign it up at the store as Mis' Silas Madder, after her husband, an' so everybody knowed her as Mis' Sile.

"She was jes' a widder woman fer a leedle while, when the rat averts a catastrophe an' saves your Uncle Wash a-marryin' her. She lives perty near over on the county line, an' her husband was drowned one spring tryin' to cut ice on the river when they was a thaw goin' on. The ice dun cracked when he was a-sawin' ov it, an' Silas fell in an' was drowned, along with a ice saw that ole Bill Gaines had bought in St. Louis an' had loaned to him. They never found Silas, ner the ice saw, neither, an' I guess before Silas had drifted to the mouth of the river that air woman was shasin' over the county lookin' fer another man.

"She looks over all the avaylable fellers in this naik ov the woods, an' it looks like she finally decides ter settle down on your Uncle Wash as a fitten' victim fer matrimony; at least I knows that after that she devotes all her attentions to that end.

"It was about the time that the widder was manooverin' most an' I was a-weakenin' that I forms the acquaintance of this rat. He was kinder like the widder woman; he jes' drapt in, an' findin' the surfoundings congenial, natully he stayed here.

"I first notices him one night when I was a-sittin' here like we air now, an' I was jes' passin' the time ay crackin' hazelnuts when I sees him stick his head outen the hole down thar in the casin' an' look up at me like he wanted some hazelnuts, too. I rolls a couple along the floor over to him fer to see. It didn't take him two seconds to squat down on his hind legs an' gnaw off a corner of the shell an' reach in with one paw an' git the goody out an' sit thar eatin' it, listenin' between bites to the dogs movin' round under the house.

"Natully I takes up with the critter, more especially since I had heerd the widder say she didn't like rats, an' I feeds him hazelnuts till he's so swelled up he kaint skacely git back in his hole, an' the next night he comes back agin' an' sits thar eatin' nuts an' listenin' to the dogs.

"The widder woman 'ud come round every onct in a while an' set an' chatter a-n' then go away. At night me'n the rat 'ud hold a leedle session an' eat hazelnuts an' listen to the dogs. Me'n the rat grows more familiar every night an' he finally gits so he comes over to my chair an' climbs up my breeches laig an' digs his paws inter my knee so's he wouldn't jar off when I'd pound the nuts.

"An' then maybe in the mornin' this widder woman 'ud come drivin' over behind a ole mealy nosed mule an' pester me, askin' whether she'd better plant hog cawn er sweet cawn in the medder land she was breakin' up on her farm, an' she'd sit down here an' talk an' fuss round an' 'declare to gracious,' an' I'd fidget till she run out o' talk an' chatter an' then I'd hitch up her ole mule an' she'd go drivin' home, an' then I'd call out the rat and feed him hazelnuts an' enjoy the quiet, 'cause the rat didn't make no noise.

"Well, things run along in that rut fer several weeks, the widdar gittin' more familiar an' I more oneasy, an' the rat jes' stayin' where he is, enjoyin' life an' hazelnuts an' provin' a mighty consolation to me. Finally 'long about the June rise in the river, I was haulin' up some driftwood from the river what I had ketched in the backwater, an' the wagon pin broke an' a big water-soaked sycamore log rolled off an' threw me down an' ketched me under it an' broke my laig, besides skinnin' me up considerable. The neighbors heard me holler an' came an' rolled the log offen me an' carried me up here an' sent fer the doctor, but afore he got here that dadfetched widder woman came sailin' in, right in the middle of all the misery I was a-sufferin' from.

"The widder woman never left the house after that at all, fer she said I'd need some one to tend to me, an' she would be most tickled to death fer to do it, an' the doctor agreed with her, an' so I couldn't do nothin' to stop it, bein' laid up in bed thataway with my leg strapped to a board.

"I dunno whether that laig er the widder discommoded me fer the next few days," continued the old man; "but I do know that this female was powerful irritatin' while I was tryin' to cure it. She had brought a neighbor girl over with her for company, an' she'n the girl uster sleep in the room 'jinin' this one, where the widder said she could hear me if I got thirsty durin' the night an' wanted a drink; but I uster stand the thirst ruther than have her come in a waylayin' me when I couldn't run, an' so I uster keep quiet. From the time she'd git up an' make the fire fer breakfast she'd scold the dogs fer trackin' up the kitchen floor, an' turn the cat out fer the night, an' go to bed. She'd palaver an' talk an' fuss 'round, an' I'd squirm an' kick the kivers 'round with my well foot till the doctors said if I didn't keep still my laig would grow as crooked as the Wess nigger's was, what got broke by the nigger fallin' over a salt bar'l on a steamboat. He uster lean over the side of the bed fer to play dice on the floor with the other niggers who'd visit him.

"One night the widder woman was sittin' by the bed thar by me an' knittin' socks fer winter, an' a-clatterin', when this neighbor girl got to foolin' round an' found a ole meal sack full ov hazelnuts, an' acourse she had fer to fill her apron an' come in to show Miss Sile what she had diskivered.

"'Fer the lands sakes, Mandy, where'd you git 'em?' says the widder, when she sees um. 'Gracious Goshen! but they is jes' what I want! I have heered many an' many a time that hazelnut ile is jest the very best thing fer to make things heal right up,' sez she. 'I'll sit right down here an' crack 'um, an' in the morning I'll make some ile fer Mr. Baines what'll fetch his limb all right in a jiffy,' sez she. An' she got a iron offen the sheff an' flopped down in a chair an' begun crackin' nuts an' a gabbin'.

"She was a chatterin' along when I notices the rat stick his head outen the hole an' look 'round. Hazel heered the crackin' ov the nuts, an' he was shore hungry fer some ov 'em an' had come out to investigate. I knowed what'd happen, so I jes stuffed a corner of the kivver in my mouth to keep from laffin' an' watched the critter.

"The rat looked 'round a couple ov times like his appetite was affectin' him, an' then he took a run fer to climb up on ole Miss Sile's knees, jes' like he uster on mine, an' I ducked under the sheets an' listened. The rat never took into account no female attire evidently, an' that's where he missed it.

"I heered a screech an' a crash an' the widder woman went backward over her chair, the hazelnuts in her apron fallen like rain all round the room. When I peeped out she was a-gettin' up an' she grabbed the iron an' lammed it at Hazel jes' as he was a-divin' in his hole, an' she turned on me where I was all doubled up in bed laffin' an' she lambasted me till she got so het up she couldn't talk no more, an' then she struck out afoot fer home, the neighbor child a-trailin' along behind. An' then I picked the hazelnuts outer the bed where they was a-gougin' me, an' had another fit laffin'.

"I liked to starved to death lyin' there alone afore anybody found me, but I put in the time jollifyin' an' tryin' to coax the rat outen the hole by tappin' with my pipe, but he was too skeered to come.

"Finally this Wess nigger come over to borrow a fish trap an' found me, an' he staid with me after that till I got well, but it was many a day afore Hazel 'ud come outen his hole, an' when he did he was skeery. Even now, when he hears a chair fall over, he gits up an' dusts, jes' like you seen him."—St. Louis Republic.

A TOILET NECESSITY.

Why Lemons Should Find a Place on the Toilet Table of Every Sensible American Woman.

No woman should be without lemons on her toilet table. They are about as necessary nowadays as soap, so those who believe in them say.

"Lemons!" exclaimed a woman who believes in them religiously. "Why, I wouldn't be without lemons a whole day for anything. I once heard of a French woman who was considered the most beautiful woman of her time, and she attributed her good looks to eating eight oranges a day for 365 days in the year. I'd be willing to bet on it that lemons will do far more toward beautifying a woman than oranges. Lemons beautify one through and through, outside and in. Nothing in the world bleaches the skin, hands and face like a little diluted lemon juice applied at night, and, strange to say, unlike most bleaches, it softens the complexion. Then the finest of manicure acids is made by dropping a teaspoonful of lemon juice in a cup of tepid water. This removes all stains from nails and skin and loosens the cuticle naturally and much better than any sharp instrument. A dash of lemon juice in plain water is an excellent tooth wash, removing not only the tartar, but sweetening the breath, and a teaspoonful of the juice in a small cup of black coffee will drive off a bilious headache before the sufferer can say caterpillar. Life would be very barren to me without lemons, and so it would be to any woman who knows the secret of their efficacy. Best of all, the juice of the lemon, taken with a teaspoonful of soda—cooking soda—after each meal, will pull the flesh right off the most persistently fat woman who ever worried over her weight."

THE DAINTY CHEMISE.

It Has Come Back Again, Reveling in Ruffles and Puffs, and in Full Womanly Favor.

The chemise went out for awhile, but it came back again. This year it is to be worn by every self-respecting woman and it will be found to revel in the ruffles and puffs of the chemise of the days of Josephine.

The favorite material is nainsook which after all is very durable if a little care is taken in the laundry. Nainsook underwear wears for two years for best and for two years more as second best after it has been patched and darned a little, if only it goes through the hands of a careful laundress. This statement is borne out by every woman who has handled dainty lingerie.

CHEMISE AND SKIRT.

The new chemises are made long enough for an underskirt. They are gathered so as to be small around the waist and to flare around the bottom. The neck is gathered around with lace and ribbon. There come ribbons of all colors that are durable and can be laundered with the garments without being removed.

The shoulder bands of the chemise are made of the same ribbon of a broader width.

HOME CALISTHENICS.

The Best Time for Athletics of Any Description Is Right After the Morning Tub.

Every girl ought to be able to let her elbows meet at the back, though few can manage it, says a writer in Leisure Hours. No girl should use dumbbells without skilled advice as to the weight they should be. Much harm has been done by overworking the muscles in calisthenic exercises, and there are so-called professors of the art who do more harm than good. Sometimes the weight of the heads is too great, and very often the exertion is much too arduous.

Delicate girls suffer very much from overdoing even ordinary exercise and the very strongest must feel their strength impaired by too lavish use of any one set of muscles. The best time for practicing these exercises is immediately after the morning tub. They improve the circulation and prevent the tendency of stooping, which almost every one experiences who never does any gymnastic work, brace the muscles, benefit the figure and impart the graceful, erect carriage which should distinguish veery athletic and sport-loving English woman. Only ten minutes should be the limit.

How to Care for Silk.

Silk being always worn, it is strange how few women understand how to treat the beautiful fabric. One fact not by any means widely known is that silk should never be folded. Then, again, use a clean, smooth table to sponge the fabrics on. A good renovating fluid for black silk is a little rock of ammonia and a piece of common soda, put into a bottle and dissolve into one-half pint of boiling water. Sponge with this and iron; this is also good for restoring rusty-looking black woolen goods. A French recipe says to clean black silk by sponging on both sides with spirits of wine and ironing on the wrong side. The sponging with coffee removes all of a greasy appearance that especially affects gros grain silks.

MILITARY HOSPITAL.

Chamberlin's Famous Hotel at Old Point Comfort, Va.

By Order of Gen. Miles the Finest Inn in America Is Being Converted Into a Home for Sick and Wounded Soldiers.

[Special Washington Letter.]

TWELVE HUNDRED soldiers of this republic were reported by Gen. Shafter as having been wounded in the battle before Santiago.

Have you thought of it, and considered what is being done for their relief and comfort. Their mothers and fathers and sisters and brothers throughout the land have looked with longing eyes and yearning hearts toward the bloody battlefield, and wondered whether they were being carefully nursed back into life and health, or whether they were dying of neglect under the fierce southern sun.

During the civil war from 1861 to 1866 men were killed and wounded every day, because the war was continued by day and by night. Men were wounded on picket and skirmish lines, in reconnaissances, and in the terrific impact of battle.

On June 3, 1864, when Gen. Grant ordered an assault along the entire line at Cold Harbor, Va., 12,000 men fell inside of 15 minutes; almost as many men as Shafter had in his entire army when he landed on Cuban soil.

What to do with the wounded was a problem which it became necessary for the surgeon general of the army to solve early in the beginning of the civil war; and the result was the establishment of a system of field hospitals and general hospitals which was well-nigh perfect in all its appointments.

The soldiers wounded at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, and other battles in which the Army of the Potomac was engaged, were taken to general hospitals at Fairfax Seminary, near Alexandria, Va., to Armory Square, Columbian and Kalorama hospitals in Washington, D. C., the Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, Bedloe's Island, New York city, and Harris' general hospital, Albany, N. Y.

There were scores of vessels fitted for the transportation of sick and wounded sailors, which were called hospitals, afloat, and they conveyed the soldiers from the battlefields to the general hospitals. The wounded men of the western armies were taken to the Cotton-Gin general hospital at New Orleans, the Gayoso at Memphis, No. 16 at Jeffersonville, Ind., the Jefferson barracks at St. Louis, the Estes house at Keokuk, and the Douglass general hospital at Chicago, Ill.

At the beginning of the civil war the hospital system of our army was entirely inadequate, and thousands of lives were lost because the wounded soldiers did not receive prompt as well as skillful treatment. It is well known that promptness is as important as skill in such emergencies. Because there was not promptness at the beginning of the civil war many of our soldiers died of traumatic fever.

Men experienced in affairs in the national capital were not only surprised but amazed when Gen. Shafter telegraphed for a hospital ship, after the first battle of Santiago. Ordinary common sense would seem to have dictated to the military authorities in Washington the necessity of having a hospital ship before the battle took place; because men are always wounded, if not killed, whenever a battle takes place, and provision should have been made for that contingency. The writer has heard no utterance of any excuse for the negligence and carelessness which produced this state of affairs at Santiago.

But since the war has begun the office of the surgeon general has been diligently engaged in making preparations to meet emergencies of this character, so that hereafter it cannot be said that the soldiers in our army were not taken care of with promptness as well as with skill when prompt attention is required. Provisions are practically completed for taking care of the sick and wounded. In large bodies of men in the open field there is always a percentage of sickness; and sick men require as prompt and skillful attention to preserve their lives as wounded men.

In actual warfare many men die from relapses because they have not proper surroundings during their convalescence. Maj. Gen. Miles, in command of the army, has taken upon himself the responsibility of attending to a part of the work which should have been performed by the surgeon general. He has prepared a place for the sick and wounded which will become the most complete military hospital in the world; and which will be the most delightful place for the convalescing soldiers upon the face of the earth.

There is great excitement in Hillsdale, because of an unheard of occurrence at Bawbeese resort. It seems that by some mistake a family had taken a cake of soap to the resort, and a Hillsdale pig, which had never before seen the article, ate it up. After many days the owners of the soap missed it, not because it was wanted for use, but because there was a discussion as to its appearance, many of the resorters having forgotten how it looked. Then some one remembered that the pig had been sick, and a doctor was called to diagnose the case. He threw the pig into the lake, and immediately there was a great circle of suds, and the animal was washed ashore.—Hudson Post.

Private postal cards are now mailable. The cards used must be the same as the style known as "H." This card is 3 1-4 and 5 1-2 inches in size, as fixed by the Postal Union. When a private card is used by an individual it must be substantially of the same weight as that turned out by the government, while in color it may be light gray, white, cream or buff. In all cases there must be affixed a one cent postage stamp. On the address side it must bear these words, "Private mailing card, authorized by the act of congress May 19, 1898." The act, of course, does not prevent the sale of regular postal cards, but it gives those a chance who have been getting out souvenir postal cards.—Dundee Reporter.

Nibs O' Hearn no sooner gets to breathing free air again than he begins to tear up things in a pleasant way according to the Adrian Telegram:

A rumpus occurred on South Main street Saturday afternoon, near the D. & L. N. tracks, as the Lyons stage was leaving town. It seems that a couple of young women, tough characters, attempted to leave town, contrary to the wishes of Nibs O'Hearn, their "steady company." Nibs got hold of one of them, and dragging her out of the stage, threw her down in the dust and then ordered the stage on. The driver raised a row for a few moments about interfering with Uncle Sam's mail, but finally drove on. Considerable excitement was created in the neighborhood, and a big crowd gathered.

The Blissfield Advance has the following notice:

On Wednesday morning about 1 o'clock two persons were seen in the act of boring a hole into the front door of my store room, and it will please me if they will call at once and settle for the same, because it will save them a great deal of trouble and costs. It was fortunate for the two fellows who were smoking their cigars that they did not shove the door in as I was waiting behind the stove with my new gun to perforate them. B. CANNON.

Yes, it is fortunate indeed for when two men are enjoying a quiet smoke it is not a pleasant thing to have port holes perforated in them with either a new gun or a Big Cannon. Haul 'em in nevertheless for a man, who has to stay anywhere near the stove this weather, deserves the sympathy of the entire community and could hardly be expected to know that his store needed ventilating.

"Monday Nick Rynd, of Royalton, had Ira Haywood and Chas. Barden arrested for violating the Sunday law by threshing wheat. They were summoned to appear before Squire Fred Barden Tuesday. Attorney Frank Ham was employed by Haywood and Barden, who plead not guilty. For some reason no prosecution showed up, but notwithstanding the justice found them guilty and fined each $3.00 and costs. Through their attorney they were advised not to pay the fine. Thereupon, the justice said he would hold them until the fine and costs were paid, and made preparations to carry out his decision. In the meantime Attorney Ham returned to Wauseon to get out habeas corpus papers when word was received by telephone that the men had been released. It is said a feud has existed for sometime among the parties which may have had something to do with their arrest."—Wauseon Expositor.

UNDER AMERICAN FLAG.

Spaniards Surrender the Port and City of Ponce, Puerto Rico, to Our Forces.

DEMAND MEETS WITH NO RESISTANCE.

Entrance of the Americans is Warmly Welcomed—Old Glory Hoisted—Gen. Miles Issues a Proclamation Promising to Protect the People—Gen. Merritt at Manila.

Washington, July 30.—The results thus far achieved by Gen. Miles and Capt. Higginson, in command of the naval squadron, in the occupation of Puerto Rico, have created a feeling of intense satisfaction among officials of the administration. Information received Friday directly from Gen. Miles was very gratifying to the president and his advisers. It indicates, as one official expressed it, that "Miles is cleaning up everything as he goes." The surrender of Ponce, practically without a struggle, is regarded by the war officials with especial satisfaction. In importance it is the second city of the island.

Miles Tells of the Victory.

Washington, July 30.—The war department has received the following dispatch from Gen. Miles:

"Port Ponce, Puerto Rico, via St. Thomas, July 29.—Secretary of War, Washington: On the 26th Garretson had a spirited engagement on the skirmish line. Our casualties, four wounded, all doing well. Spanish loss, three killed, 13 wounded. Yauca occupied yesterday. Henry's division there to-day.

"Spanish troops are retreating from southern part of Puerto Rico. Ponce and port have a population of 50,000, now under American flag.

"The populace received troops and saluted the flag with wild enthusiasm. Navy has several prizes, also 70 lighters.

Gen. Miles' Proclamation.

Gen. Miles has issued the following proclamation:

"In the prosecution of the war against the kingdom of Spain by the people of the United States, in the cause of liberty, justice and humanity, its military forces have come to occupy the island of Puerto Rico. They come bearing the banners of freedom, inspired by a noble purpose, to seek the enemies of our government and of yours and to destroy or capture all in armed resistance. They bring you the fostering arms of a free people, whose greatest power is justice and humanity to all living within their fold. Hence they release you from your former political relations and, it is hoped, this will be followed by your cheerful acceptance of the government of the United States.

"The chief object of the American military forces will be to overthrow the armed authority of Spain and give the people of your beautiful island the largest measure of liberty consistent with this military occupation. They have not come to make war on the people of the country, who for centuries have been oppressed, but, on the contrary, to bring protection not only to yourselves but to your property, promote your prosperity and bestow the immunities and blessings of our enlightened and liberal institutions and government.

"It is not their purpose to interfere with the existing laws and customs, which are wholesome and beneficial to the people, so long as they conform to the rules of the military administration, order and justice. This is not a war of devastation and desolation, but one to give all within the control of the military and naval forces the advantages and blessings of enlightened civilization."

Gen. Merritt at Manila.

Manila Bay, July 26, via Hong-Kong, July 30.—Gen. Wesley Merritt and troops under his command arrived at Manila on the morning of July 25, after a trip devoid of startling event. He reports all well aboard the Newport. Gen. Merritt will at once assume command as provisional governor for the United States.

Railway stock partly destroyed now restored. Telegraph communication also being restored. Cable instruments destroyed. Have sent to Jamaica for others.

"This is a prosperous and beautiful country. The army will soon be in mountain region; weather delightful; troops in best of health and spirits; anticipate no insurmountable obstacle in future. Results thus far have been accomplished without the loss of a single life.

"NELSON A. MILES, Major General."

Gen. Miles' Proclamation.

Gen. Miles has issued the following proclamation:

"In the prosecution of the war against the kingdom of Spain by the people of the United States, in the cause of liberty, justice and humanity, its military forces have come to occupy the island of Puerto Rico. They come bearing the banners of freedom, inspired by a noble purpose, to seek the enemies of our government and of yours and to destroy or capture all in armed resistance. He reports all well aboard the Newport. Gen. Merritt will at once assume command as provisional governor for the United States.

tional colors that can be spared to be given to the different municipalities. I request that the question of the tariff rate to be charged in the parts of Puerto Rico occupied by our forces be submitted to the president for his action, the previously existing tariff remaining meanwhile in force. As to the government and military occupation, I have already given instructions based upon the instructions issued by the president in the case of the Philippine islands and similar to those issued at Santiago de Cuba. MILES,

"Major General Commanding."

American Troops Advancing.

Ponce, Puerto Rico, July 31, via St. Thomas, D. W. I., Aug. 2.—Col. Hulings, with ten companies of the Sixteenth Pennsylvania, has occupied Juan Diaz, about ten miles from Ponce, on the way to San Juan. The American flag was raised and greeted with great enthusiasm by the populace.

Failed to Show Fight.

Ponce, Aug. 3.—Arroyo and Guayama were seized Monday and the American flag hoisted by Capt. Goodrich, of the St. Louis. A detachment landed at Arroyo from the Gloucester and the Wasp and met with no opposition. After entering the town and placing it in charge of his men he moved on to Guayama, four miles west. Here he found that the Spanish troops had abandoned the place several days before. Guayama may be used as a supply depot for our troops.

OUTLOOK IS BRIGHT.

The Business Situation Throughout the Country Shows Indications of General Prosperity.

New York, July 30.—R. G. Dun & Co., in their weekly review of trade, say: "Big business in January is expected, but big business in July means more. It is the month of all others when trade is naturally light, new engagements are ordinarily deferred, and men wait for the outcome and movement of crops. But more business is being done this year than in any previous July of which there are records. The payments through clearing houses have been 5.8 per cent. larger than in 1892, the year of greatest prosperity heretofore, and for the month thus far 6.5 per cent. larger than last year and 8.4 per cent. larger than in 1892. But these records and others have to be judged in the light of heavy decline in prices since 1892, so that the volume of business transacted is about 20 per cent. larger than the volume of payments indicates.

"Considering that the purchases of nearly half the people depend on the success of agriculture, and that the prosperity of the entire transporting interest is materially affected by the size of crops to be moved, it may be said with reason that the promise of general prosperity this year is unusually bright.

Bradstreet's says: "While as yet showing little actual effect upon distributive trade, there is evidence that the improved prospects for peace, with probably wider markets for American products, have given a more hopeful tinge to the trade outlook, more particularly at the east. This is reflected in active preparations by shippers and coasting trade interests to share in the expected widening of demand from the West Indies. As for some time past, however, reports of solid business returns come mainly from the western part of the country, and in the markets of that section are reported signs of the ground swell of fall demand.

"Business failures in the United States remain at a normal low point, aggregating for the week 189, against 188 last week, and compared with 259 in this week a year ago, 294 in 1896, 221 in 1895 and 220 in 1894."

Tax on Strolling Players.

Washington, Aug. 2.—The commissioner of internal revenue has held that a traveling theatrical company playing dramas, "without exhibiting feats of horsemanship or acrobatic sports" in towns of 25,000 inhabitants or less, is liable to a tax of ten dollars for the year, under paragraph 6 of section 2 of the new revenue act. It had previously been held that this class of performances comes within paragraph 7, which imposes a tax of $100.

Washington, Aug. 1.—Gen. Miles, in command of the Puerto Rican expedition, sent the following dispatch to Secretary Alger, which was made public at the war department at ten o'clock Sunday night:

"Ponce, Puerto Rico, July 31.—Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.: Volunteers are surrendering themselves with arms and ammunition. Four-fifths of the people are overjoyed at the arrival of the army. Two thousand from one place have volunteered to serve with it. They are bringing in transportation, beef cattle and other needed supplies. The custom house has already yielded $14,000. As soon as all the troops are disembarked they will be in readiness to move. Please send any na-

THE DEATH OF BISMARCK.

Germany's Great Statesman Passes Away at His Castle Home in Friedrichsruhe.

ENTIRE EMPIRE SHOCKED BY THE NEWS

Remarkable Career of the Man Who, by His Untiring Efforts, Placed His Country Near the Top in the List of the Great Powers of Europe—Brief Resume of His Work.

Berlin, Aug. 1.—Bismarck is dead. Germany's "man of blood and iron" passed away at 11:20 o'clock Saturday night at his castle of Friedrichsruhe. The entire nation—the nation which he unified by his indomitable will and unyielding purpose—is shocked by the sudden news.

It appears that the ex-chancellor's death was not precipitated by sudden complications, but was rather the culmination of chronic diseases—neuralgia of the face and inflammation of the veins—which kept him in constant pain, that was borne with the iron fortitude which might have been expected. The beginning of the end dates from July 20, when the prince was confined to his bed. He had been several days prostrated before an inkling of his decline reached the world.

BISMARCK'S CAREER.

A Brief Resume of His Great Services to the Fatherland.

Otto Edward Leopold von Bismarck was born at the manor of Schoenhausen, in the district of Magdeburg, April 1, 1815. At the age of six he was placed in a boarding school at Berlin, and at 12 was sent to a high school at the capital. In 1832 he began studying law and political science at the University of Gottingen. Toward the end of the following year he entered the University of Berlin, and he was admittted to the bar in 1835. In 1836 he was made the official law reporter for a Berlin court, but he soon was transferred to Aix-la-Chapelle as a referendary, and in 1837 was appointed to serve in the crown office at Potsdam.

The next eight or nine years Bismarck passed in farming, hunting and soldiering. He went into society and took an active part in the local affairs of the neighborhoods in which he lived. In 1845 his father died, and the estate at Schoenhausen came into his hands. He withdrew almost entirely from social life, and settled down to the life of a country gentleman. July 28, 1847, he married Johanna, the daughter of Heinrich von Puttkamer, of Viatium, Pomerania, and in the same year he appeared in the united diet at Berlin, as a parliamentary deputy, representing the nobility of the province of Saxony. In 1848 he participated in the gathering of the rural nobility in Berlin, known as the Junker parliament. His career as a parliamentary deputy ended in 1850. In 1851, after serving as secretary, he was appointed the Prussian representative at the Germanic diet at Frankfort, which was the administrative council of the Germanic confederation, founded by the congress in Vienna in 1815.

He was made the Prussian ambassador at St. Petersburg in 1859, where he remained until 1862, when he was transferred to the embassy in Paris. After a few months in the French capital, in September, 1862, Bismarck succeeded Prince Hohenzollern as prime minister. He formed an alliance with Italy early in 1866, and Prussia, under his guidance declared war against Austria and her allies in the confederation in June of the same year. Three months later Austria had been crushed and Prussia had become the head of the North German confederation.

Bismarck concluded secret treaties with the South German states forthwith, in the expectation of war. In internal politics the next 19 years of Bismarck's life were occupied with his struggle to assure the Prussian government the control of the Catholic church in Prussia with his campaign for the suppression of socialism in Germany and with the inauguration of a protective system of customs duties. He also secured for Germany several African colonies and gave the first impetus to the upbuilding of her merchant marine. Under his guidance the empire laid the foundations of its present industr and maritime greatness. fairs he formed the triple a Austria and Germany. Ha solidified the empire by t Denmark in 1864, against and against France in 187 his later years to deve without disturbance fro

By Absorption.

Catarrhal sufferers should remember that Ely's Cream Balm is the only catarrh remedy which is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the diseased membrane. It does not dry up the secretions, but changes them to a limpid and odorless condition, and finally to a natural and healthy character. The balm can be found at any drug store, or by sending 50 cents to Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York, it will be mailed. Full directions with each package. Cream Balm opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays inflamation, thereby stopping pain in the head, heals and protects the membrane and restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils.

A pocket's work is done in a abstraction.

EAST FRANKLIN.

LaGrippe,

Followed by Heart Disease, Cured by DR. MILES' HEART CURE.

MR. C. C. SHULTS, of Winterset, Iowa, inventor and manufacturer of Shults' Safety Whiffletree Coupling, writes of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. "Two years ago an attack of LaGrippe left me with a weak heart. I had run down in flesh to mere skin and bone. I could not sleep lying down for smothering spells; frequent sharp darting pains and palpitation caused a constant fear of sudden death, nothing could induce me to remain away from home over night. My local physician prescribed Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and in a few days I was able to sleep well and the pains gradually lessened, and finally ceased. I reduced the the doses, having gained fifteen pounds, and am now feeling better in every way than I have for years."

COULDN'T PAY.

Failure to Meet Interest on Notes Puts a Well-Known Lumberman in Bad Fix.

Detroit, Aug. 3.—The financial embarrassment of S. O. Fisher, of West Bay City, the well-known lumberman, became public Tuesday through a meeting of the representatives of eight local banks, which hold notes aggregating $150,000 bearing Mr. Fisher's signature. For a number of years Mr. Fisher bought and sold pine lands, and was interested with James T. Hurst, of Wyandotte, who became embarrassed in 1896. As the indorser of Hurst's notes, Mr. Fisher met the creditors, and agreed to assume all the indebtedness, providing the banks gave him three years on his paper, at six per cent. interest. At that time Mr. Fisher's personal liabilities amounted to about $400,000, while Turner & Fisher, the South End Lumber company and Hurst & Fisher were liable for $1,000,000 in addition. He failed to meet the first semi-annual payment of interest.

A few weeks ago Bank Commissioner Maltz and his assistants examined the Lumbermen's state bank of West Bay City, of which Mr. Fisher is president, and found that he had executed a trust mortgage for $200,000 in favor of the bank, to secure it for $120,000 borrowed money, the remainder securing James Galloway, of Hillsdale, who had assisted him some time previous. The local banks have decided not to take any action until Emory Wendell investigates the circumstances surrounding the mortgage and also the deed which was made over to Mr. Galloway. It is said that Mr. Fisher's paper and indorsements in about 30 Michigan banks amount to fully $700,000. Mr. Fisher has large stumpage interests in Canada, and if the Canadian government repeals the log duty he may be able to dispose of them in American markets and realize a sufficient sum to pay his liabilities.

CALL TO REPUBLICANS.

The State Convention of the Party Is to Be Held in Detroit on September 21.

Detroit, July 29.—At a meeting of the republican state central committee here Thursday afternoon it was decided to hold the state convention in Detroit September 21. Twelve votes were taken before a decision was reached. A portion of the committee, particularly the Pingree men, urged an early convention, while the antis, among them D. M. Ferry, the state chairman, desired a short campaign. Senator Burrows, who is to be a candidate for reelection before the next legislature, is said to have favored the later date for the convention. Gov. Pingree has not yet announced his personal preferences as to United States senator. Grant Fellows and Congressman William Alden Smith were nominated for the temporary chairmanship, and the former won by a vote of 14 to 8.

To Revolutionize Iron Industry.

Iron Mountain, Aug. 1. — Detroit capitalists are erecting a plant near here for the making of steel billets and pig iron direct from the iron by a secret electric process. They claim it can be done at a very small percentage of present cost. If the furnace is a success it will revolutionize the iron business and give a market value to many millions of tons of lead ore on this range. The demonstration furnace, together with the engine and electric motor, will cost $12,000.

A Valuable Souvenir.

Lansing, Aug. 1.—Theodore McClure, chief clerk of the state board of health, has prepared a review of 25 years' health work in Michigan. The state will print 3,000 copies of the work, which will contain portraits of the sanitarians who have served on the board without pay. These pamphlets will be sent out as souvenirs at the quarter centennial celebration of the board at Detroit, August 9, 10 and 11.

Muskegon's New Statuary.

Muskegon, July 30.—The contract for the erection of the statues of Lincoln, Grant, Sherman and Farragut, donated to this city by Charles H. Hackley, has been awarded to the Harrison Granite company, of Adrian, for $25,700. The contract price exceeds by $5,700 Hackley's gift, but the philanthropist will supply the deficiency. Work must be completed in 13 months.

Preferred Death to Trial.

Lansing, July 30.—When the trial of John H. Crostick for beating a member of his family was called at Williamston the defendant was missing. Upon repairing to his place of business the officer found that he had cut his throat and was dead. Crostick was a successful business man, but took to drinking heavily four years ago, and his decline was rapid.

Serious Fire at Port Huron.

Port Huron, Aug. 2. — Fire Monday night destroyed the carpenter shop of Wilson Bros., the feed store of Peter Irving, the blacksmith shop of Robert Mitts, including a block of wooden buildings. The occupants lost everything. The loss is estimated at $10,000, with insurance of only $400.

Is a Candidate.

Grand Rapids, Aug. 1.—It is announced that Gerrit J. Diekema, of Holland, ex-speaker of the state house of representatives, will be a candidate for the nomination of lieutenant governor on the republican state ticket. His campaign will be pushed vigorously.

Milan, July 29.—The farmers are busily engaged harvesting their oat crop. It is the best they have had for years, some fields yielding 70 bushels per acre.

A Woman's Work.

For thirteen years this woman suffered from a helpless infirmity which baffled skillful medical treatment. She was restored to health in a remarkable manner, and is now helpful to other sufferers.

For thirteen years Mrs. George L. Rogers, of West Main Street, Canton, N. Y., suffered from the indescribable tortures of inflammatory rheumatism.

Only persons who have been afflicted with this disease know what such suffering is.

Those who have never felt the pangs of this ailment have not the remotest idea of its tortures.

For years this was an obstinate disease to cure.

In recent years, however, there has been formulated a remedy which successfully copes with it.

The many cures effected by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People attest to that fact.

One of the striking examples is Mrs. Rogers' experience.

In speaking of it to a reporter she said:

"Thirteen years ago I was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism and a complication of diseases.

"I cannot begin to describe my sufferings during that time.

"You can judge somewhat of what I endured, when you look at these hands." They were distorted, twisted and swollen.

"My foot, too, is so much out of shape that the big toe lays across the others, the end touching the little toe.

"Notwithstanding I am sixty-five years old, have a pleasant home and other comforts, life to me was far from enjoyable, for all other things pale into insignificance when you are without good health.

"I tried different doctors and many proprietary remedies, but no permanent benefit was obtained.

"Last March I was induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"Before I had finished the first box I began to feel that they were doing me good.

"I continued using them and steadily grew better.

"I have used thirteen boxes of the pills and to-day feel better than for the past fifteen years.

"My appetite is good; I feel bright, cheerful and have a desire to live and enjoy society.

"I have been a member of the Methodist church for many years, but for six years was unable to attend.

"Now I am able to attend the church services regularly and certainly appreciate that privilege.

"I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a wonderful medicine and am confident no other remedy could have effected the wonderful cure they have in my case.

"I am glad to state this, hoping that some sufferer may profit by it and obtain relief."

It was nature's own remedy that accomplished this cure caused by impure blood, for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are composed of vegetable remedies that exert a powerful influence in purifying and enriching the blood. Many diseases long supposed by the medical profession to be incurable have succumbed to the potent influence of these pills. This universal remedy is sold by all druggists.

A TOILET NECESSITY.

Why Lemons Should Find a Place on the Toilet Table of Every Sensible American Woman.

No woman should be without lemons on her toilet table. They are about as necessary nowadays as soap, so those who believe in them say.

"Lemons!" exclaimed a woman who believes in them religiously. "Why, I wouldn't be without lemons a whole day for anything. I once heard of a French woman who was considered the most beautiful woman of her time, and she attributed her good looks to eating eight oranges a day for 365 days in the year. I'd be willing to bet on it that lemons will do far more toward beautifying a woman than oranges. Lemons beautify one through and through, outside and in. Nothing in the world bleaches the skin, hands and face like a little diluted lemon juice applied at night, and, strange to say, unlike most bleaches, it softens the complexion. Then the finest of manicure acids is made by dropping a teaspoonful of lemon juice in a cup of tepid water. This removes all stains from nails and skin and loosens the cuticle naturally and much better than any sharp instrument. A dash of lemon juice in plain water is an excellent tooth wash, removing not only the tartar, but sweetening the breath, and a teaspoonful of the juice in a small cup of black coffee will drive off a bilious headache before the sufferer can say caterpillar. Life would be very barren to me without lemons, and so it would be to any woman who knows the secret of their efficacy. Best of all, the juice of the lemon, taken with a teaspoonful of soda—cooking soda—after each meal, will pull the flesh right off the most persistently fat woman who ever worried over her weight."

HOME CALISTHENICS.

Every girl ought to be able to let her elbows meet at the back, though few can manage it, says a writer in Leisure Hours. No girl should use dumbbells without skilled advice as to the weight they should be. Much harm has been done by overworking the muscles in calisthenic exercises, and there are so-called professors of the art who do more harm than good. Sometimes the weight of the heads is too great, and very often the exertion is much too arduous.

Delicate girls suffer very much from overdoing even ordinary exercise and the very strongest must feel their strength impaired by too lavish use of any one set of muscles. The best time for practicing these exercises is immediately after the morning tub. They improve the circulation and prevent the tendency of stooping, which almost every one experiences who never does any gymnastic work, brace the muscles, benefit the figure and impart the graceful, erect carriage which should distinguish every athletic and sport-loving English woman. Only ten minutes should be the limit.

The Graphophone

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and will reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. This instantly awakens new interest and its charm is fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10

SPAIN READY FOR PEACE.

Said to Have Decided to Accept the Terms Made by the United States Government.

NEWS FROM MADRID TO THIS EFFECT.

If the Report Is Confirmed Only the Details Are Needed to Cause All Hostilities to Cease at Once—The Armies Will Not Be Withdrawn—The Peace Terms.

New York, Aug. 3.—A special cable to the Evening Journal from Madrid, published in a late extra edition of that paper, says:

"Spain accepts the principal conditions of peace as set forth by the American government and only the peace details are needed to cause all hostilities to cease at once.

"A peace delegation will be chosen at once to confer with the representatives of the United States. The peace conditions set forth by President McKinley were discussed at length Tuesday by Minister Sagasta, and at the conclusion it was given out officially that the terms of the United States would be accepted. There are one or two amendments in the proposition of the United States that Spain will ask to be made, and if this is done peace will be declared at once."

Story Partially Confrmed.

London, Aug. 3.—The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Mail says: The government has accepted the principle of the American conditions; but the acceptance will not be made public until inquiries to Washington on matters of detail have been settled, thus rounding off the preliminary basis.

London, Aug. 3.—The Rome correspondent of the Daily Chronicle says: Spain, it is asserted here, has accepted the American terms, with unimportant reservations and the peace preliminaries will be signed before Saturday.

Reply on Its Way.

The Madrid correspondent of the Daily News says: "The government's reply to the American peace terms left here Monday evening. The government believes that the nature of the negotiations requires the greatest secrecy and that their success will depend upon the observance of the most absolute reserve here. Official silence, therefore, is complete."

No Official Information.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Shortly before midnight Secretary Alger, as he left the white house after a conference with the president, said the administration had received no official information that the Madrid government had accepted the terms of peace proposed by the United States. Unofficially, the president has been informed that the Spanish ministry had acceded to the terms of this country for a cessation of the war. Unofficial reports have reached the president in the form not only of press dispatches, but of private dispatches from confidential agents of the United States government.

Takes Nothing for Granted.

While this government has strong reasons for believing that its terms of peace have been agreed to by the Madrid government, the president is taking nothing for granted. Arrangements for pressing the war to a successful conclusion are going forward precisely as if no negotiations for peace were in progress. At a conference participated in by the president, Secretary Alger and Adjt. Gen. Corbin at the executive mansion Tuesday night a final decision was reached as to the constitution of the provisional corps for Puerto Rico, to be commanded by Gen. Wade. The regiments which are to comprise the corps were decided upon and will be designated in a general order to be issued probably today. Secretary Alger said that the corps might be en route to Puerto Rico within a week.

Official Statement of Peace Terms.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The following is an official statement given out by authority of the president Tuesday as to the terms of peace offered by the United States:

In order to remove any misapprehension in regard to the negotiations as to peace between the United States and Spain, it is deemed proper to say that the terms offered by the United States to Spain in the note handed to the French ambassador on Saturday last are in substance as follows:

The president does not now put forward any claim for pecuniary indemnity, but requires the relinquishment of all claim of sovereignty over or title to the island of Cuba as well as the immediate evacuation by Spain of the island; the cession to the United States and immediate evacuation of Puerto Rico and other islands under Spanish sovereignty in the West Indies; and the like cession of an island in the Ladrones. The United States will occupy and hold the city, bay and harbor of Manila, pending the conclusion of a treaty of peace which shall determine the control, disposition and government of the Philippines. If these terms are accepted by Spain in their entirety, it is stated that commissioners will be named by the United States to meet commissioners on the part of Spain for the purpose of concluding a treaty of peace on the basis above indicated.

WILLING TO HELP

Securing freedom from the grip of catarrh makes loyal friends for the liberator.

Pe-ru-na has been making friends of this kind for many years. It cures catarrh wherever located.

Mrs. R. Eades, of 35 Twenty-eighth St., Detroit, Mich., is one of the many thousand of Pe-ru-na's friends. This is what she says to Dr. Hartman:

"We have used your Pe-ru-na with the most remarkable results and would not be without it. We have always recommended it to our friends. A few years ago I purchased a bottle of your Pe-ru-na and after seeing its results, recommended it to my grocer who was troubled with dyspepsia, the curing of which induced her to sell it in her store. She has sold large amounts of it. My daughter has just been cured of jaundice with Pe-ru-na. My pen would grow weary were I to begin to tell you of the numerous cures Pe-ru-na has effected in our immediate vicinity within the last couple of years."

Dr. Hartman, President of the Surgical Hotel, Columbus, Ohio, will counsel and prescribe for fifty thousand women this year free of charge. Every suffering woman should write for special question blank for women, and have Dr. Hartman's book, "Health and Beauty." All druggists sell Pe-ru-na.

For years I have been a sufferer from chronic constipation and dyspepsia. I tried different doctors and all the remedies I could hear of, but nothing helped me and I grew worse. A lady recommended Carter's Cascara Cordial to me, and I decided to try it, and am very thankful that I did, for it completely cured me; my friends were astonished, for they thought I would never be any better. I take great pleasure in recommending it, for I know of others whom it has helped as well as myself.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

All the offices of the Detroit & Lima road except that of superintendent will be moved to Detroit at once.

This is about the fortieth time the Adrian Press has moved the offices to Detroit. The offices are still in Tecumseh and are not going away.

Engine No. 4 on the D. T. & M. which was badly smashed in the wreck at Wilders last spring, made its first trip over the road again Wednesday with Train No. 24 as good as new.

H. T. Hall, traveling auditor of the D. T. & M R. R. was here Saturday, as also was Gen. Supt. Hawkins of the Lima Northern.

The D. & L. N. train due here at 4:25 was late 1 hour, 40 min. Tuesday on account of a cylinder head blowing out at Flat Rock.

David Patterson, the L. S. & M. S. conductor, and his wife visited at N. M. Sutton's from Saturday until Tuesday.

Sunday School Excursion.

There could have been no nicer day for an excursion than yesterday and 1181 of Tecumseh's population took advantage of the second anual S. S. Excursion to Detroit. The eleven coaches on the special were well filled and a number sufficient to fill two more coaches waited and went on the "Regular," which left a few minutes later. The D. & L. N. people spare no pains to furnish good coaches and plenty of them and everyone speaks in highest terms of the service. Everyone had a happy time.

Pigeon Shoot.

Wednesday afternoon a number of sportsmen indulged in a pigeon shoot at the range back of the Tiffany iron works. This is the first of a series, the next of which will occur in three weeks. The participants were: B. S. Scudder, Macon, Jesse Chamberlain, Dundee, Jesse Gray, Cone, Geo. Deuel, Tipton, Harris Bros., Adrian. Daniel Boyd, Lake Ridge, David Linton, Britton, Art Stretch, Fred Aldrich and Harry Richter, Tecumseh.

Mrs. Harriet Webster.

One by one the pioneers of Lenawee county are being called home. The Father's voice is heard by some whose ears have been closed to human voices for years. Blessed summons is it to come to the Father's house. Harriet Spofford was born in Hopkinton, N. H., Jan. 16, 1816. At nine years of age she came with her father to Michigan, settling in Tecumseh. She was married to Milton Hoeg in 1837 and widowed six years later with one child, Amelia, who died in 1874. She was married a second time in Nov. 1846, to A. B. Webster, who lived but eight years. To this union two daughters were given, Mrs. Myron Conklin, of Tecumseh, and Mrs. T. E. Webb, of Warsaw, Ind. Although twice married, Mrs. Webster lived fifty years a widow. She became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church in 1843. Her life was an exemplification of the ideal Christian character. Her life and her voice agreed ever in the testimony of personal knowledge of Jesus as a present abiding Savior and Comforter. During the past summer her thoughts and conversation have been on Heaven, and she had an intense longing to be with Him and the loved ones gone.

The pilgrim's staff is broken,
The wornout garments fold;
She waits the resurrection,
She is no longer old.

Our mother! Oh, our mother!
Our greatest joy is told
As we fold thy quiet hands and say
Thou are no longer old.

L. J. Barber and wife, of Hanover, were in town Tuesday. They came to visit their daughter, Mrs. Andrew Wonder, northeast of town, to attend the Kelley-Densmore reunion in Raisin and the Friends' Quarterly meeting at Raisin Valley.

Aug. 10 will occur the annual excursion to Belle Isle of the Sunday school association of Ridgeway and Macon townships via the Lima Northern railroad. Train leaves Tecumseh at 7:50 and will stop at Ridgeway and Britton for passengers. Fare, 75c for adults, 35c for children.

A letter was received from Verne Pattison this week which contained the following clipping from a Chattanooga paper: "The regimental band of the 31st Michigan spent Sunday in this city, the guests of the City Park commission. They gave a concert between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock at East Lake Park and in the evening serenaded the Southern hotel. This band is composed of thirty pieces and is, without doubt, the finest in the volunteer army."

We cordially invite all soldiers and citizens to accompany Beers Post to the National encampment at Cincinnati, Sept. 5th to the 10th inclusive. Car will start from Tecumseh on Lake Shore R. R. and go through without change. If you intend going, please leave your name and the number that will go with you to either A. W. Slayton, Commander, Geo. S. VanTyne, Qr. Master, or J. M. Letter from Chickamauga.

Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga.
Co. C, 31st Mich. July 31, 1898.

Capt. Kyle has got his new Karkhi uniform and looks like a dapper dude. He has now got down nearly to the weight which he told the examining surgeon and looks quite young and spry. The climate seems to agree with him, but Georgia watermelons are no longer to be mentioned in his presence.

If any one had told me last Sunday that to day would have found me still in Chickamauga Park, there would have been an argument with deadly weapons. Yet we are still here and have lost all hope of ever getting away. It is a bitter disappointment and the boys feel now as if all hope of seeing action service is gone. Drills are longer, harder and hotter than ever, and the patriotism which inspired so many at first is fast disappearing. It has nearly got down to a question of endurance. We are all asking how long we can stand the inaction of camp life with its attendant hardships, unhealthfulness and home-sickness. There is reason to believe that our camp will be moved about a mile from here in a few days. Even this "move" will be better than none, provided we don't go any further in the wilderness than we now are.

A few days ago the 160th Indiana of our brigade was ordered to the front and are now at Newport News. They went on orders direct from Secretary Alger and took the place of the 5th Illinois which was at Rossville, loaded on cars ready to start. A more disappointed body of men was never seen than the 5th when they returned to camp. It was three days before a semblance of discipline could be had. They are now brigaded with us. They think they will stay in the park and clean up after the other regiments leave. Their turn down was the result of a political pull exercised by Indiana "statesmen." I wonder where the "nigger in the woodpile" is who is hoedooing the 31st? If he could be found there would be a lynching bee.

Another pay day is supposed to be near at hand. It will probably be during the present week. We can hardly believe it till we get our money. Prirates will draw $15.60 this time. Most everyone is broke and it will be a God send.

To day was the regular monthly muster. We donned heavy marching order and went out into the woods about a mile. It took about 4 hours. Those who were not present will receive no pay till September.

Sergeant Green, who has been ill with fever, is so far recovered as to return to his quarters. Private Spofford, formerly of Co. C, now with the Ambulance Corps, is ill with measles. The 1st Georgia, our nearest neighbors, is having great trouble with the measles. The new band instruments have arrived and are beauties.

Sergt. Roscoe Hall, of the 5th Illinois, formerly of Tecumseh, was over to day and took dinner with his friends of Co. C.

News is mighty dull in camp, consequently this letter is the same way.

FRANK C. DUDLEY.

Marriage often means the selling of one's liberty for a mess of affection.

Captain Gridley's Funeral.

The following was taken from the Hudson Post and has reference to the Chas. V. Gridley, a former Tecumseh boy, who died soon after the battle of Manilla:

The last issue of Harper's Weekly gives a picture of the lying in state of Capt. C. V. Gridley's remains at Yokohama and the following interesting letter by Mary Gay Humphreys' written June 9:

"I have just come from Captain Gridley's funeral The Olympia was stationed here so long that his death is mourned as that of a friend rather than a commander. A note from Captain Gridley, on leaving, said that he would return in April. Indeed he expected to spend the summer in these waters. There was then no shadow of war. All the morning the navy ladies were at the church assisting in its decoration. It was first intended that the services should be held on the Coptic, on which Captain Gridley died. But an order from Washington that the remains be cremated, changed this plan, and the services were held at the Union Church The Captain and the officers of the Coptic escorted the body to the Hatoba, where a detachment of bluejackets carried it covered with its pall of stars and stripes and buried beneath flowers, to the hearse. It was interesting to look over the church and to see the variety types of Americans thus brought together, for Yokohama is a rallying-place for all nations. Grizzled seafaring men, sunburnt tourist, fashionable globe-trotters(men and women), sedate missionaries, professors, diplomats and those exiles from home whose children have not yet seen the soil of their fathers. The circumstances of Captain Gridley's death, after the brilliant victory, made the occasion doubly sad. You, at home, can scarcely realize what the fight at Manilla has been to the Americans here brought into such sharp competition with the representatives of other nations. The burial services were read by Rev. Mr. Booth of the Ferris Seminary. And after a prayer by Dr. Cleveland, Colonel Buck and Mr. Gowie made brief addresses. The body is to be cremated to-morrow morning, and the ashes will be taken home on the next steamer.

In connection with the above it is interesting to learn that services in memory of Capt. Gridley will be held at St. Peter's church, of which the family were communicants during their residence here, next Sunday morning.

The navy department has appointed John P. Gridley, son of the late Capt. Gridley, of the Olympia, an acting naval cadet, and assigned him to Capt. Sigsbee's vessel, the St. Paul, which will start from Newport News tomorrow with troops and supplies for Porto Rico. Young Gridley is only 18 years old. He received most of his education at Hillsdale, Mich., and his friends in the department predict that he will some day equal in rank his illustrious father.

GOOD ADVICE.

From Sup't. of the Clinton Woolen Mills.

Clinton, July 13, 1898.

To whom it may concern:

I have suffered with a rupture for several years and was about to have an operation performed, when I was advised by a personal friend who formerly resided in Dundee, to be treated by the Benjamin Rupture Cure Co. It is now some ten weeks since I commenced treatment, and though I have suffered no pain and but little inconvenience, my rupture is now almost cured. Have walked about without any support on and there was not the least sign of a rupture. Dr. Benjamin's truss is perfect and results prove his method the correct one.

Home-Seekers Excursions.

On the first and third Tuesdays in July, August, September and October, 1898 the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway will sell round-trip excursion tickets (good 21 days) from Chicago, Milwaukee and other points on its line, to a great many points in South and North Dakota and other western and southwestern states at about one fare. Take a trip west and see the wonderful crops and what an amount of good land can be purchased for a little money. Further information as to rates, routes, prices of farm lands, etc., may be obtained on application to any coupon ticket agent or by addressing the following named persons: W. E. Powell, Gen'l Immigration Agent, 410 Old Colony Bldg., Chicago; H. F. Hunter, Immigration Agt. for South Dakota, 291 Dearborn St., Chicogo, or Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Chicago, Illinois.

Some of the young folks, who use stairways for their billing and cooing and making engagements, should remember that people live up those same stairways and are quite likely to overhear their conversation. But, then its as good as a circus for the listener.—Blissfield Advance.

CHASED BY WOLVES.

A Thrilling Incident of Winter Travel on the Upper Mississippi River.

BEFORE any railroad had been built along the upper Mississippi, all traffic in the summer was by steamboat, which carried also the mail. In the winter everything was carried by stage. There was a line of mail-stages between St. Paul and Prairie du Chien—or the southern terminus may have been La Crosse at the time of which I write. These stages followed the river—how much of the distance on the ice I cannot say, but in my neighborhood, where the river expanded and became Lake Pepin, the route was all on the ice, and most of the way far from the shore. Lake Pepin is some three miles wide and 27 miles long, and although in reality only a widening of the river it is a true lake, in which the current of the river is almost lost. There is no other such body of water in the whole length of the Mississippi. The upper Mississippi is worn far below the level of the country; consequently Lake Pepin is surrounded by high bluffs, with bold, flat tops. Leading down to the lake, on both the Minnesota and Wisconsin sides, are many ravines or coulees, worn by the watercourses and wooded. Even now there is much wild land among the bluffs.

It was in the latter part of January years ago that I found myself at Hawk's Landing, on the Minnesota side of the river just below the foot of the lake, whither I had gone with an uncle. He found that his business would detain him longer than he expected, and he decided to send me back alone on the stage. It should have left the Landing at one o'clock, but it was delayed somewhere down the river, and did not arrive till nearly three. It was a full afternoon's drive to Lake City, but the driver said he had a good team, and promised to get through on time, notwithstanding the late start. He was a rough and dissipated man, but he had the reputation of always keeping sober till after the day's trip had been completed. But the delay may have upset him, and I think he began drinking before we started, although no one then noticed it. He certainly had provided himself with a large bottle of liquor, as I soon had occasion to know. I suppose I could not have been more than 12 or 13 years old, although life in a new country and on a farm had given me ability to take care of myself beyond my years.

When we departed from the War Eagle house on the levee, and swung along up the road under the shadow of Wabasha Bluff, with the horses at a gallop, I felt a sort of admiration for the driver, notwithstanding his roughness. We slackened somewhat when we got beyond the line of houses along the single street, and soon rounded the bluff and kept along the edge of a bank above the frozen river. It was here that the driver took his first drink from his big, flat bottle. This alarmed me, because I had already seen much of the effect of liquor on the class of men to which he belonged. He passed the bottle to the passenger, who took a very small sip, I thought more because he was afraid to refuse than because he wanted it.

We soon came to the lake, and turned down Fond du Lac point and out upon the ice, where the road was marked by little cedars. The driver had already taken several more drinks, and on the lake I found cause to be alarmed at something else. This was the state of the weather. The wind had freshened a great deal and the snow was drifting rapidly. It was not sufficient to shut out from our sight the row of evergreens, and we could see even the bluffs on either side of the lake; but the fine snow was sifting along over the crust like streaming hair, and rapidly filling the track. This made our progress slow, but the condition of the driver was soon a greater hindrance. He drove either with the horses on a run or a slow walk, although they walked more than they ran. He kept returning to his bottle with frequency.

We were not yet half way when the sun was only a little above the Minnesota bluffs, with big orange sun dogs standing on each side of it. Just as it disappeared below the bluffs the driver slid out of the seat into a drunken sleep in the bottom of the sleigh. I climbed over to the front seat and took the reins myself.

"You seem to know how to drive; do you think we can get there to-night?" asked the other passenger.

"I can drive four horses," I answered, very proudly. "We can get through, I guess, if it doesn't storm so that we can't follow the trees."

He drew a long breath at this and made himself comfortable under the buffalo robes, leaving me to the full management of the team, which I was glad enough to assume, even if my hands were pretty cold.

In half an hour it was dark. There was no moon, but the sky was clear and the stars bright. With the going down of the sun the wind had died away, leaving a calm, clear night; but before it had stopped it had filled the track with drifted snow and left the traveling heavy. We jogged along past the endless row of little trees at a pretty good rate. The only sounds were the creaking of the sleigh-runners in the snow, for the night was bitter cold, and the occasional deep rumblings of the ice, sounding, as it always seems to me, like distant thunder near at hand. There was a faint play of northern lights in the sky ahead of us.

I had for some time been looking anxiously for the lights of the town, although there was no hope of seeing them yet, when my attention was attracted by a dark object on the snow far to the right toward the Wisconsin shore. At first I took this thing to be one of the immense ridges in the ice where it had cracked and heaved up, several of which were on the lake, some of them almost as high as a house. Then I saw it was moving along like a shadow at right angles to our course.

The man saw it and said: "What's coming over there—some other teams?"

"They wouldn't be going so fast," I answered, picking up the whip from the bottom of the sleigh. The shadow was now directly to the right.

"It's some sort of animal," went on the man. He paused a moment and then added: "They look like big dogs."

At that moment there came the cry I had so often heard at home, only much deeper, harsher and louder.

"They're wolves!" I said, and I cracked the whip at the horses, although that was hardly necessary, as they heard the savage howl as well as we did and knew it meant danger.

They were indeed a pack of timber wolves, starved out of the Wisconsin coulees and crossing the lake in search of food on the Minnesota side. The howl which they set up showed they thought they had found it unexpectedly on the lake. The horses struck into a fast gallop and the sleigh began to sway and bound around in an uncomfortable manner. I looked back and saw that the wolves had struck the road and were coming behind. The horses were now running as fast as they could with so heavy a track. It seemed as if we should be thrown out the next moment, and it was certain that we should be overtaken in any case.

The second time I looked back I saw that the pack was much nearer—I could make out the leaders and see that there must be 20 or 30 of the animals, all told. My fellow passenger was clinging to the seat crying to me to drive faster, although the horses were fairly running away and I had practically no control over them one way or the other.

"Can't you throw out the trunk and back seat?" I shouted to him.

I will give him the credit for doing very well at this. He clambered over back and pitched out the other seat and a small trunk which stood behind it. It was a good thing to do, as it lightened the sleigh and delayed the wolves slightly. They all stopped and surged around the things a moment; then they came on.

I heard the man throwing out the mail sacks and some other parcels, but the wolves did not pause much for these. They were soon closer than ever, and, the man said afterwards, within a few rods of us. I kicked the buffalo robe, which was still over my lap, out at one side, and sank down on my knees in the bottom of the sleigh; the man wrenched loose the seat and dropped it out with two other robes. These were the last things which we had to throw out. The robes seemed to delay the wolves longer than anything else. They stopped and tore them to shreds. We got a quarter-mile start. All of this time the drunken driver was sleeping like a log in the bottom of the sleigh.

The horses were becoming exhausted, and I could feel that they were going slower. I now urged them on with whip and voice, but it seemed to make no difference. The howling behind us began to come plainer; the wolves had left the robes and were again gaining on us. Right ahead I could see a high ridge in the ice where it had cracked and shoved up. A notch had been cut in it just wide enough for a sleigh to pass through. I held the reins steady and tried to slow up a little in the hope of steering safely through the narrow crack. As we came up to it I saw a dark streak between the rough cones at either side; the crack had opened two or three feet during the day and new ice had formed. We struck the opening in the ridge squarely; the nigh horse reared up and jumped over the new ice, but the other stepped on it and broke through with one forward leg. He fell, but the other horse dragged him and the sleigh beyond the crack, where we stopped all in a heap.

I jumped over the dashboard and fell in the snow beside the horse. He was struggling to rise, but I guessed what had happened, and threw my body across his neck and felt of his leg. It was crushed and broken. I got out my knife, cut the breaststrap which held the neckyoke, and called to the man to unhook the traces, which he managed to do at last. I cut the injured horse's rein and ran around behind the other, who stood trembling and snorting. With the strap I tied back the end of the whiffletree to the sleigh-runner.

The wounded horse was again struggling to rise and had sprawled himself out of the way. I shouted at the other horse; he started with a bound and the man and I threw ourselves into the sleigh, half knocking out our brains as our heads struck together. We looked back and saw the whole hungry pack fall upon the abandoned horse and bear him down just as the poor animal had succeeded in getting upon his three sound legs.

The horse that was still attached to the sleigh plunged on bravely for some distance, with the sleigh tongue almost plowing in the snow, but he soon tired out, and dragged himself along in a startled sort of way. But it made no difference, as the wolves never pursued us again.

We got out and walked beside the sleigh to keep warm, and, as the crack was only two miles from town, it was not long before we reached our destination. A party of men went back to get a shot at the wolves, but, their hunger satisfied on the fallen horse, they made off before the hunters could reach them. The next morning the passenger took the down stage back to civilization, vowing that he had had enough of the northwest. The drunken driver was promptly discharged by the stage company.—Youth's Companion.

Woman and Her Ways

MAKING GOOD BREAD.

How Any Woman May Learn to Master This Most Valuable of Household Arts.

The day before baking—at noon in cold weather, in the evening when it is warm—peel, cook and mash thoroughly five or six medium-sized Irish potatoes. After putting the mashed potatoes in a vessel you use for sponge (I use a covered tin pail), add one-half teacup of sugar and one heaping tablespoon of salt. With a fork beat and mix briskly; the longer you beat, the lighter the sponge will be. When cool, add one yeast cake, soaked. Set away in a rather warm place over night. In the morning sift your flour in the mixing bowl, and to the potato sponge, after taking a teacupful out and putting in a self-sealing can for your next baking, put as much warm water in proportions as you wish to make bread; for six rather small loaves use three pints of water. Stir into your flour, mix thoroughly and knead your dough well. Work in all the flour you can; put in a bowl to raise. When the bulk is almost doubled, which will be in two or three hours, according to the warmth of the dough, punch down with the fists; leave in the bowl to raise again. In about an hour it will be ready to mold into loaves. Use as little flour as possible in molding the loaves; grease your baking-pan and also the loaves, being careful to grease well between the loaves, when double their bulk, rub the top with a wet cloth, and put in a moderate oven to bake one hour. If you do not have a deep bread-pan, take stiff paper cut in strips two or three inches wide, pin together until long enough to reach around your pan. Just before putting in the oven, slip this paper around the pan. It will prevent the dough spreading over the sides of the pan. Don't have your oven too hot. It should be so that the cook can hold her hand in and count 20 rather quickly. Have the fire so that it will get hotter for about 20 minutes, then gradually cool down. After mixing the dough, keep covered with a warm cloth. The oven is a good place to raise bread in if you are certain it is not too warm. The day before the next baking prepare potatoes, sugar and salt the same as before, but instead of using a yeast cake, use the teacupful of potato sponge saved before. The bread will be better than before, and you can save out a teacup of potato sponge each time! If you bake bread as often as once a week you will not need to use yeast again for six months or a year.—W. A. Clearwaters, in Ladies' World.

STYLISH CAPE OF JET.

Simple Directions for Making a Decidedly Pretty and Effective Little Spring Neck Piece.

To make this little jet cape purchase one-half yard of jet net. This comes in many different qualities and in all colors. You can get something very good for three dollars per yard; and as one-half yard is an abundance, the collarette will not be so very expensive.

The pattern is a circle. Take a perfectly round piece of paper about sixteen inches in diameter and lay it upon the net. The net must previously have been sewn upon the foundation paper to hold it firm. Cut out in wheel shape and afterward cut out the circle for the neck. For the neck be guided by the size of your collar. Make the collarette one inch larger around the neck than your linen collar, then it will not lay clumsily.

A HOMEMADE COLLARETTE.

Make an opening in the back of the collarette and finish with a puff of chiffon around the cape and neck. Fasten with invisible hooks and eyes.

How to Gain Avoirdupois.

The following recipe for gaining weight is seriously proposed by an eastern physician of note: Eat vegetables and sleep after each meal. Go to bed at nine o'clock and lie in bed half an hour after you wake up. Laugh a great deal. Drink water by the pint or the quart if you can. Drink weak and sweet tea with plenty of milk in it. Take cod liver oil and sweet oil as much as you can. Eat until you feel as if you would burst at the table. Put plenty of butter on your bread. This will guarantee a gain of five pounds a month, and, if you can sleep a great deal, of double that amount.

Very Pretty Needlecase.

A pretty and useful needlecase is made of a strip of ooze leather, six inches long by 3½, lined with velvet or chamois skin pockets, which can be lettered with etching silk. The leaves for the needles are of white flannel, buttonholed with delicately colored silk, and the case closes with ribbons of an appropriate color.

NICE BREAKFAST DISH.

The Poaching of Eggs Is a Culinary Art Which But Few Housekeepers Have Mastered.

Nearly a hundred years ago Dr. Kitchener, who wrote what may be called the first practical English cookbook in "The Cook's Oracle," declared that "the beauty of a poached egg is for the yolk to be seen blushing through the white, which should be just sufficiently hardened to form a transparent veil for the egg." This is an epicure's description of a perfectly poached egg. In order to attain this much-to-be-desired condition, the egg must be perfectly fresh; that is, not over three days old. An egg a week old may poach well, but cannot be depended on if it has been kept in a warm place. There is no method of cooking in which a stale egg shows itself so quickly as it does by the white or albumen scattering in the water, as it does in poaching.

The water must be boiling rapidly, and it should be strained when poured out of the tea kettle into the broad shallow basin for poaching. This can be easily accomplished by tying a thin clean muslin cloth over the spout of the kettle. To three quarts of boiling water add an even tablespoonful of salt and a salt spoonful of good vinegar. Drop six eggs, one after the other, into the spot where the water bubbles up, doing the work as rapidly as possible. Do not allow 10 seconds to elapse before they are all in, or the first egg will be overdone. Let the water return to the boiling point and bubble around the eggs one minute. Remove the saucepan to the back of the fire and take the eggs up one by one with a skimmer, after carefully loosening them one at a time from the bottom of the dish. If the eggs are fresh and the directions are followed they will all be in good shape.

Have ready as many pieces of toast as there are eggs. These pieces of toast should be a trifle larger than the egg, and the crusts should be cut away. They may be square or circular in shape, browned delicately on both sides, and if dry moistened with a little hot water. Place an egg on each slice of toast and season it with a little salt and white pepper. Serve mushroom catsup or any English sauce with the eggs for those who like it. The eggs may also be served with a little anchovy paste spread on the toasts, when the catsup or the sauce would be unnecessary.

Poached eggs on toast are nice with minced ham. Mince fine about two large slices of well boiled ham. It may be simply seasoned with a little cayenne, or it may be deviled by adding about half a teaspoonful of mustard to a cupful of the ham. The ham should be heated and may be laid over the toast, or over the eggs and toast, or it may be made into little circular "plats" the size of the toast, or the toast omitted and the eggs served on the ham. French cooks almost invariably serve poached eggs on a bed of boiled spinach or boiled sorrel, and it is a delicious way. Heat over some of the boiled spinach left from dinner. This is one of the few vegetables that may be heated over and be improved every time. Spread it out on a platter to the thickness of about an inch or an inch and a half and lay the poached eggs over it, or cut out circles of the spinach a little larger than the eggs, lay them on little squares of toast and place a perfectly poached egg over each circle.—N. Y. Tribune.

Genuine French Fruit Salad.

Arrange sections of two oranges, three sliced bananas, one-half pound white grapes which have been skinned, and 12 English walnuts quartered, on lettuce leaves. Serve very cold with a French dressing made of four tablespoonfuls oil, two tablespoonfuls vinegar, one-half teaspoonful salt and one-fourth teaspoonful pepper. A pretty way to serve this is to arrange the lettuce in its original shape on a glass dish, put the fruit in the center, and just before serving pour over the dressing. Everything should be chilled. The dressing, if allowed to stand on the lettuce will cause it to wilt. This combination does not sound especially attractive, but it's really very good. Strawberries may also be added in their season.

How to Clean Pictures.

To clean the glass over pictures, dip a piece of chamois in alcohol, wring nearly dry, and wipe thoroughly, yet lightly. Polish with a piece of dry chamois. The gilded frames may also be cleaned with the alcohol. If oil paintings need cleaning thoroughly, dampen a soft cloth in warm water in which some castile soap has been dissolved. Dry carefully, and then varnish lightly with some thin, clear, French "retouching" varnish. It is well to consult an artist in regard to the best varnish.

People are learning they can be cured.
Learning the merits of Doan's Ointment.
Plenty of proof that Doan's Ointment will cure piles, eczema, or any itchiness of the skin.
Read the testimony of a Battle Creek citizen.
Mr. A. G. Ayers, book binder, of 197 West Main street, Battle Creek, says: "My hands became so sore from eczema that it was with difficulty I could bend my fingers. The skin cracked open, large scabs formed and in addition to the spots being tender they itched intolerable. I tried everything I could hear about or get hold of to stop the trouble but I was unable to do so until I procured Doan's Ointment. I had heard it spoken about by several people but as I thought it would act like all the other preparations which I tried I waited some time until I was compelled from the condition of my hands to do something. Doan's Ointment cured me. Up to date and this is some months after I stopped the treatment, I have had no indication of any return."

To Cure Stomach Trouble Has Not Failed.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure & Nerve Restorer is not a cure-all, but is intended for the treatment of STOMACH and NERVE troubles only. A great many preparations have been advertised, for years, for the special treatment of various diseases as foreign to the stomach as can possibly be, that are now being advertised for the special treatment of dyspepsia, simply because of the prevalence of this peculiar malady. When as a matter of fact, a preparation for the treatment of stomach diseases must necessarily be prepared for those and nothing else.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer is the result of patient study and experience by one fully equipped for the task, as is being clearly demonstrated by the many testimonials where marvelous cures have and are being produced daily in chronic and complicated cases that have baffled the knowledge of local physicians, besides the various remedies so highly advertised for the treatment of stomach diseases.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer is a combined method treatment in tablet form, which does not become stale and worthless with age, as do liquid preparations. These tablets are pleasant to take, can easily be carried in the pocket to be used when necessary, and can be taken by children and invalids with perfect impunity.

A valuable book on stomach and nerve troubles, their symptoms and cure, can be had free at any place where this preparation is sold. Fifty cents invested in Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer will substantiate all that is claimed for it. For sale by Spain Will Remember the Maine for All Time to Come.

Never Before Has a Warring Nation Had a Better Battlecry—Origin of the Expression "Bottled Up."

[Special Washington Letter.]

THE WAR with Spain has quickened many minds to memories of the civil war. In private conversations and in public prints war stories constitute the predominant topic; and some of the veterans tell stories of their own recollections of the Mexican war, while others narrate instances told them by their fathers concerning the movements of troops and individual acts of heroism in the war of 1812.

Everybody is proud of the new navy of this country, and every conversation concerning the war bears primarily upon the work which has been done by Dewey, Bagley, Hobson, Schley and the other officers and men on our warships.

It is well known that all of the men of the navy have determined from the first that Spain in particular and the whole world in general should remember the destruction of the battleship Maine in the harbor at Havana on the night of February 15, 1898. When Admiral Dewey, regardless of contact and other mines in Manila harbor, started in a direct line for the doomed fleet of Montejo, over his flagship he ran up the signal "Remember the Maine." In Manila bay there were seven armored cruisers and two gunboats flying the Spanish flag, and three other boats of less importance; and there were 2,500 officers and men with modern artillery equipments in Montejo's fleet.

The signal of Admiral Dewey was responded to by the cheers of every man under his command, and with a vivid recollection of the disaster and outrage to the Maine they went to work, smothered the fire of the enemy, and completely destroyed the entire Spanish naval complement in Asiatic waters.

Spain sent Admiral Cervera into American waters with the best ships of the Spanish navy to teach the Americans something about war. Cervera's squadron was soon bottled up in the harbor of Santiago, and when an attempt was made to escape, the armored cruisers Almirante Oquendo, Infanta Maria Teresa, Vizcaya and Cristobal Colon, with 2,000 men, all of them war vessels of the Maine class, were destroyed in actual warfare, as the Maine was destroyed in time of peace by Spanish demoniacal criminality. And the men under command of Commodore Schley went into that fight also with the signal flying, "Remember the Maine."

When Admiral Sampson held his first conference with Gen. Shafter, after plans had been agreed upon for a combined attack upon the city of Santiago, Admiral Sampson said: "I hope, general, that you will have the men under your command as thoroughly imbued with the desire to make the Spaniards remember the Maine as the men of the navy are determined to do. Before this campaign is over we will make those Spanish ships in the harbor look like the destroyed battleship in Havana harbor, and every officer and man aboard of my fleet is determined that every shot fired shall carry with it death and destruction to the nation which is responsible for the destruction of our ship and the assassination of our sailors."

And Admiral Sampson was right. The men under Schley's squadron of Sampson's fleet made every shot tell and the result of their work was that every one of the warships of Spain was destroyed by explosions and sunken in such a manner as to resemble the shattered battleship, the Maine.

As soon as Commodore Schley discovered Cervera's fleet in Santiago harbor he began a blockade of that harbor, and the statement went broadcast through the newspapers that the Spanish fleet was "bottled up." Recently there have been inquiries made concerning the origin of that expression. It was first used by Brig. Gen. Barnard, chief engineer of the army of the Potomac, in June, 1864. Gen. Barnard made use of that expression concerning the army of the James under command of Gen. Benjamin F. Butler. He was answering inquiries propounded by Gen. Grant, and used the expression innocently, by way of illustration. Gen. Grant, in his "Personal Memoirs," gives the story in full, with apologetic mention of the fact that he gave official currency to the peculiar statement. "The position which Gen. Butler had chosen between the two rivers, the James and Appomattox, was one of great natural strength, one where a large area of ground might be thoroughly inclosed by means of a single entrenched line, and that a very short one in comparison with the extent of the territory which it thoroughly protected. His right was protected by the James river, his left by the Appomattox, and his rear by their junction, the two streams uniting near by. Then bends of the two streams shortened the lines which had been chosen for entrenchments, while it increased the area which the line enclosed. Previous to ordering any troops from Butler, I sent my chief engineer, Gen. Bernard, from the army of the Potomac to that of the James to inspect Butler's position and ascertain whether I could again safely make an order for Gen. Butler's movement in cooperation with mine, now that I was getting so near Richmond; or, if I could not, whether his position was strong enough to justify me in withdrawing some of his troops and having them brought around by water to the white house to join me, and reenforce the army of the Potomac. Gen. Bernard reported the position very strong for defensive purposes, and that I could do the latter with great security; but that Gen. Butler could not move from where he was, in cooperation, to produce any effect. He said that the general occupied a place between the James and Appomattox rivers, which was of great strength, and where with an inferior force he could hold it for an indefinite length of time against a superior, but that he could do nothing offensively. I then asked him why Butler could not move from his lines and push across the Richmond & Petersburg railroad to the rear and on the south side of Richmond. He replied that it was impracticable, because the enemy had substantially the same line across the neck of land that Gen. Butler had.

"He then took out his pencil and drew a sketch of the locality, remarking that the position was like a bottle and that Butler's line of entrenchments across the neck represented the cork; that the enemy had built an equally strong line immediately in front of him across the neck; and it was, therefore, as if Butler was in a bottle. He was perfectly safe against an attack, but, as Bernard expressed it, the enemy had corked the bottle and with a small force could hold the cork in its place. This struck me as being very expressive of his position, particularly when I saw the hasty sketch which Gen. Barnard had drawn, and in making my subsequent report I used the expression without adding quotation marks, never thinking that anything had been said that would attract attention, as this did, very much to the annoyance, no doubt, of Gen. Butler, and, I know, very much to my own. I found afterwards that this was mentioned in the notes of Gen. Badeau's book, which, when they were shown to me, I asked to have stricken out; yet it was retained there, though against my wishes. I make this statement here because, although I have often made it before, it has never been in my power until now to place it where it will correct history, and I desire to rectify all injustice that I may have done to individuals, particularly to officers who were gallantly serving their country during the trying period of the war for the preservation of the union. Gen. Butler certainly gave his very earnest support to the war, and he gave his own best efforts personally to the suppression of the rebellion."

The relations between Grant and Butler at that time were very much strained, Butler, in fact, upon Grant's suggestion having been removed, by direction of President Lincoln, from the command of the department of North Carolina and Virginia, and ordered to repair to his home in Lowell, Mass. After the war the differences between the erratic genius from the Bay state and the hero of Appomattox were amicably adjusted. It was because of his desire to set Butler right that Grant devoted so much space in his book to a description of the incident.

Now we know how that expression originated. Butler was "bottled up" by the confederate soldiers, and Admiral Cervera was "bottled up" by the American navy. Butler's army was taken out of the bottle by Grant's orders. Cervera's fleet oozed out of the neck of the bottle, and the Brooklyn, Texas, and Oregon smashed every ship, killing many men and capturing many more. The Spanish fleet is no longer "bottled up," but all survivors of the Spanish navy to-day have ample cause to "Remember the Maine!"

Grand Rapids, Aug. 1.—The republican state convention date, fixed at September 21, with Detroit as the place, is considerably later than usual, but owing to the interest in the war a longer campaign than six weeks is deemed unnecessary, especially as no doubt exists as to who will be the nominee for governor. Gov. Pingree will undoubtedly be renominated by acclamation.

Earlier in the year much opposition to Mr. Pingree's renomination was threatened in certain quarters, but this has quieted down, and for two months past or longer it has been conceded that no fight would be made upon him. In most of the county conventions thus far held he has been cordially indorsed and the delegates chosen have been instructed for him. The same programme will undoubtedly be carried out in the conventions yet to be held.

The candidates thus far mentioned for the other places on the ticket are as follows:

For lieutenant governor—To succeed Thomas B. Dunston, who declines a second term: George T. Burns, Gladstone; O. W. Robinson, Houghton; G. J. Diekema, Holland, with Robinson leading.

For secretary of state—To succeed Rev. Washington Gardner, nominated for congress in the Third district; J. S. Stearns, Ludington; Fred M. Warner, Oakland; J. M. C. Smith, Hillsdale.

For state treasurer—George A. Steel, unopposed for second term.

For auditor—Roscoe D. Dix, unopposed, for second term.

For attorney general—To succeed Fred A. Maynard, serving his second term; Charles L. Barden, Greenville; G. J. Diekema, Holland; A. R. MacDonald, Muskegon; Horace M. Oren, Sault Ste. Marie.

For commissioner of the state land office—To succeed William A. French, serving his third term: William A. French, for renomination; Fremont E. Skeels, Grand Rapids; William S. Spencer, Petoskey; T. A. Ely, Alma.

Jason F. Hammond for superintendent of public instruction and Eugene A. Wilson for member of the state board of education will probably be renominated without opposition.

It is probable the membership of the state central committee will be very materially changed. The present committee was chosen two years ago, when the old regime controlled state politics. The Pingree forces want control of the party machinery, and will in all probability secure a majority interest in the new committee. Dexter M. Ferry, of Detroit, who has served two years as chairman of the committee, will decline another term, and Charles Flower, of Detroit, is favorably considered as his successor.

It is within the possibilities, but hardly probable, that a resolution will be presented in the convention indorsing the reelection of Senator Julius Caesar Burrows by the legislature next winter. Gov. Pingree is openly antagonistic to Mr. Burrows' reelection, and the contest for the members of the legislature will constitute practically the only exciting feature in the campaign.

Grant Fellows, of Hudson, one of the brightest of the young republicans in the state and a former president of the Michigan League of Republican Clubs, will be temporary chairman of the convention.

Railway Deal Under Way.

Menominee, July 30.—Negotiations are in progress between the Wisconsin & Michigan, the Ann Arbor, the Dunmar & Wausaukee and the Holmes & Son railroads, the last two exclusive logging roads, whereby the three are to have terminals here. If the deal is made the Wisconsin & Michigan will remove its eight miles of rails between Peshtigo and the harbor to a new line to be built from Bagley Junction to this city, a like distance. The new scheme includes the erection of a large union station and the construction of a car barge slip for the Wisconsin & Michigan.

Storm Damages Fruit.

St. Joseph, July 30.—Reports from various points throughout the fruit belt show that ripe peaches and blackberries suffered severely from the heavy rain and hailstorm. It is feared that the loss will run into thousands of dollars. In many cases peach trees were stripped of their limbs, while thousands of cases of berries were strewn upon the ground.

Right of Way Secured.

Niles, July 30.—The Michigan & Indiana Railway company, which proposes connecting St. Joseph, Benton Harbor, Berrien Springs, Niles and other Berrien county points with South Bend, Ind., by electric railway, has obtained the right of way through all the townships from St. Joseph to Niles.

Instantly Killed.

Ann Arbor, July 30.—A runaway team tore down Beak street Friday and overtook and landed on a top buggy occupied by Abraham Steffy and wife and granddaughter. Mrs. Steffy was instantly killed. Steffy's head and hips were injured and the girl's head badly bruised.

Gaylord, July 29. — The drought which has prevailed in this county for six weeks was effectually broken Tuesday. The potato and corn crops will not be an entire failure now.

C. A. EVERETT

Awheel Through Canada.

Clinton, Ontario, Aug. 2, 1898.

THE HERALD: From pushing the editorial pencil for obstreperous compositors to pushing a bicycle over Canadian roads of all degrees and stages of construction, is indeed a change, and if variety is life's spice, one may experience a generous seasoning in a limited time.

Of course as the trip from Tecumseh to Detroit was by train, the wheel part of this letter practically begins with getting the two wheeled vehicle into the Dominion by way of the Customs House. Little trouble was experienced however, a membership ticket in the L. A. W. standing in lieu of the $25 which otherwise has to be deposited as a guarantee that the wheel will be taken out of the country in a limited time. A certificate in triplicate has to be made out by the wheel owner giving a full description of his mount, and at this stage a sheet of carbon paper which happened to be in my possession came in quite handy and saved both time and labor, the latter of course being the saving most sought by me.

From Windsor east for the first 55 miles the roads are neither very good nor yet very bad, and the Sabbath's setting sun found better than half of the distance from Windsor to London left behind. Monday morning Old Sol was surprised upon rising to find that the wheels were again turning steadily toward him, and although he exerted a torrid influence all the forenoon, at 10:30 a. m. the last climb and final coast was made into the city of London.

Stopping at a bicycle shop to enquire my way here, I was informed that two London riders were going to start over the same route on a tandem in an hour and so made the most of the rest and was soon introduced to Messrs. Millman and Miller who were going to Bayfield, a resort on Lake Huron. The gentlemen went prepared for any emergency, which was well for them, and carried an extra tire, a camera and mandolin, together with such smaller articles as might be stuck into intervening space, and at 12 o'clock noon according to time here which is eleven your time, we pulled out for a 50 mile run almost due north and against a stiff head wind. Well I've heard about Michigan hills and have ridden and coasted them for years, but the ones we struck the first 8 miles out of London were the worst in my experience. Up one, possibly down another and then climb again in such rapid succession that 5 miles out I was puffing like a steam engine and the other fellows too were red in the face and perspiring. Cycle paths are practically unknown here. The road which is or has been a toll road, seems to be made of pulverized white stone and quite likely to be rough, not big bumps but more like a gigantic wash board, giving one's machine a constant vibration, while the dust kicked up covers rider and wheel with one complete coating of what might be mistaken for powdered soapstone.

At about this stage of proceedings, the tandem flunked, a rear tire having gone down with an exasperating sizzle. Hauled up in a fence corner under a big elm we opened a repair shop, found the puncture and I showed the boys a Yankee trick by mending it with rubber bands. Time three quarters of an hour lost. Trouble with that tandem, which I'm ashamed to say was an American wheel advertised as the "standard of the world," had just begun and from Lucan Crossing where we had a two o'clock dinner, to Exeter where my companions laid up for final repairs, we fought that tandem and the headwind off lake Huron indiscriminately, losing in all about two hours of the afternoon.

A little way out of Lucan that tire gave out entirely and we substituted the other one which settled that question. We had been changing off on the trip; first I rode my own singie wheel then each of the others would take a turn while I helped pump the double header. The next thing to happen was something else and this time the tandem head snapped off, but by careful engineering we got into Exeter without hoofing it any. Here I was forced to leave my friends as there were still 18 miles to go and it would take at least 2 hours to repair the broken part, so we separated and I pedaled away again over roads as level and hard as a floor, and which might indeed be called the wheelman's paradise had it not been for the wind which lost no opportunity of making itself felt.

The farm land along this route is just a trifle rolling and the crops are good although it is five weeks since any rain has fallen. The farm houses all stand away back from the highway and are reached by long avenues usually well shaded by an apple orchard and a big closed gate keeps guard over the entrance. The people however are very hospitable and in the stores where I stopped in the little towns to buy lemons, the question as to how far I had travelled was invariably followed by an invitation to set down and rest and the proffer of an easy chair.

Before the sun had disappeared in Lake Huron, I had met and conquered the last hill (I walked up it), and was spinning into this village where supper, a bath and a good night's rest have almost entirely effaced the effects of yesterday's experiences. As for my wheel, it stood the racket perfectly, and only once required the use of a wrench, the jar having loosened the steering head. Tomorrow my wife and myself intend taking a 40 mile run, to Mitchell and return, if the weather proves favorable and later in the week to Bayfield where we hope to meet Miller and Millman, my companions of yesterday's jaunt. DON H. C. BOWEN.

A Cheboygan trapper named Fox, has just closed his season's work and reports killing five bears in one week. We bare our heads in silence. We can bear to bare it. He has also killed 26 wild cats during the winter, and secured $75 from the treasury of the county. He had a Fox hunt nearly every day. —Adrian Press.

While We May.

The hands are such dear hands;
They are so full; they turn at our demands
So often; they reach out
With trifles scarcely thought about,
So many times; they do
So many things for me, for you—
If their fond wills mistake,
We may well bend, not break.

They are such fond, frail lips
That speak to us. Pray, if love strips
Them of discretion many times
Or if they speak too slow or quick, such crimes
We may pass by; for we may see
Days not far off when those small words may be Held not as slow, or quick, or out of place, but
dear,
Because the lips that spoke are no more here

They are such dear, familiar feet that go
Along the path with ours—fast fast or slow,
And trying to keep pace—if they mistake
Or tread upon some flower that we would take
Upon our breast, or bruise some reed,
Or crush poor hope until it bleed,
We may be mute,
Not turning quickly to impute
Grave fault; for they and we
Have such a little way to go—can be Together such a little while along the way,
We will be patient while we may.

So many little faults we find,
We see them; for not blind
Is Love. We see them; but if you and I
Perhaps remember them some by and by,
They will not be
Faults then—grave faults—to you and me,
But just odd ways—mistakes, or even less—
Remembrances to bless.
Days change so many things—yes, hours,
We see so differently in sun and showers,
Mistaken words tonight
May be so cherished by tomorrow's light,
We will be patient, for we know
There's such a little way to go.

Frances E. Willard.

Maggie Luke Black

Was born in the township of Whiteford, Monroe county, Mich., March 9th, 1857. In the year 1879 she was united in marriage to W. W. Eighmey. This union was blessed with one daughter, Alfena. Mr. Eighmey died in 1890. In April, 1892, she was married to A. E. Garlinghouse who, with her daughter, still survive her. Through her death the husband has lost an affectionate wife, the daughter a kind mother and the community a good neighbor.

About eighteen years ago she united with the United Brethren church in Christ and was a consistent Christian up to her death. She died at her home in the township of Erie, Monroe county, July 28, 1898, after an illness of nine weeks with inflammation of the stomach. Funeral services were held at the Erie Evangelical church July 30th, conducted by the Rev. Clark who preached from the first verse of Psalm 23.

E. Cora DePuy, of Ann Arbor, formerly of Tecumseh, has been elected a member of the Authors' League, an organization with headquarters in New York City, which has for its object the furtherance of the interests of American authors. The charter members were made up of such well known writers as Mark Twain, Bob Burdette, etc., and Will M. Clemens, one of the brightest magizine and daily newspaper writers of New York, is the secretary. Only authors of recognized merit are admitted. Miss DePuy's famous short story, "The Workingman's Tariff," was her "credential," and she is the first Michigan lady to be elected to membership.—Hudson Gazette.

Jesse Pentecost, of Franklin, is a rich farmer, and it is not necessary for him to work, but he won't be idle.

He is too old to be climbing around barn scaffolds, apple trees and shingling horse sheds, but though 81, he keeps at it. Last week he was fixing a scaffold in his barn. Of course he wouldn't use good boards. Why should he, when it wouldn't be following the customs of farmers for 200 years to use old rails and round poles, huddled together in a hit and miss way, with now and then a piece of board across that is liable to tip at either end or in the middle? Jesse was fixing up the scaffold last week and fell through to the barn floor, a distance of 10 feet, and for a time he was sure the "day of Pentecost" had come. As it was, he was severely injured, but was better at last report. —Adrian Press.

The other day a young woman was rambling along one of the country roads. She was dressed smartly, she thought, and when she met a small, bare-legged urchin carrying a bird's nest with eggs in it, she did not hesitate to stop him, "You are a wicked boy," she said. "How could you rob that nest? No doubt the poor mother is now grieving for the loss of her eggs." "Oh, she don't care," replied the urchin edging away, "she's up on your hat."—Clinton Local.

How a Minnesota editor feels about it: "The newspaper is a wide field and full of roses and thorns. When you roast the preacher, the ungodly smile; when you roast the teetotaler the saloon man set 'em up. If you swear you are a wicked man, and if you pray you are a hypocrite. If you have an opinion you get cussed, and if you don't you are a nonenity. The preacher knows one thing, the saloon man and gambler another, but the journalist is expected to know everything. He is the best man and the worst man in the community. Be d—if you do and be d—if you don't."

The Tehuelches Average But Little Under Six Feet.

The tribes to the east of the Cordilleras, in southern Patagonia, belong to Araucanian stock, and are a superior race, says the Boston Transcript. The Tehuelches—as they call themselves—of southern and eastern Patagonia are the people whose unusual stature gave rise to the fables of early days to the effect that the natives of this region were giants, averaging nine or ten feet in height. It is a fact they are the tallest human beings in the world, the men averaging but slightly less than six feet, while individuals of four to six inches above that mark are not uncommon. They are in reality by no means savages, but somewhat civilized barbarians. They are almost unacquainted with the use of firearms, notwithstanding some contact with the whites, but they have plenty of horses and dogs.

Unsurpassed hunters, they capture the guanaco and the rhea, or South American ostrich, and from the skins of these and other animals they make clothes and coverings for their tents. They make beautiful "capes" or mantles, of fur and feathers, which are highly prized by Europeans and find a ready market, most of the proceeds being spent for bad whisky, which is brought into the country in quantities by traders.

SEAL CATCHES KILLIES.

Lightning as a Swimmer, Much Faster Than the Little Fish.

Almost all the larger fishes of the aquarium like killies to eat when they can get them, and in this respect the New Hampshire seal is like the fishes. There is a great disproportion in size between the seal and the killie, but there is nothing clumsy about the seal, and, big as it is, it is a lightning swimmer, and it can double on itself with the greatest facility. It is much faster than the killie, and the killie is powerless to escape it, says the New York Sun.

On being tossed into the pool the killie makes off from where it struck the water as fast as it can go, with the seal after it. There are steps at one end of the pool leading to the platform on which the seal sleeps at night. The killie may hug one of these steps, but it does not thus escape. The seal humps it up there and catches and eats it, or starts it out across the pool again. The seal can get it practically whenever it wants to. When chasing up the killie the seal sometimes flaps its side flappers like wings, and then it seems like a big bird rushing along under water.

It would take a good many killies to make a meal for the seal, and they are rarely fed to it—only when the seal is a little off its feed and needs something different as an appetizer.

The Gold Product.

The preliminary estimates of the director of the mint indicate that the world's gold product for 1897 amounted to about $240,000,000. This is an increase of nearly 20 per cent. over 1896. All of the great sources of supply show a gain. The United States leads the list, with a product of $61,500,000; but is closely followed by Africa with a product of $58,000,000, and Australia with $51,000,000. Russia, Mexico, Canada and India follow in the order named—Russia with $25,000,000, Mexico with $10,000,000 and Canada and India each with $7,500,000.

The Barometer and Weight.

A man weighs less when the barometer is high, notwithstanding the fact that the atmospheric pressure on him is more than when the barometer is low. As the pressure of air on an ordinary-sized man is about 15 tons, the rise of the mercury from 29 inches to 31 inches adds about one ton to the load he has to carry.

WINE MADE FROM LEAVES.

Curious Results Obtained by a French Druggist in His Experiments.

Wine growers are much interested in, but somewhat dubious of, a story of a new process of wine manufacture. It seems that a French druggist has conceived the idea that the flavor of the fruit of shrubs and trees is generated in the leaves of these plants, and passes from them into the fruits. The fragrance which the leaves of the black currant bush give off, especially after a little rubbing, and which is so very similar to the taste of the berry, appears to favor this view. The Frenchman, however, goes further, and says that the pleasant taste of the apple, pear or grape is prepared in the leaves of the respective plants, although it may be noticeable in these cases in a less degree than with the black currant. After crushing the leaves he adds a fermenting agent such as yeast to them, whereupon the odorless and tasteless glycoside principle becomes free, which is to impart to the fruit proper its aroma and pleasant taste. What was formerly sought to be accomplished with grapes and other fruits is now claimed to be done in a superior manner with the leaves of the plants in a fermenting vat. Apple tree leaves, for instance, are placed in water containing 15 per cent. of sugar, and yeast is added. As the process advances there is an odor of apples, and when the fermentation is finished and the yeast has settled, a straw yellow liquid is obtained, which possesses the fine "bouquet" of the fruit of the respective trees from which the leaves were taken. The public is assured that "with vine leaves the results are still more prolific. A beverage tasting and smelling strongly of wine is obtained, and finally brandy may be distilled from it which is similar to the best cognac."

THE DAINTY CHEMISE.

It Has Come Back Again, Reveling in Ruffles and Puffs, and in Full Womanly Favor.

The chemise went out for awhile, but it came back again. This year it is to be worn by every self-respecting woman and it will be found to revel in the ruffles and puffs of the chemise of the days of Josephine.

The favorite material is nainsook which after all is very durable if a little care is taken in the laundry. Nainsook underwear wears for two years for best and for two years more as second best after it has been patched and darned a little, if only it goes through the hands of a careful laundress. This statement is borne out by every woman who has handled dainty lingerie.

CHEMISE AND SKIRT.

The new chemises are made long enough for an underskirt. They are gathered so as to be small around the waist and to flare around the bottom. The neck is gathered around with lace and ribbon. There come ribbons of all colors that are durable and can be laundered with the garments without being removed.

The shoulder bands of the chemise are made of the same ribbon of a broader width.

Make Glass as Hard as Steel.

Through persistent experimenting a process has been discovered by which glass can be hardened to the consistency of steel, and its first practical application is being given to the manufacture of skates.

CLOSING IN ON SAN JUAN.

American Troops in Puerto Rico Begin the Advance Upon the Capital.

THE TOWN OF GUAYAMO IS CAPTURED.

Spanish Force Driven Back with a Loss of Two Killed—Four Americans Wounded—Gen. Miles' Army in Splendid Condition—Shafter's Troops Leaving Cuba.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Late Saturday the first news dispatch came to the war department from Gen. Miles. It was as follows:

"Ponce, Aug. 8.—Gen. Brooke reports Haines' brigade, Fourth Ohio and Third Illinois, captured Guayamo yesterday; slight skirmish with enemy in and about town; enemy's strength estimated at about 500; not ascertained if any of them regulars; resistance not strong. Private John O'Cordner wounded below the knee; C. W. Riffee, both legs below thigh; T. W. Wolcott, right foot; none serious; all Fourth Ohio. One Spaniard killed, two wounded so far known. MILES."

American Forces Advance.

Puerto Rico, Aug. 8.—A general advance of the American forces began Sunday morning. The remainder of Gen. Ernst's brigade, constituting the advance center, supported by two batteries, moved out at six o'clock, and a part of the Eleventh infantry of Gen. Henry's division started to the left toward Adjuntas. Troop A, of New York, the Philadelphia city troop and troop H, of the Sixth regulars, are convoying Gen. Brooke's transportation column along the road through Salinas to Arroyo.

Miles' Brilliant Campaign.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Up to this point not the slightest complaint has reached the department respecting the management of the Puerto Rican campaign, a tribute to Gen. Miles' ability. No word has come of soldiers without food or ammunition or of sick men without doctors or medicine, nor is the inward movement of the American army delayed for lack of artillery owing to Gen. Miles' insistence upon keeping his artillery in the very vanguard and giving personal attention to the commissary and quartermaster departments.

[illegible] BY BLANCO.

Captain [illegible] Says War Is Over and Liberates Prisoners.

Washington, Aug. 8.—News has just reached Washington [illegible] of a recent astounding pro[illegible] amnesty in which Gen. Blan[illegible] made known to the Spanish people Cuba [illegible] Spain, had through the interve[illegible] of foreign powers, been force[illegible] the disgraceful issue of suing for peace, and that there would be no more war and no further use for soldiers. He offered a pardon to all Cuban political prisoners, and over 150 [illegible] released in Havana.

Havana, [illegible] Blanco says, will be given over to the Americans and Cubans and the Spaniards will be forced to evacuate. He assures the soldiers and all Spanish residents who wish to return to Spain or go to other Spanish possessions that they will be given free transportation by their mother country to their destination and will be protected from interference on the part of either Cubans or Americans. He suggests that the Cubans be forgiven and no longer regarded as enemies and that no unkind feeling be cherished.

Started for Home.

Santiago de Cuba, Aug. 9.—The transports Miami, Matteawan and Vigilancia, loaded with United States troops, sailed for the United States Monday morning. To-day the transport Grand Duchess will leave with 742 men and officers of the Thirteenth infantry and six companies of the Seventy-first New York, aggregating 458 men and officers.

Spanish Prisoners Sail.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Information was received by Adjt. Gen. Corbin from Col. Humphrey, in charge of the transportation arrangements at Santiago, that the Spanish hospital ship Alicante sailed from here Monday with 800 of the Spanish prisoners for Spain. It is supposed that the Alicante carries a majority of the sick and wounded of Gen. Toral's army, as he would naturally send them first. The war department has no definite information as to the sailing of other Spanish vessels.

Situation in Puerto Rico.

Ponce, Island of Puerto Rico, Aug. 9.—Gen. Brooke is here in conference with Maj. Gen. Miles. His force is still at Guayama. A force of about 400 regular Spanish troops are stationed about eight miles away. The United States cruiser Montgomery and the hospital ship Relief have arrived at the Port of Ponce.

A Shrewd Movement.

Nothing has taken place to interfere with the plans finally decided upon by Gen. Miles, and the American troops are gaining advanced ground every day. The plan of having the army march upon San Juan from four directions is regarded here as one of Gen. Miles' shrewdest movements. He has the Spaniards in complete doubt, and has assigned a large enough force under each general to insure successful resistance against Spanish attacks. He intends to press forward to San Juan regardless of the peace negotiations until orders come from Washington for hostilities to cease.

Has All the Troops Needed.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The secretary of war has stopped the dispatch of further reenforcements to Puerto Rico. Gen. Miles reported by cable that the force at his command was ample for the purpose of completing the conquest of the island. This leaves all of Gen. Wade's provisional corps, of 18 regiments, still in the United States.

Capture of Coamo.

Ponce, Aug. 10.—The town of Coamo was taken at eight o'clock yesterday morning by the Sixteenth Pennsylvania and the Second and Third Wisconsin. Artillery was used with good effect on the outlying blockhouse. Two hundred Spaniards were captured and 20 were killed, including Commandant Rafael Illeseas and three other officers. The American loss was one killed and seven wounded.

Fight in the Philippines.

Cavite, Manila Bay, Aug. 3, via Hong-Kong, Aug. 10.—The first shedding of American blood on Philippine soil took place Sunday night, when 14 Americans were killed and 44 wounded during a skirmish at the Malate trenches between Cavite and Manila. No attack has yet been made on the Spanish lines, but the Americans now occupy the trenches formerly held by the insurgents. The British admiral reports the Spanish loss to be 350 killed, and 900 wounded. Malate is located half-way between Cavite and Manila city.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY.

Monument to the Memory of Author of "The Star Spangled Banner" Is Unveiled.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 10—Francis Scott Key, the author of "The Star-Spangled Banner," was honored Tuesday in this, his native city, by the dedication of a handsome monument erected to his memory.

The monument consists of a circular pedestal of granite on a series of wide-spreading bases. It is exceedingly simple in design save for a band of carving around the base of the die and a band of stars under the cornice. The figures consist of a bronze statue nine feet five inches high, surmounting the pedestal, a lifelike portrait of Francis Scott Key. Key is represented on shipboard "By the dawn's early light," and upon the band that girdles the pedestal beneath his feet is the inscription: "'Tis the Star Spangled Banner." His attitude is one of exaltation and inspiration, as with the right arm he indicates to his companions the fact that "The flag is still there," and with the other holds aloft the hat that he has just snatched from his head in an action of reverential salute to the starry banner. At the base of the statue is a bronze group emblematic of patriotism. Beneath the group, on the face of its base, is carved the seal of Maryland. The artist who furnished the monument is Alexander Doyle, the New York sculptor, and the price of the work was $10,000.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY.

The corner-stone of the monument was laid on Flag day, June 14, last, with imposing ceremonies, by Hon. Thomas J. Shryock, grand master of masons of Maryland, and the other state officials of that body. In honor of the occasion a grand street pageant was held, participated in by civic and military organizations.

THE KEY MONUMENT.

In a crypt deeply sunk in the eight foot foundation of the monument repose the remains of Francis Scott Key, and his wife, Mary Taylor Key. They were removed there from their former resting place in an obscure section of the cemetery by the association, by permission of his two daughters, Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Steele, prior to their death, which occurred only recently.

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 9.—Wade Counts and his son, leaders of a notorious band of outlaws, were killed by lightning in Roane county. The two were credited with a long list of murders, but had never been brought to justice.

Death of Madame Worth.

Paris, Aug. 9.—Mme. Charles Frederick Worth, widow of the famous costumer who died in March, 1895, and his successor in the superintendence of the Worth establishment, died Monday.

WAR PRACTICALLY OVER.

The Terms of Peace Offered by the United States Accepted by the Spanish Government.

QUEEN REGENT GRANTS HER ASSENT.

Spain's Answer Declares That the Proposals Are Agreed to Because They Are Imposed by Force—A Commission to Be Appointed—The Reply Reaches Washington.

Madrid, Aug. 8.—The cabinet council terminated after having completely confirmed the reply of the United States, which, it is said, accepts the American conditions. The reply will be telegraphed to Senor Leon y Castillo, the Spanish ambassador to France, so that M. Cambon, the French ambassador at Washington, will receive it today. The government is fully convinced that the note will be satisfactory to the Washington government and that a suspension of hostilities will be its immediate consequences.

The Queen Approves.

Senor Sagasta, the premier, has concluded his conference with the queen regent. Her majesty approves the general lines of the reply of Spain to America's peace terms which Gen. Sagasta explained to her. The government believes that the United States

SENOR SAGASTA.
(Premier of Spain, who accepts the terms.)

will accept Spain's answer, which will certainly reach the white house by Tuesday. As a consequece of the United States accepting the reply, hostilities will immediately afterwards be suspended. As the reply to the American terms was only submitted to the queen regent Sunday, all the reports of her approval Saturday of the American demands are necessarily without foundation.

Outline of the Answer.

London, Aug. 8.—The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Mail telegraphing Sunday says: The answer of the Spanish government declares that Spain cannot discuss the American proposals but only accepts them because they are imposed on her by force. Only a few unessential changes in the American demands were asked for and it is not expected that President McKinley will refuse them. A commission composed of Spaniards and Americans will decide the question of the Cuban debt, the dates and manner of evacuating Cuba and Puerto Rico and the protection of Spaniards and Spanish interests in these places. The commissioners will also decide whether Spain is to be allowed to withdraw her artillery and the remainder of her arms and ammunition from the colonies, while the question of the future of the Philippines will be settled by the same body. Treaty will be signed subject to approval by the cortes, which will be convoked immediately. The cabinet council will appoint Spanish commissioners to meet the Americans to arrange as to the future of the Philippines and other details.

The Answer Arrives.

Washington, Aug. 9.—The concluding portion of the Spanish reply was received Monday evening, but it was not until a late hour that it was deciphered as a whole and gone over by the French ambassador. No effort was made to communicate it to the United States government beyond a note to Secretary Day advising him that the document had been received, but not disclosing its contents. It is probable that the reply will be delivered to the president before the cabinet meeting to-day, although no hour has been fixed. There is complete reticence in all quarters as to the text of the reply, but there is reason to believe it is not an unqualified acceptance of the American terms, but is framed on the theory of accepting the essentials and trusting to a hoped-for conciliatory spirit on the part of this government to moderate to some extent features which the Spanish government seems to regard as unessentials.

Notwithstanding the hot weather, Clinton Masons keep up work in the lodge. The Manchester lodge came down one evening last week and put the finishing touches on two applicants for the third degree, and before they finished, both candidates found themselves without as much as a nickel to pay for a cigar. They were not prepared for such an emergency and at first were somewhat chagrined, but since the matter was in charge of visiting brethren, they said nothing until later, when the affair was amicably adjusted and they joined in the banquet which followed. Clinton lodge seems to be prospering, no matter what the weather.—Adrian Press.

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of This Old, Old Anecdote Will Save a Heap of Trouble and a Pile of Money.

Something had gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine, and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and some one suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up a rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows:

Fixing engine——	.50
Knowing how——	10.00
	$10.50

This anecdote clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works at Marshall, Mich., residing in that city, at No. 141 S. Marshall street, tells in the following of his experience with the little conqueror; it will pay you to know how he got rid of a troublesome companion, he says: "My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of the jarring of the train, and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacts of kidney complaint occurred I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by my acquaintances, numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night, I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy."

A REMEDY FOR THE Effects of Tobacco.

THE excessive use of tobacco, especially by young men is always injurious and undoubtedly shortens life materially. Mr. Ed. C. Ebsen, compositor on the Contra-Costa News, Martinez, Cal., writes; "I have used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and received much benefit from it. I was troubled with nervousness, dizzy spells and sleeplessness, caused by the use of tobacco and stimulants. I took Dr. Miles' Nervine with marvelously good results, allaying the dizziness, quieting the nerves, and enabling me to sleep and rest, proving in my case a very beneficial remedy." Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine is especially adapted to restoring the nervous system to its normal condition under such circumstances. It soothes, heals and strengthens.

BONES OF COLUMBUS.

Are They at Rest in San Domingo or in Havana?

Question Which Has Puzzled Archaeologists and Historians for Many Years—Mr. Ober's Verdict.

[Special Washington Letter.]

WHILE this country is conquesting, and hoisting the stars and stripes so that today it may be said that the sun never sets on our flag; and while we are taking islands of the sea, destroying navies and capturing cities, we are also acquiring relics, some of them very ancient. We are capturing cathedrals, palaces and fortresses which are so old and feeble as to be formidable only in their altisonant names.

The greatest relic which will fall into our possession when Havana is surrendered will be the sarcophagus which is said to contain the remains of Christopher Columbus. It is barely possible that Gen. Blanco may destroy the cathedral, and scatter the sacred remains of the great discoverer rather than to allow them to be desecrated by falling into the hands of "Yankee pigs."

It matters not now whether Eric the Red discovered America hundreds of years before Columbus crossed the ocean. Public opinion will always give Columbus credit for making the discovery which led to development. Amerigo Vespucci was the discoverer of the continent. But it was Columbus who first crossed the ocean in its broadest part, and revealed the new world.

It seems strange that after the lapse of 400 years the people developed upon the new world should go with conquesting arms against the nation which outfitted our discoverer; and that we should be about to seize the convent and the sarcophagus in which his bones have been so long reposing.

"If" the bones of Columbus repose at Havana they will soon be possessed by this country. But you will observe that there is an "if" in this matter, as we find it in so many things. The honor of possessing these relics is claimed alike by Havana and San Domingo. There seems to be no doubt that at each place there is the tomb of a Columbus; but which is the original and only genuine is a matter subject to argument.

Some years ago Frederick A. Ober was sent to San Domingo for the express purpose of sifting the existing evidence and making a personal examination, and bore letters of recommendation from the then secretary of state, Mr. Blaine, to the president of the Dominican republic. Every opportunity was afforded him for a rigid investigation. The minister of fomento, or public affairs, himself accompanied him to the cathedral, and by his command the revered relics were brought from their place of deposit, in an ancient cedar chest within a dark cell near the presbytery, and exposed to the light of day. Photographs were then taken of the vault (the original place of sepulture being pointed out, the two vaults opened and their relative position shown), and also of the casket at present holding the bones, and of the "urna," or case of crystal and stainwood, in which this is contained.

This last is bound about with ribbons, secured by the great seal of the republic, and to obtain even a glimpse of the remains it is first necessary to get the sanction of the ecclesiastical, the municipal and the national authorities, the three keys to the cell in which they are guarded being held by the archbishop, the president of the "ayuntamiento," or municipality, and the secretary of foreign affairs. This is in order to guard against fraud and to prevent unauthorized access to the priceless treasure.

In his report to this government, Mr. Ober said in substance: "The conclusion reached by the Spanish academy is that 'the remains of Cristoval Colon are in the cathedral of Havana, in the shadow of the glorious banner of Castile. It is most fitting that over his sepulcher waves the same flag that sailed with him from Palos in the Santa Maria. There rest the bones of the first admiral of the Indies; there is his last abode.'

"I sincerely desire to assent to this opinion, feeling it were indeed most fitting that the ashes of Columbus should repose under the flag he carried to the new world; but after having sifted all the evidence carefully, after having seen the spot selected by the admiral for his last abode, after having examined witnesses who were present at the discovery of the last casket, after reading the inscriptions and inspecting the relics themselves, I am forced to admit that the Dominicans have a much stronger case than the Havanese.

"The error of the Spaniards, in 1795, lay in their ignorance of the fact that there were two vaults closely contiguous; that only a few inches from the one they opened was another, which was the one they were seeking. Both vaults were under the chancel, both were in the 'Gospel side,' but that alleged by the Dominicans to have contained the remains of Columbus was nearer the wall, immediately against its foundation. Concerning then the question of the present resting place of the bones of Columbus, I may be permitted to add that I declare in favor of San Domingo."

The controversy came about in this way: Christopher Columbus died in 1506, at Valladolid, and was there interred. A few years later the body was taken to the convent of Las Cuevas, where it remained until 1540, when, at the request of the widow of his son, the body was taken to San Domingo, the island of his first discovery. It was the request of Columbus, in his last will, that his body be taken across the ocean and finally sepultured in the convent of Concepcion de la Vega, which had been founded by him. That convent was destroyed by an earthquake, and the body of Columbus was placed in a vault of the capital cathedral which was then being completed. In the year 1549 the archbishop of San Domingo wrote: "The tomb of Don Cristobal Colon, where are his bones, is much venerated in this cathedral."

This proves that the bones were there, but there is no record of their transfer across the ocean. It is one of the generally-admitted facts of history. It is known, however, that the body was placed beneath the pavement of the presbytery, at the right of the high altar. All records concerning the ceremony of interment were destroyed by Sir Francis Drake, in the seventeenth century, when he bombarded and sacked the capital. The tomb was covered with earth, and all traces of it lost for fully 200 years, the history being preserved solely by local tradition.

But the fact would have ever remained undisputed that the bones of Columbus were there, somewhere in that cathedral, but for the intervention of what is called "Spanish pride." When San Domingo was ceded to France, in 1795, it was concluded that as a matter of "Spanish pride" it would never do to permit the bones of Columbus rest under the folds of an allen flag. Consequently, Duke de Veragua, a lineal descendant of Columbus, and a.. admiral in the Spanish navy, was sent to remove the remains to Havana.

Acting according to tradition, the pavement was broken on the "gospel side" of the altar, a vault was found, leaden plates and fragments of bone, with considerable dust. These were carefully and reverently gathered together, and transferred to Havana on the man-of-war San Lorenzo. With great ceremonies, with pageantry and with pomp the remains were carried to the cathedral and placed in a mural niche, to the right of the presbytery. The remains having been immured and sealed, a marble tablet was affixed, marking the place forever.

So far, so good. Nobody doubted that the work had been done efficiently, correctly and faithfully. But many good stories have sequels; and sometimes the sequels are the more interesting.

In 1877, while workmen were repairing the chancel of the cathedral at San Domingo, another vault was discovered at the left of the altar. The inscriptions discovered disclosed the fact that this was the grave of the grandson of the first Columbus. Then it was remembered that the entire original Columbus family had been there interred. The workmen sounded the pavement and found the empty vault referred to, which had contained the body transferred to Havana. They also discovered another vault, close to the wall of the cathedral, and this contained a well-preserved leaden casket with the inscription, "D. de la A., per Ate."—which means, "Discoverer of America; first admiral." Inside the lid were inscribed the words: "Illtre y Es'do Varon, Du. Cristoval Colon." The case was inscribed at the right end with the letter "A;" while on the left end appeared the letter "C."

Within the case were found several well-preserved human bones, a bullet and a silver plate containing the titles of the first Columbus. It is a singular fact that when Christopher Columbus was buried there was in his body a bullet received by him in battle in Africa, a bullet which often caused him much pain during his lifetime; and there was a bullet found in this coffin.

There is the story told in brief, but the true story, with all essential facts. Where do you think the bones of the great explorer are at rest? In San Domingo or Havana?

Troubles of a Pastor's Wife

This woman was peculiarly afflicted; physicians could do nothing to relieve her, yet she was cured in a simple way. She now sends a message to suffering humanity which should be helpful.

Probably no other woman ever suffered just as Mrs. Adams did, the wife of Rev. A. R. Adams, pastor of the Christian church at Blandinsville, Ill. Physicians were baffled by her ailment, and for years she was compelled to live a life of torture. To-day she is well and the story of her suffering and recovery will touch a responsive cord in the heart of every woman.

"About six years ago," said Mrs. Adams, "my health began to fail. The first trouble I noticed was with my stomach; food did not agree with me, and my appetite failed until I could scarcely eat.

"I would begin to bloat before I was through with a meal, and the food felt like a stone in my stomach.

"After eating I would have pains in my stomach with a smothered feeling which would finally extend into my throat and chest accompanied by a choking sensation.

"I began to bloat all over and my hands and feet commenced swelling until I thought I had dropsy.

"In a short time I had pain and soreness in my left side which extended across my back accompanied by dizziness, and then followed severe paroxysms of pain extending from the lower part of my stomach into the region of my heart.

"During these spells a hard ridge as large as my arm would appear in the left side of my stomach and around the left side.

"I had a feeling of heaviness in my head and at times could scarcely hold it up or keep my eyes open, yet when night came I could not sleep.

"I also suffered intensely from female trouble.

"I doctored with ten different physicians, but was not benefited. No two of the doctors diagnosed my case the same.

"One day my husband noticed an article regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in the newspaper, and induced me to try the pills.

"I began taking them, but experienced no relief until I had used the sixth box. I continued taking them and after using eleven boxes was greatly benefited.

"I was also troubled with nervous prostration and numbness of my right hand and arm. My hand hurt so at times, tingling and burning, that I could hardly endure the pain, but that has all passed away.

"I now know what it means to eat a good meal without suffering afterwards, and enjoy a good night's rest.

"I am again able to do my work, and have done more this summer than in all the last four years put together.

"I feel safe in saying that it is all due to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and consider it my duty to let people know what these pills have done for me, as it may be the means of relief for others who are suffering."

Diseases strange to physicians, symptoms that defied diagnosis, have succumbed to the potent influence of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Druggists everywhere consider them to be one of the most valuable remedial agents known to science.

The Ypsilanti school board is considering the feasibility of establishing a course in Spanish in the high school, believing that a large number of people will take advantage of it, inasmuch as the United States' trade with Spanish provinces will be largely increased.—Ann Arbor Argus.

Almost the first words spoken by Andrew G. Lockwood, a member of Co. D, 33d Michigan volunteers, who was shot in the foot at Santiago, on reaching home, was the question: "Is that Cuban flag still flying over our house." Being told no, he said: "Don't put it up again." The Cubans, he says, are worthless fellows, no good for anything.—Ann Arbor Argus.

To Cure Stomach Trouble Has Not Failed.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure & Nerve Restorer is not a cure-all, but is intended for the treatment of STOMACH and NERVE troubles only. A great many preparations have been advertised, for years, for the special treatment of various diseases as foreign to the stomach as can possibly be, that are now being advertised for the special treatment of dyspepsia, simply because of the prevalence of this peculiar malady. When as a matter of fact, a preparation for the treatment of stomach diseases must necessarily be prepared for those and nothing else.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer is the result of patient study and experience by one fully equipped for the task, as is being clearly demonstrated by the many testimonials where marvelous cures have and are being produced daily in chronic and complicated cases that have baffled the knowledge of local physicians, besides the various remedies so highly advertised for the treatment of stomach diseases.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer is a combined method treatment in tablet form, which does not become stale and worthless with age, as do liquid preparations. These tablets are pleasant to take, can easily be carried in the pocket to be used when necessary, and can be taken by children and invalids with perfect impunity.

A valuable book on stomach and nerve troubles, their symptoms and cure, can be had free at any place where this preparation is sold. Fifty cents invested in Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer will substantiate all that is claimed for it. For sale by

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

WORN-OUT WOMEN

Most women are drudges. Some are willing, some are unwilling. Some women drudge for themselves, some for their family. Their routine is endless; no matter how ill they feel they work. Women never half take care of themselves. Early decay and wrecked lives abound, mainly through neglect. Every woman should have the book called "Health and Beauty," which the Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., will mail on request. It tells women some easy things to do to protect health, and all about the virtues of Pe-ru-na for women's peculiar ills. Miss Lizzie Peters, Mascoutah, Ill., writes:

"I am perfectly cured of female weakness by taking Pe-ru-na and Man-a-lin. I have gained thirty-seven pounds since I began taking Pe-ru-na. My friends are wondering what makes me look so bright and healthy. I would like to let the world know what a wonderful medicine Pe-ru-na is."

Woman's diseases are mainly catarrh of the pelvic organs. Pe-ru-na drives out every phase of catarrh.

Mrs. Eliza Wike, No. 120 Iron Street, Akron, O., writes:

"I would be in my grave now if it had not been for your God-sent remedy, Pe-ru-na. I was a broken-down woman, now I am well."

Lots of young men look like animated clothing dummies.

For years I have been a sufferer from chronic constipation and dyspepsia. I tried different doctors and all the remedies I could hear of, but nothing helped me and I grew worse. A lady recommended Carter's Cascara Cordial to me, and I decided to try it, and am very thankful that I did, for it completely cured me; my friends were astonished, for they thought I would never be any better. I take great pleasure in recommending it, for I know of others whom it has helped as well as myself.

SYRUP OF FIGS

NEVER IMITATED IN QUALITY.

THE EXCELLENCE OF SYRUP OF FIGS is due not only to the originality and simplicity of the combination, but also to the care and skill with which it is manufactured by scientific processes known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only, and we wish to impress upon all the importance of purchasing the true and original remedy. As the genuine Syrup of Figs is manufactured by the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only, a knowledge of that fact will assist one in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties. The high standing of the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. with the medical profession, and the satisfaction which the genuine Syrup of Figs has given to millions of families, makes the name of the Company a guaranty of the excellence of its remedy. It is far in advance of all other laxatives, as it acts on the kidneys, liver and bowels without irritating or weakening them, and it does not gripe nor nauseate. In order to get its beneficial effects, please remember the name of the Company—

Wanderings.

There is no firm or corporation strong enough to proclaim to the world "We no longer have to look after business, it will come to us anyway." It is only a few years since the Adrian Messenger was a little one horse affair, in fact for about six months the proprietor carted the forms over to Tecumseh each week to have the paper printed. To day the Messenger (weekly) and Telegram (daily) comprise the strongest newspaper establishment in the county. The older papers of Adrian having simply set around and allowed Grandon to build up this business right under their noses, and why? because they thought business was bound to come their way without solicitating and were afraid to take a little of their own medicine and advertise. The latest addition to the Messenger office is a Thorne Typesetting Machine and a new dress to go with it, put in last week.

A young boy of my acquaintance, has a new idea about grandparents. Sometime since his grandfather married a lady somewhat younger than himself, and now the boy figures that as time goes on and his grandfather dies, the grandmother will in time marry a young man this keeping him constantly supplied and in reality start a game of "Progressive Grandparents."

Neighbor Hine of the NEWS and friend Stearns of the PRESS are enjoying a nice little discussion over gold and silver, two dead issues at the present time. There is nothing new about either side to be said and the American people dislike reiteration.

Some of Tecumseh's merchants are inclined to complain about the cheap excursions to Detroit. Last week 1180 people from Tecumseh and vicinity enjoyed the S. S. excursion and a party who attended informs me that there were scarcely any packages in the train coming home. The people did not go to buy goods but to spend a holiday, and I know of several persons attended, who in this way made their first trip to Detroit.

England is mourning for Gladstone and Germany for Bismark, both countries deeply feeling the loss not only of the men but of their counsel in state affairs. America would be more fortunate for when her great men die others are born to take their place. For instance, last week the HERALD chronicled the birth of Burton Adam Garlinghouse, son of one noted American and named for two others. With such a son growing up what should old Glory fear?

I have heard many compliments for the Tecumseh News since Mr. Hine purchased the property and indeed he is printing a nice little paper. Of course he is to a certain extent handicapped in the matter of securing local news by limited acquaintance and incompetant help, then as he gets better acquainted with Lenawee county people, he will discover that they more desire news of local interest than editorial rehash, still on the whole Mr. Hine is to be congratulated.

Now is the opportunity for the school board to adopt standard time. When school opens standard time should by all means govern the sessions. The voice of all Tecumseh desires OUR time and it should not be necessary to hit the school board on the head with a club or pass around a petition to make them understand it.

The illness of Percy Fitzsimmons is much to be regretted. Although the physician states to me that he is in no danger, a run of malarial fever is bad enough at best and we cannot spare him even for a few weeks.

At the Williamson—Mills party Friday evening Misses Blanche Smallshaw and Blanche Wiggins and Messrs. Myers and Long, of Adrian, were in attendance.

Will VanAntwerp and wife rode to Deerfield Sunday on their wheels and back Monday. By the looks of their bikes, Deerfield must have had her share of Sunday night's storm.

Fay Anderson, Leon Rosacrans and Leon Burlingame visited Adrian last Sunday. With the addition of Lavern Smith, this crowd has made regular visits to our southern suburb of late.

Elsworth Russell and wife were called here from Jackson Friday, by the illness of Mr. Russell's father. He returned the first of the week, but Mrs. Russell remained for a longer visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hyde.

Among the Lake Shore Niagara excursionists were: Rice Hendershot wife and child and two sisters, Clara and Ida, Mr. VanValkenburg, Clem and Lena Hardenburg, Will Driver and wife, Mrs. Nettie Crossman and Mrs. Wm. Ide. The two last named are to visit Will Hamilton at Dundee, N. Y.

Letter from Chickamauga.

Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park Ga.
Co. C, 31st Mich. Aug. 7, 1898.

Well, the 31st is now encamped on the Ringgold road about a mile from the old location. The air and the soil is much sweeter and better, but we are a mile further in the wilderness, a mile further from the railroad and more isolated than ever. To cap the climax, the war is over, there will be no more fighting, nothing but camp life either here or elsewhere. To see the preparations making one would think these were to be our winter quarters. Wooden floors and sleeping bunks are building and in a short time we look for log cabins and cellars. The boys would gladly give up what little comfort there is here for one good scrap. But it undoubtedly is too late to hope for any chance to fight. Of course the next best thing would be an assignment to help bring order out of disorder in some of the captured islands. Perhaps even this will be denied us. But the powers that be are not the only ones who know the reason. Out of the 1300 men in the 31st probably there are not five per cent. but that can see as far into a grindstone as anyone else.

Our present camp is situated in a woods somewhat denser than our last. The drainage is fully as good and, with the lessons already learned, the health of the boys will doubtless remain as it is or be improved. At least we have an abatement of the maggot nuisance. The 1st Georgia has also moved camp and are across the street from us. East of us are the brass cannon used in the late war by a Michigan battery. They occupied the position for about an hour and then joined in the general retreat toward Gen. Howard's lines near Rossville. The boys here from the north are just getting it through their heads that the battle of Chickamauga was not a Federal victory. A few more such battles and there would have been no 1st Georgia in the Spanish war.

Drills were resumed this morning. Company drill from 6:30 to 7:30 a m; battalion or regimental drill from 3 to 4 p m; squad drill from 4 to 5 p m. To be perfectly candid there is a sullen, "don't-give-a-damn" spirit rife in the 31st ever since it became evident that there would be no active service. There is but one remedy and that is a speedy movement to some new scene of activity. Evidently this is appreciated by those in authority for the drills are very severe and tend to suppress the spirits of the men.

There is a petition in preparation which it is proposed to send to Secretary Alger asking that the 31st be either sent to active service or discharged and asking that no garrison duty be assigned us. As the active duty such as fighting is over it looks very much like a petition for discharge. The fact is that garrison or guard duty on the captured islands is as much a part of the war as the fighting, therefore it is to be hoped that Co. C will not sign it generally. Garrison duty in the United States was not contemplated either by the President in his call for volunteers or by the men when they volunteered. Such an assignment of the 31st would be very distasteful and would result in many energetic protests To the private the present outlook is extremely gloomy.

FRANK C. DUDLEY.

Special Excursion.

On Sunday, August 14, the D. T. & M. railroad will run a special excursion from Allegan to Toledo and return. Train will leave Allegan at 5:25 a. m., arriving at Toledo at 11:25 a. m. Returning, train will leave Toledo at 6 p. m.

Tickets will be good on train leaving Toledo at 7:30 Monday morning, thereby giving excursionist ample time to visit the Casino, the Ball Game, or to enjoy a boat ride to Monroe Piers, one of the most delightful bathing resorts in Southern Michigan. Train will pass your station at 10:05.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

A dispatch from Cleveland says: "A foreclosure suit was commenced yesterday against the Wheeling & Lake Erie railway by the Merchantile Trust Co., of New York. A short time ago foreclosure proceedings were brought against the railroad under a consolidated mortgage. The new case is brought under the first mortgage on the Lake Erie division of the road." This is only one of the formalities of the general foreclosure suit. There are two more divisional suits to file yet before all the mortgages have been foreclosed. The work of reorganization seems to be proceeding without any interruption.—Toledo Blade.

A Lima dispatch says the Detroit & Lima Northern road has just completed a branch to Columbus, it is said, to be extended to Chicago. The company is now at work on a branch from St. Johns to Fort Wayne, by way of St. Marys, O. From the latter city the road will be built to Chicago. The St. Marys branch work on it is now going on, but until today no intimation was given that the road would be pushed farther westward. The building of the line will make the road no little factor in coal and grain shipments, and give Columbus and central Ohio another and, it is claimed, shorter route to Chicago and the west.—Adrian Times.

No, gentle reader, the fragrance you smell is not orange blossoms, as oranges don't bloom this time of the year. Must be the geraniums, foliage plants and castor beans in the Wabash garden.—Britton Citizen.

The same fragrance up in Tecumseh, floating north from the garden of Gus. Vallenburg, the combination target man.

Springfield, O., Aug. 5.—It is stated here on good authority that Senator Brice or his agents will buy the Ohio Southern railway when it is offered for sale on August 20. It is added that this will be in pursuance of the resolution formed by Brice several years ago to build up a big railroad system.—Toledo Blade.

The Detroit & Lima Northern road is doing a phenomenal business and every engine on the road is in use. Some of the engines have to be run three and four hours before they go into the round house, owing to heavy business. The company will shortly let the contract for a number of new engines.

J. H. Seaman, Calvin Brice's representative, is in the city, conferring with the Lima Northern and D. T. & M. officials. The purpose of the conference is to settle some of the details of the transfer of the D. T. & M. from the Lima Northern to Mr. Brice.—Toledo Blade.

Adrian—Rev. Casper Bursick, of Lake Ridge, Washtenaw county, wants $5,000 damages from the Lima Northern and Wabash railroads jointly for alleged personal injuries by being struck by a Lima train Northern freight on the Wabash tracks.—Detroit Evening News.

Lima, O., Aug. 8.—John T. Adams, who was manager of the construction of the Columbus division of the Detroit & Lima Northern road, will be made superintendent of the division and will have his headquarters in Columbus.—Toledo Blade.

At Dundee Wednesday some one entered the caboose of the D. & L. N. and stole the clothes belonging to two brakemen named Si Lyons and Walt Mizer. Lyons lost $35 worth and Mizer a suit and extra coat.

The Lima Northern is all right. Give these people time and they will have one of the best railroad systems in the United States. And it will not take very long either.

Conductor J. M. Porter, of the Detroit local, is off duty this week, having sprained and bruised his foot in the Detroit yards, when jumping onto his train.

W. H. Yeazell and family are now occupying the Fuller house on Oneida street and Will Cotterman and family Henry Smith's house just north.

The work train has been taken off the D. & L. N. for a short time thus diminishing the men needed in the gravel pit from 25 to 7 or 8.

Will Orr has retaken his section, not being able to stand the office work at Monroe. Fred Parker has returned to Mosherville.

Mrs. Ed. Gregg, of Lima, visited Mrs. Geo. R. Haskell the last of the week.

Mrs. E. B. Hathaway and Miss Daisy, of Ottawa, were here Tuesday.

Station Agent Ryan was in Lima Wednesday.

Engineer Smith and his wife are both quite sick.

Home-Seekers Excursions.

On the first and third Tuesdays in July, August, September and October, 1898 the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway will sell round-trip excursion tickets (good 21 days) from Chicago, Milwaukee and other points on its line, to a great many points in South and North Dakota and other western and southwestern states at about one fare. Take a trip west and see the wonderful crops and what an amount of good land can be purchased for a little money. Further information as to rates, routes, prices of farm lands, etc., may be obtained on application to any coupon ticket agent or by addressing the following named persons: W. E. Powell, Gen'l Immigration Agent, 410 Old Colony Bldg., Chicago; H. F. Hunter, Immigration Agt. for South Dakota, 291 Dearborn St., Chicogo, or Geo. H. Heafford, General Paseenger Agent, Chicago, Illinois.

Grangers Picnic, Baw Beese Park.

On August 17th the Grangers meet at Baw Beese Park for their annual picnic. The Lake Shore & Mich. South. Ry. will on that date sell excursion tickets to Baw Beese Park and return at very low rates. For particulars as to train service etc., see small bills and ask ticket agents.

Tuesday evening "Rude" Mead saw young man fasten a bicycle to the back of a rig belonging to Newton Bryan, which was hitched on Chicago street, and drove off. This looked queer to Mead as the fellow was a stranger and acted suspiciously so he took after him up the street awheel, catching him in front of the Baptist church. As he could do no more than hold the horse and his bicycle, the fellow and his own wheel got away much to Rude's sorrow.

Nelson Dewey, living near Birdsall, was painfully kicked by a horse, on his farm Tuesday. The horse is full of mischief and play, and has been in the habit, when someone is endeavoring to capture it, of waiting until about ready to be haltered and then turning, would kick at its would be capturer and run away. This time Mr. Dewey was unfortunate in getting too close to the animals heels and received a terrible blow on the left hip. It is not thought any bones are broken, but there is a very painful contusion.—Evening Telegram.

Wednesday evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Hastings in Brownville, gathered about twenty five guests, being summoned to attend the wedding of the oldest daughter Marthena, to J. D. THE CHARMING ETHEL COLLAR.

A Very Simple But Decidedly Effective Affair in Black Satin and Guipure Lace.

The Ethel collar, which, by the way, is named after Ethel Barrymore, the young American girl who was engaged to the son of Henry Irving consists of a broad band of black satin tied around the neck and finished with a large bow at the side. The satin bow must be a "made up" one and pinned upon the collar or the symmetry of the neck will be destroyed. Finish with hooks and eyes and pin or hook the bow on afterward.

Around three sides of the collar there stands a big ruffle of guipure lace. This is continued at the sides in a fichu, which falls nearly to the belt. This fichu is made in various ways, one of the simplest of which is upon a narrow backing of satin ribbon.

WASHING THE HAIR.

What Women Should Do to Keep It in Good Condition All the Year Round.

Once a week in summer and once a month in winter is, according to a New York hairdresser, often enough to wash the hair. "For frequent washings weaken it. The scalp should be carefully dried afterward. The hair should be trimmed about once a month to prevent it from falling out. Occasionally its condition becomes poor, just as the general system gets run down. It then needs a good tonic and should have it; but otherwise hairdressings are generally to be avoided. Brush thoroughly once a day at least, and do not braid tightly at night. While care will do much toward strengthening weak growths of hair, it is, after all, a matter of temperament. I have seen strong and lusty young women with very poor hair, and I have seen their opposites with magnificent locks. I knew an Irish woman 60 years old who had blue-black hair with a satiny luster that was beautiful. It fell below her waist and was so thick that it covered her like a mantle when she let it down. I doubt if she had ever brushed it; a hasty combing through in the morning and a twist, with a common back comb stuck in to hold it up, was all the dressing it ever got. It is such contradictory conditions as these that make it hard to treat hair successfully."

TWO HUNDRED A YEAR.

How a Wisconsin Teacher Maintains His Family Nicely on This Modest Amount.

A. H. Zander contributes an article to the Ladies' Home Journal in which he tells how he maintains a family of four persons—his wife, two children and himself—on $200 per year. He is a school-teacher and is paid a salary of $405, out of which he saves and puts out at interest $200 yearly. Living in a small Wisconsin town he has the advantage of cheap rents, his house costing him $36 per year. His other expenses are: Provisions, $94.82; clothing and footwear, $38; magazines and newspapers, $5; incidentals, $40.

"Our meals," Mr. Zander writes, "we find abundant in quantity and variety. For breakfast we have coffee, coffee-cake, bread and butter, with eggs or fried ham occasionally. For dinner we have boiled potatoes with butter gravy, boiled cabbage or other vegetables, and pudding or pie, and coffee. Sometimes we have pork and beans, and sometimes some egg preparation, as potato pancakes, dumplings, etc., while with one meal in the week we have meat. For supper we have the remains of our dinner, with fried or baked potatoes, and eggs. We have coffee with every meal. On this fare we thrive well."

NEW SKIRT TRIMMINGS.

Hints on How to Treat Next Summer's Skirts to the Best Possible Advantage.

Summer dress skirts will be trimmed, there is no doubt about that. Many of the skirts will be elaborately ruffled from the hem to the belt as in past seasons. One of the latest skirt revivals is the puff which is put on around the hem. This puff is made of a bias band of the goods which is gathered on both edges and sewed around the skirt. If it be a wash dress the puff is easily managed by ironing in the usual way. If it be a dress that cannot wash the puff is stiffened by crinoline or a delicate inner lining, so that it keeps its shape the whole season.

Lace will be used a great deal upon these skirts and it will be put on in the form of puffs and ruffles. Puffs, it may here be stated, will be the most fashionable skirt trimming there is. Everything is puffs; ribbon is puffed and lace is puffed.

JAPANESE WOMEN.

According to This Writer They Are Gentle, Graceful, Beautiful and Self-Sacrificing.

The women of Japan have often been misunderstood, says K. Mitsukuri in the Atlantic. By those who have known them they have been pronounced the best part of Japan. They have been described as gentle, graceful, beautiful and self-sacrificing. Not only in those gentler virtues, but also in some sterner aspects of life, the Japanese woman has shown time and again what she is made of. . . . . Anyone who speaks against the purity of the Japanese woman knows not whereof he talks, or is a vile slanderer who would deprive the woman of what is most precious to her. As the mistress of the family she has as much real authority in the family as her western sister. As a mother she is paid great deference by her children. In society a lady is always treated with respect. There are some respects in which changes are desirable, but, on the whole, I have no hesitation in saying the position of woman in Japan is a very high one.

THE LATEST BODICE.

Splendid Thing for Women Who Have a Little Ingenuity and Some Half Worn Waists.

A ticket which labeled a very pretty waist decoration in a New York showroom was marked: "This bodice, $4."

The bodice was sleeveless and had no under arm pieces, yet it carried off the name of "bodice" because it composed almost a whole waist.

It was made entirely of chiffon, plaited closely across the back and finished with a puffing of the chiffon front and back. The dress was of violet silk, embroidered with very tiny violet flowers, with puffs laid in between. The collar was of the very same design and material. Around the top of the collar there was a ruffle of chiffon, edged with Valenciennes lace, and a ruffle also bordered the body. At the belt there was a large heavy bow of violet velvet ribbon, which finished the waist. The same bow was repeated in the back. This style can be highly recommended for a half-worn waist, as there is nothing but the sleeves and under seams to show.

A VIOLET OVER-BODICE.

Spring Colors and Tints.

The spring shades of blue are Roman, hyacinth, silver, Napoleon and barbeau, or blue-bottle. The greens are in many tints with fanciful titles that have clear emerald tints, and also the deep Russian green, becoming to so many women; willow, the golden green tint and leaf in three different shades. Gismonda again appears, the purple slightly deeper than that of Parma violet, and much like the amethyst are plum shades that have been so popular in costume cloths and millinery this winter.

Value of Lemon Juice.

The best manicure acid is a teaspoonful of lemon juice in a cup of tepid water. This not only whitens and removes all stains from the nails, but it loosens the cuticle much better than scissors do. A dash of lemon juice, too, in a glass of water is an admirable tooth wash after the use of onions or anything that will affect the breath.

For a Violet Luncheon.

The mysteries of a violet soup served recently at a luncheon which took on this color scheme were obligingly explained by the hostess. "It is nothing else," she said, "than chicken consomme in which some red cabbage is boiled."

CHASED BY WOLVES.

A Thrilling Incident of Winter Travel on the Upper Mississippi River.

BEFORE any railroad had been built along the upper Mississippi, all traffic in the summer was by steamboat, which carried also the mail. In the winter everything was carried by stage. There was a line of mail-stages between St. Paul and Prairie du Chien—or the southern terminus may have been La Crosse at the time of which I write. These stages followed the river—how much of the distance on the ice I cannot say, but in my neighborhood, where the river expanded and became Lake Pepin, the route was all on the ice, and most of the way far from the shore. Lake Pepin is some three miles wide and 27 miles long, and although in reality only a widening of the river it is a true lake, in which the current of the river is almost lost. There is no other such body of water in the whole length of the Mississippi. The upper Mississippi is worn far below the level of the country; consequently Lake Pepin is surrounded by high bluffs, with bold, flat tops. Leading down to the lake, on both the Minnesota and Wisconsin sides, are many ravines or coulees, worn by the watercourses and wooded. Even now there is much wild land among the bluffs.

It was in the latter part of January years ago that I found myself at Hawk's Landing, on the Minnesota side of the river just below the foot of the lake, whither I had gone with an uncle. He found that his business would detain him longer than he expected, and he decided to send me back alone on the stage. It should have left the Landing at one o'clock, but it was delayed somewhere down the river, and did not arrive till nearly three. It was a full afternoon's drive to Lake City, but the driver said he had a good team, and promised to get through on time, notwithstanding the late start. He was a rough and dissipated man, but he had the reputation of always keeping sober till after the day's trip had been completed. But the delay may have upset him, and I think he began drinking before we started, although no one then noticed it. He certainly had provided himself with a large bottle of liquor, as I soon had occasion to know. I suppose I could not have been more than 12 or 13 years old, although life in a new country and on a farm had given me ability to take care of myself beyond my years.

When we departed from the War Eagle house on the levee, and swung along up the road under the shadow of Wabasha Bluff, with the horses at a gallop, I felt a sort of admiration for the driver, notwithstanding his roughness. We slackened somewhat when we got beyond the line of houses along the single street, and soon rounded the bluff and kept along the edge of a bank above the frozen river. It was here that the driver took his first drink from his big, flat bottle. This alarmed me, because I had already seen much of the effect of liquor on the class of men to which he belonged. He passed the bottle to the passenger, who took a very small sip. I thought more because he was afraid to refuse than because he wanted it.

We soon came to the lake, and turned down Fond du Lac point and out upon the ice, where the road was marked by little cedars. The driver had already taken several more drinks, and on the lake I found cause to be alarmed at something else. This was the state of the weather. The wind had freshened a great deal and the snow was drifting rapidly. It was not sufficient to shut out from our sight the row of evergreens, and we could see even the bluffs on either side of the lake; but the fine snow was sifting along over the crust like streaming hair, and rapidly filling the track. This made our progress slow, but the condition of the driver was soon a greater hindrance. He drove either with the horses on a run or a slow walk, although they walked more than they ran. He kept returning to his bottle with frequency.

We were not yet half way when the sun was only a little above the Minnesota bluffs, with big orange sun dogs standing on each side of it. Just as it disappeared below the bluffs the driver slid out of the seat into a drunken sleep in the bottom of the sleigh. I climbed over to the front seat and took the reins myself.

"You seem to know how to drive; do you think we can get there to-night?" asked the other passenger.

"I can drive four horses," I answered, very proudly. "We can get through, I guess, if it doesn't storm so that we can't follow the trees."

He drew a long breath at this and made himself comfortable under the buffalo robes, leaving me to the full management of the team, which I was glad enough to assume, even if my hands were pretty cold.

In half an hour it was dark. There was no moon, but the sky was clear and the stars bright. With the going down of the sun the wind had died away, leaving a calm, clear night; but before it had stopped it had filled the track with drifted snow and left the traveling heavy. We jogged along past the endless row of little trees at a pretty good rate. The only sounds were the creaking of the sleigh-runners in the snow, for the night was bitter cold, and the occasional deep rumblings of the ice, sounding, as it always seems to me, like distant thunder near at hand. There was a faint play of northern lights in the sky ahead of us.

I had for some time been looking anxiously for the lights of the town, although there was no hope of seeing them yet, when my attention was attracted by a dark object on the snow far to the right, toward the Wisconsin shore. At first I took this thing to be one of the immense ridges in the ice where it had cracked and heaved up, several of which were on the lake, some of them almost as high as a house. Then I saw it was moving along like a shadow at right angles to our course.

The man saw it and said: "What's coming over there—some other teams?"

"They wouldn't be going so fast," I answered, picking up the whip from the bottom of the sleigh. The shadow was now directly to the right.

"It's some sort of animal," went on the man. He paused a moment and then added: "They look like big dogs."

At that moment there came the cry I had so often heard at home, only much deeper, harsher and louder.

"They're wolves!" I said, and I cracked the whip at the horses, although that was hardly necessary, as they heard the savage howl as well as we did and knew it meant danger.

They were indeed a pack of timber wolves, starved out of the Wisconsin coulees and crossing the lake in search of food on the Minnesota side. The howl which they set up showed they thought they had found it unexpectedly on the lake. The horses struck into a fast gallop and the sleigh began to sway and bound around in an uncomfortable manner. I looked back and saw that the wolves had struck the road and were coming behind. The horses were now running as fast as they could with so heavy a track. It seemed as if we should be thrown out the next moment, and it was certain that we should be overtaken in any case.

The second time I looked back I saw that the pack was much nearer—I could make out the leaders and see that there must be 20 or 30 of the animals, all told. My fellow passenger was clinging to the seat crying to me to drive faster, although the horses were fairly running away and I had practically no control over them one way or the other.

"Can't you throw out the trunk and back seat?" I shouted to him.

I will give him the credit for doing very well at this. He clambered over back and pitched out the other seat and a small trunk which stood behind it. It was a good thing to do, as it lightened the sleigh and delayed the wolves slightly. They all stopped and surged around the things a moment; then they came on.

I heard the man throwing out the mail sacks and some other parcels, but the wolves did not pause much for these. They were soon closer than ever, and, the man said afterwards, within a few rods of us. I kicked the buffalo robe, which was still over my lap, out at one side, and sank down on my knees in the bottom of the sleigh; the man wrenched loose the seat and dropped it out with two other robes. These were the last things which we had to throw out. The robes seemed to delay the wolves longer than anything else. They stopped and tore them to shreds. We got a quarter-mile start. All of this time the drunken driver was sleeping like a log in the bottom of the sleigh.

The horses were becoming exhausted, and I could feel that they were going slower. I now urged them on with whip and voice, but it seemed to make no difference. The howling behind us began to come plainer; the wolves had left the robes and were again gaining on us. Right ahead I could see a high ridge in the ice where it had cracked and shoved up. A notch had been cut in it just wide enough for a sleigh to pass through. I held the reins steady and tried to slow up a little in the hope of steering safely through the narrow crack. As we came up to it I saw a dark streak between the rough cones at either side; the crack had opened two or three feet during the day and new ice had formed. We struck the opening in the ridge squarely; the nigh horse reared up and jumped over the new ice, but the other stepped on it and broke through with one forward leg. He fell, but the other horse dragged him and the sleigh beyond the crack, where we stopped all in a heap.

I jumped over the dashboard and fell in the snow beside the horse. He was struggling to rise, but I guessed what had happened, and threw my body across his neck and felt of his leg. It was crushed and broken. I got out my knife, cut the breaststrap which held the neckyoke, and called to the man to unhook the traces, which he managed to do at last. I cut the injured horse's rein and ran around behind the other, who stood trembling and snorting. With the strap I tied back the end of the whiffletree to the sleigh-runner.

The wounded horse was again struggling to rise and had sprawled himself out of the way. I shouted at the other horse; he started with a bound and the man and I threw ourselves into the sleigh, half knocking out our brains as our heads struck together. We looked back and saw the whole hungry pack fall upon the abandoned horse and bear him down just as the poor animal had succeeded in getting upon his three sound legs.

The horse that was still attached to the sleigh plunged on bravely for some distance, with the sleigh tongue almost plowing in the snow, but he soon tired out, and dragged himself along in a startled sort of way. But it made no difference, as the wolves never pursued us again.

We got out and walked beside the sleigh to keep warm, and, as the crack was only two miles from town, it was not long before we reached our destination. A party of men went back to get a shot at the wolves, but, their hunger satisfied on the fallen horse, they made off before the hunters could reach them. The next morning the passenger took the down stage back to civilization, vowing that he had had enough of the northwest. The drunken driver was promptly discharged by the stage company.—Youth's Companion.

THE FALL CAMPAIGN.

Democrats to Avoid Silver Question and Make the Fight on State Issues.

Detroit, Aug. 10.—The state central committee of the democrats, with additions from the populist and silver republican committees, met here Tuesday afternoon to discuss a plan of campaign and to elect a secretary of the committee. Justin R. Whiting, the tri-party candidate for governor, was present and made a speech. He said he did not believe the people were satisfied with the republican financial policy, and he believed the silver state ticket and a majority of silver state legislators would be elected. Members of committee did not take such a roseate view of silver's chances, for they voted to relegate the financial problem to the congressional candidates and to fight the campaign on state issues. Pingree's alleged extravagance will be made the keynote of the canvass. His equal taxation slogan will be part of the democratic effort to oust him, for, the committee argued, the governor is in the wrong party to accomplish his reforms. Charles S. Hampton, of Petoskey, prominently mentioned for the congressional nomination in the Tenth district, was selected for secretary, and H. G. Coburn, Jr., of Howard City, was made his assistant.

PIER COLLAPSES.

Several Persons Are Badly Hurt at Forest Beach, Near Coloma.

Coloma, Aug. 9.—The large pier at Forest Beach, near Coloma, collapsed Sunday night at 9:30 o'clock, precipitating a large number of people into the water. F. R. Mack, of Chicago, a traveling salesman for the August Beck Tobacco company, was caught between the falling timbers and lies at his cottage in a dangerous condition. Mrs. Frank Wolford, of Chicago, had her foot badly crushed, and her sons, Arthur and Raymond, were thrown into the water from the gangplank of the steamer Mary L. They were rescued with great difficulty and were bruised about the bodies.

HELD THE TOWN AT BAY.

Six Robbers Loot a Bank at Richland, Securing a Very Large Sum.

SAFE IS BLOWN OPEN BY DYNAMITE.

Explosions Nearly Wreck the Building — Citizens Witness the Job, But Are Powerless to Interfere —The Robbers Escape with a Big Sum.

Richland, Aug. 6.—After blowing open the doors of the safe of the Union bank of this place with repeated explosions of dynamite Friday morning, four robbers held the people of the village at bay while two others entered the smoking ruins of the safe and coolly pocketed between $6,000 and $7,000 in cash. After securing the money the robbers walked down the main street of the little village, warning the trembling townspeople watching them behind the window blinds not to follow at pain of death, and rode away in a carriage, waving their revolvers and joking over their good luck. There was no pursuit. The townspeople were too alarmed to recover their wits for some time. By the time officers arrived from Kalamazoo all trace of the robbers had been lost. The officers are entirely at sea, and it seems doubtful if the daring desperadoes will be captured. The depositors in the bank will lose nothing, as the stockholders of the institution are all wealthy farmers, who are amply able to make good the loss.

Every Detail Planned.

The robbery was one of the most daring that ever took place in Michigan. It seemed to have been carefully and elaborately planned and every detail was apparently carried through without a hitch. Richland is a little town of 300 inhabitants nine miles northeast of Kalamazoo. Almost all of the stores of the village are ranged along one street. In the center of this town and bordering on its main street is a park and across from the park is the little one-story building of the Union bank. It stands back from the street and quite away from any house or store. The robbers must have arrived at the village shortly after one o'clock Friday morning. They rolled quietly into town on a handcar over the Detroit, Toledo & Milwaukee railroad. Arriving in the village at the point where the railroad crosses the main street, the robbers lifted off their handcar and climbed into a carriage that was waiting for them. People living along the street heard the sound of horses' hoofs galloping down the street, but thought nothing of it until a terrific explosion shook the ground in the vicinity of the bank.

Residents See the Robbery.

Alvin Barnes, who lives nearest the bank, was awakened, and, hastily dressing, hurried out doors. In front of the bank, dimly outlined in the darkness, he saw a carriage drawn up, and near the carriage four shadowy forms. A man ran towards him, leveling a pistol and shouting that if he moved he would be a dead man. Barnes stood still, as did the other frightened villagers who had been awakened from their sleep by the explosion. A little later two more men rushed out of the bank, and then came another explosion that blew out the windows in the front of the bank. The two men who had come out of the building went back and in a few minutes came out again, and a third explosion shook the little town. While the smoke was still drifting out of the door the two men who were doing the safe blowing disappeared again inside the bank and came out carrying baskets jingling with coin. They made several trips into the bank's vault, and then, after a low conference, all six of the robbers climbed into the carriage and drove away. A man on the front seat of the carriage, who had kept guard at the rear of the bank during the robbery, pointed a gun at the white faces that looked out of the windows of the houses by which the carriage passed, and several times the robbers shouted that anyone coming into the street was liable to be killed.

Wrecked by the Explosion.

It was ten minutes before anyone dared venture out and then there was no one who would volunteer to lead a pursuit. The citizens gathered around the bank, which looked like a ruin. The front windows had been shattered by the explosions and the chairs and office furniture smashed into kindling wood against the front wall. The pictures had been blown down and most of the plastering shaken from the walls and ceiling. An examination of the bank doors showed that the robbers had filled the cracks and covered the outer door with paste dynamite.

The Plunder.

Three attempts were made before the inner recess of the safe was reached. The money, between $6,000 and $7,000 in cash, was in a small steel chest, which the robbers broke open with ease. They took besides the money nearly $50,000 of bank paper. A gold watch and chain, the property of the cashier's wife, was not taken, but everything else in sight that had the least value was carefully carried away.

The sheriff and other authorities of Kalamazoo county are making every effort to capture the robbers, but the many conflicting stories told by the agitated townspeople give them but little substantial in the nature of a clew to work on.

The bank has a capital of $10,000, and was organized in 1893. N. S. Whitney is president. At a meeting of the stockholders to-day it was voted to open the doors for business next Monday. The bank carries $5,000 insurance against robbery in the Bankers' Mutual Casualty company, of Des Moines, Ia.

Held on Suspicion.

Battle Creek, Aug. 8.—Search for the robbers of the Richland bank continues. The police here made the first arrest of suspects Saturday afternoon. A man who gives his name as Frank Stearns rode into the city four hours after the robbery and said he had been held up. He reported to the police, but his story was not satisfactory. Stearns is a middle-aged mendicant, having half of both feet cut off. When he came into the city he was barefooted. He states he had no money and hence traveled early. Two men sprang out, seized his horse, and pointed a revolver at him. He said he had no money, so they did not search him, but went away. He has no idea which direction they went, although there was a good light at the time. He will be held on suspicion. The chisels found in the ruins were marked "Hoekstra," and were stolen from this city on Tuesday night, thus strengthening the theory that the robbers were from Battle Creek. The chisels, drills, sledge-hammers and revolvers were stolen from Hearn & Co., carriage manufacturers, but no money was touched. This fact has not been reported heretofore outside of police circles.

MICHIGAN WHEAT.

Extraordinary Yield of the Food Cereal Promised—Condition of Other Grains.

Lansing, Aug. 8. — The estimate is made by Secretary of State Gardner in the August crop report just issued of a crop of about 30,700,000 bushels of wheat in Michigan this year. The average yield as estimated by correspondents is 17.96 bushels per acre for the state, 18.16 bushels for the southern counties, 17.93 bushels for central counties, and 15.57 bushels for northern counties. Compared with the estimate of July 1 there is an increase of 1.22 bushels per acre in the average for the state. The estimated yield of 30,700,000 bushels is more than any actual yield, except in 1882, when it was 30,983,340 bushels, and in 1885, when it was 32,568,688 bushels. The highest average yield per acre for the state was 19.91 bushels in 1885. This year the crop has been secured in splendid condition.

The average condition of corn is 82 per cent. for the state, 85 for southern counties, 83 for central counties, and 66 for northern counties. The condition in the southern counties is practically the same as last year, but the decrease in the central and northern counties makes the average for the state five points lower.

It is estimated that oats will yield 29 bushels to the acre, or about two bushels less than the full average for Michigan. From a number of localities it is reported that oats are light in weight on account of dry weather at the time of maturing.

The hay crop is estimated at about 90 per cent. of an average crop for the state. The average conditions of meadows and pastures is 75 per cent. Cloverseed sowed this year is 64 per cent. for the state, and 56 for the southern counties, these figures indicating that the seed is largely lost.

Apples now promise about two-thirds of an average crop for the state and 57 per cent. in the southern counties. One year ago the figures were one-third and one-fourth respectively.

Peaches are estimated at seven-tenths of an average crop, potatoes promise three-fourths, and beans eight-tenths of average crops. While some small areas may not be suffering, corn, potatoes and pastures are generally in great need of moisture.

NOT RELIEVED.

Michigan Naval Reserves Still in the Service—A Few Allowed to Come Home.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 8.—It is denied in official circles that there is any friction between Secretaries Alger and Long over relieving the Michigan naval reserves. It is asserted that a portion of the Michiganders have asked through their friends to be relieved without the knowledge of the others, and as soon as their request was granted those who wished to remain in the service objected and asked permission to stay. Secretary Long had ordered their discharge and had sent the Rhode Island reserve to relieve them. Appeals were made to Secretary Alger to have the order revoked, and he called upon the president with this end in view and his request was granted.

SOLDIER IS SLAIN.

Quarrels with His Newly-Made Brother-in-Law and Is Shot Dead.

Detroit, Aug. 6.—John W. Battishill, of Ecourse, early Friday morning shot and killed James St. James, of St. Ignace, a corporal in company I, Thirty-fifth Michigan infantry, which is in camp at Island lake. St. James on Thursday married Bertha May Welsh, who is Battishill's sister. He insinuated that he wished to leave his bride at Battishill's house, so she could be watched. This led to a very mixed estrangement among all concerned, including Mr. and Mrs. Battishill. A quarrel resulted and ended in Battishill firing a shotgun charge into St. James' neck, which shortly caused his death. Battishill was arrested.

Street Railway for Sale.

Jackson, Aug. 6.—A decree was entered in the circuit court ordering the sale of the street railway by the circuit court commissioner, naming the time after August 31, to satisfy the mortgage held by the Fidelity Loan and Trust company. The amount claimed is $171,829.50. The property has been in the hands of a receiver for the past year.

REFRIGERATOR CRATES.

They Have Been Used Successfully for Shipping Strawberries from Florida to Northern Markets.

A correspondent of the Rural New-Yorker describes what he says is the favorite style of refrigerator crates now in use for shipping strawberries from Florida to the northern markets:

The improvement is in the manner of supplying the ice; the latter is in a shallow galvanized tray fitting in the top, and the full size of the crate. One old style that I saw this morning had a narrow, upright receptacle for the ice, which formed a sort of partition through the center of the crate. Another had a shallow ice-pan in the center of the top, of a size that allowed a row of berry baskets to be set around it. This, perhaps, saved space, but did not carry the fruit in so good condition. The idea in the newest pattern seems to be that the ice is distributed over the entire upper surface of the crate, thus cooling the whole evenly, and as cold air settles, it goes all down through the crate uniformly. The berries in these crates seem to arrive in fine condition. The construction is pretty well shown in the illustration. This crate measured, outside measure, about two feet two inches by two feet six inches by two feet seven inches. It held four layers of quart baskets, 16 in each layer—64 in all. As shown, a drain pipe extends from the bottom of the crate up nearly to the bottom of the pan, and a spout from the latter drains off the water from the melting ice. The ice-pan can be lifted out to get at the berries. There is a ventilator through the middle of the crate, as shown. The whole is solidly built. The cover is fastened on with bolts set stationary in the crate, projecting through the corners of the cover, and fastened with nuts. The latter cause a good deal of trouble to receivers, as they are sunken in the cover, and it is difficult to get at them with an ordinary wrench. Most of them hold five tiers—80 quarts. The artist drew a 64-quart one.

REFRIGERATOR CRATE.

HE WAS DISAPPOINTED.

The Unsatisfactory Experience of a Farmer Who Planted a Squash Crop on Muck Land.

A number of years ago I broke up a tract located just back of the horse barn. The soil is jet black, the location low and during the winter overflowed. It is too soft at any season of the year to team over, but during the summer is sufficiently dry for tillage crops. Jim Lane (a hardy, tough Irishman, who has rested from his earthly labors now for many years), and I tapped a cess pool which bordered on the meadow, and carried the night soil on handbarrows to each hill, manuring very liberally. As the season advanced the vines started off almost on the run, for with the nitrogen in the night soil added to the nitrogen of the rich meadow they had a mighty dose of it. The rank vines, with the ends of their runners lifted into the air, and their tips bent just under, looked for all the world like a tangle of green serpents straining to free themselves. The crop was a large one, of large Hubbard squashes, of a peculiar rich, light green color. With the exception of a few which grew along the borders of a ditch which ran through the meadow, that were more or less eaten by muskrats, the crop was safely housed before the first frost. The final result was anything but satisfactory, for the quality of the squash proved to be quite inferior; they were rather punky in their structure and soggy in their make up, both of which characteristics helped them on to an early and rapid decay. The two lessons I learned from that experiment were, first, to keep squashes off muck unless it had first been heavily treated to sand or gritty soil, a hundred loads to the acre, to supply the silica which is wanting in all merely vegetable deposit; second, to use mineral manures, such as unbleached wood ashes and dissolved bone, rather than those strong in nitrogen on a soil that is already rich in that element.—James J. H. Gregory, in Prairie Farmer.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Plant out plenty of small fruits.

To grow large onions from seeds sow very early.

One of the best ways of improving the farm is to set out an orchard.

Fine, well-rotted manure used as top dressing will help make the garden grow.

One of the best preventives of mildew on plants is powdered lime dusted on them.

Commence the cultivation in the garden as soon as possible after the planting is done.

Growth in the garden may be stimulated by early, thorough and continued cultivation.

Allow no fruit to grow on strawberry plants the first season. Pick off all buds and blossoms.

Plant grapes where the vines may be exposed to the rays of the sun all day. This is better than shade.—St. Louis Republic.

Another Glimpse of the Country, Customs and Surrouddings of our Cousins in the North.

St. Thomas, Aug. 9, 1898.

THE HERALD: Since writing you last considerable more of the Dominion has come under my observation and so will attempt to tell you of the things which differ from those at home as they appear to the observer who has no statistical knowledge of facts and fancies to fall back upon. Clinton is a town about the size of Tecumseh when population is considered, but when taken as an example of progressiveness is somewhere in the neighborhood of Newburg. There is no system of delivery whatever; go get your daily paper yourself or go without, order your groceries and then lug them home with you or they will still be waiting for you next week. A postmaster in Michigan who attempted to run his office as it was at Clinton would be promptly dropped into the nearest cistern as the quickest way to be rid of him. The postoffice was opened at 8 o'clock standard time and closed with equal promptness at 6 p. m. Banks open at 10 o'clock a. m. and close at 3, but do not suspend operations for dinner. The sidewalks are generous at 2 1-2 feet wide.

The average citizen is frugal, saving and industrious, little given to speculation and accumulates his wealth, if he has any, by constantly pegging away. As a man explained to me yesterday, "If a Yankee comes over here with a dollar, he at once begins to figure either to double or lose it while the Canadian who gets a dollar simply 'salts' it down." Judging from questions answered and observations along the road one would judge that wheat, oats and peas were the chief crops raised; hay some, flax some, corn very little, we having ridden for fifteen miles along one of the principal highways, through a fine farming country without seeing a solitary field of corn, the largest patch being about 40 feet square and that was ensilage corn.

As stated in my last this country had been without rain for a number of weeks. Well, Sunday the long looked for shower came, washed the dust all away and hardened the roads, so yesterday morning Mrs. B. and myself left on our wheels from Clinton enroute to this place which is 75 miles south. The day was perfect for wheeling as the sun only put in an appearance for about an hour all day, the air was cool and the land naturally inclines to the south making some excellent coasting and very few bad hills to climb. We took a moderate road pace and got a fine view of the country around.

From the top of some of the hills we could see miles ahead of us, the white stone road glistening like a satin ribbon in the distance. At 11 a. m. we had ridden 35 miles so stopped for dinner and a two hours rest; then pushed on for London where the intention was to take a train for here.

Meanwhile our first ill luck overtook us in the form of a couple of spills, the first purely such as cannot be avoided, and is charged up to a rut in the road, which succeeded in flooring (or perhaps better, grounding) us both without any personal damage. The second, however, was carelessness and "yours humbly" was responsible for allowing a tow line which we were using to double up on us; then there was a smash. We both made a business of falling hard and subsequent inventory proved that we were imminently successful. Cut fingers, sprained arms and a general idea of coming in contact with a healthy cyclone were among the mementos but generous applications of witch hazel and a determination to win out soon had the wheels moving again.

Arriving at London we found a train just about to start for this place and I proceeded to secure the excess baggage checks for our wheels. Finding antiquated specimen of Darwinian theory in charge of the baggage room, I made my wants known and at about the same time recognized in the aforesaid specimen the same old freak, who lost my baggage on a previous trip and my hopes vanished. A Yankee can do most anything quick but if he can get his baggage checked in London in half an hour, he is a hustler. While my man was manufactnring a couple of tags, the train pulled away without a word, I trundled the wheels onto the platform leaving his slowness looking after me in open mouthed wonder, no doubt thinking he had found a crazy man. We were several miles out in the country before I dared trust myself to speak. Then at the top of a high hill, we looked back and the panorama of the city drove all other thoughts away, by its beauty. The whole city was in plain sight, with its street winding in and out among the maples, its churches and big buildings standing out in bold relief and from all parts came the distant hum of busy traffic. The spot where we stood has been christened "London View" and the name could not have been more appropriate or descriptive.

Wheelman generally are not much given to complaning early in the day but we think at the end of a long run and the afternoon stepping away that it is hard sledding to have 8 or 10 miles of muddy roads to end upon. Such, however, was the case and a heavy rain had fallen a few hours before and not yet had time to settle away. Nevertheless we arrived here at 5 o'clock making the 75 miles in 8 hours and are feeling finely to-day, except where the road collided with our anatomies, with no seeming care for the eternal fitness of things.

St. Thomas has taken rapid strides in the past two years and from a dreamy listless existence has blossomed forth with brick pavements, several miles of well equipped electric street railway, and the general aspect of being something, and one would scarcely recognize the place as the same town.

To-day we rode down to Port Stanley and saw many interesting things connected with a summer resort on the great inland seas.

DON H. C. BOWEN.

Densmore-Kelley Reunion.

The eighth annual reunion of the Densmore-Kelley family occurred at the pleasant home of Allen H. Kelley in Raisin on Wednesday, Aug. 3, 1898. The day was pleasant, notwithstanding the little rain in the morning and at night. Many came by rail to Holloway, and others, to the number of twelve or fifteen, came on the morning train to Tecumseh over the D., T. & M. where they found carriages in waiting to take them to their destination.

Fortune seems to favor this crowd from Hanover and other places along the line. A bright new engine drew the jolly party into the station. On a former occasion electricity favored them. All still being good republicans or prohibitionist(?) and having a Moses to lead them account for their marked successes. Many drove in from Tipton, Adrian, Clinton, Tecumseh and Ridgeway. Still others came from Albion, Lyons, Blissfield, Toledo and northern Michigan.

About one hundred twenty were present of the relatives and invited guests and partook of a sumptuous repast. The tables were placed in the house and under a large tent out on the lawn. The gentlemen as well as the lady waiters understood their business and all were quickly served. Groups were scattered here and there in earnest conversation. Kindly greeting, cheerful conversation and now and then a merry laugh told of a happy throng who had met to talk of the joys and sorrows of the year that had passed. Many who had been accustomed to meet with us were absent. Ten deaths occurred during the past year, the largest in one year since the organization was effected. One cannot but think of the question, "Who will be missing for the same reason at the next annual gathering?"

All were then invited into the house and Eugene A. Wilson acted as president in place of William R. Wilson, of Ridgeway. Wm. Doty led in singing and Miss Eva Doty presided at the organ. After singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," prayer was offered by Rev. Luther Kenyon, of Eagle, Mich. The chairman announced that this being a year of great patriotism, the next piece of music would be "America" and it was sung with enthusiasm. The minutes of the last meeting were read by Mrs. Luetta Cummins, of Onsted. Music, "Beautiful River," followed. A spicy recitation was then given, entitled "Elder Lamb's Donation," by Miss May Kopke. A very pleasing song was sung, "Bring the Little Ones to Jesus," by Lena Kelley and Dorothy Doty. Rev. Despelder, of the Presbyterian church near Holloway, made some very interesting and instructive remarks concerning reunions. Rev. Luther Kenyon spoke very feelingly along a similar line. "He Leadeth Me" was sung by all present. Moses Densmore made a few remarks after which came the report of the committee on resolutions by Mrs. Ida Ryan, of Hanover. Abbreviated they are as follows:

WHEREAS, God in His infinite wisdom has again entered our circle and taken from us Aunt Lydia Kelley, Francis Densmore Campbell, Content Horton, daughter of Libni Kelley, George Coats, Hattie Carr, Celia D. Allen, Thatcher Lovejoy, Hannah Westgate, Henry Westgate and Ida Harding Knapp, therefore be it

RESOLVED, that we, members of the Densmore and Kelley family extend to the bereaved relatives and friends our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to our All-wise Father who doeth all things well.

RESOLVED, that a copy of these resolutions be handed to the TECUMSEH HERALD and to the Hanover Local and that a copy be sent to each family.

A business meeting was then held and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Moses Densmore.
Vice Pres.—Eugene A. Wilson.
Sec. and treas.—Luetta Cummins.
Executive Com.—Mesdames Uriah H. Densmore, Libbie Kelley and Luman Harrison.
Com. on Resolutions—Emma Kirkendall, Katie Lumbard, Mrs. H. C. Wilson.

The chairman then followed out the Methodist plan of taking a collection to defray necessary expenses and appointed Fred Kopke and Jas. Buchanan collectors. Five dollars and eighty-six cents was collected and turned over to the treasurer.

It was decided to hold the next meeting at the home of Moses Densmore, at Hanover. The time was not definitely fixed but will probably be the second Wednesday in August, 1899.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Allen H Kelley and others who assisted for the royal manner in which they had been entertained.

After singing "God be with you till we meet again," the meeting adjourned, ice cream and cake were served, the farewells were spoken and all departed to their various homes feeling well repaid for having met together. We trust that all may be spared to meet at the next gathering at Hanover in August next. W. A. E.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

There is a war tax on marriage. Young couples who contemplate tying up had better hasten the day before more revenue is imposed on the warrant of love and bliss. With flour raised in price, an added duty on tea, rent of a home pretty stiff and baby carriages a fashionable necessity, to wed nowa-days requires a fat pocket book. But don't be discouraged, boys, you will have no more ice cream to buy when the fatal words are said and the minister gives his blessing.—Dundee Reporter.

When patriotic Americans get through remembering the Maine, it would be right in line for them to turn their attention to remembering the printer. Verily war hath its hungry printers the same as peace and the fag end of the subscription ledger makes mighty poor substitute for beefsteak. White paper, postage and rent cost dollars, and those of you who have received statements of account will please bear in mind that they were not sent out for fun.—Britton Citizen.

Always keep an eye out for frauds. In some neighboring towns it is said that parties have thrown out their signs to make photos for one cent each—penny photo galleries they call them. They would not take an order less than 15 to 25 pictures, and promises to mail them when completed, some time a week later. When the time for completion came around the photographers were gone, and the pictures never came. We once witnessed two gamblers quarrel over a game of cards. Two well directed bullets ended the career of each in less time than it takes to tell it. The coroner was not needed and the county was saved the expense of trying a survivor. Everyone conceded it to be a good job. A property owner of W Huron st. remarked to the Argus, that if defective sidewalks and noxious weeds were evidence, strangers would think that there were no authorities in the city giving any attention to that street and W. The News and Herald decided to work a combination bid for council proceedings at Tecumseh. They offer to do it for $37.50 for each paper for a year. This would cost the village the enormous outlay of $75 for the proceedings and ordinances. The council thought best not to be bamboozled, and they rejected the offer, and the clerk was instructed to ask for separate bids. It will cost either paper $150 to set up the proceedings. The council may not be compelled to publish the proceedings, but each paper should adhere to the plan of publishing in both papers. And they ought to go up to $75 each and keep adding $25 a month every time they put in new bids. The proceedings of the council officially reported are not very entertaining reading, but they are always of interest to tax payers and both papers should print them. $37.50 would not pay for the proof reading at five cents an hour—Adrian Press.

The Maccabee Week Attraction at the New Croswell.

Manager Hardy, of the opera house, has been especially fortunate in securing as his Maccabee week attraction, Geo. H. Broadhurst's new farce "Why Smith Left Home." This large organization, composed of the highest salaried farceurs in the profession, stops at Adrian for three nights enroute from New York City to Chicago. Their nights in Adrian are Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Aug. 17, 18 and 19. In "Why Smith Left Home" Mr. Broadhurst is said to have duplicated the success of "What Happened to Jones," "The Wrong Mr. Wright" and "The Speculator." Seats may be secured beginning Saturday, Aug. 13th, at Sheldon's jewelry store.

GOES TO PRISON ALONE.

Ohio Man Gets a Year's Sentence for a Technical Defalcation.

The warden of the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus was astonished to find a man at his door recently who carried in his hand his commitment papers ordering a year's imprisonment, reports the New York World. This was the first time he had ever seen a prisoner unaccompanied by an officer voluntarily come and say he was ready to begin his term. The man was Ingle W. Rush, aged 45, born and raised in Logan county, O.

By hard work and strict economy he and his faithful wife, assisted by the oldest of their eight children, had gathered together money, lands, cattle, utensils and the like worth $20,000. He had become a man of standing in the community and for several years had served as treasurer of Stokes township. By reason of some investments he made which did not realize as quickly as had been expected Rush was called upon by the board of education to turn over $4,700 of school funds. He could not do it, so he and his wife, who was not on his bond nor in any way liable, turned over all their possessions to his bondsmen to protect them in raising the sum demanded. The shortage became known before the money could be raised and the public clamor was only satisfied by Rush's indictment by the grand jury upon a charge of defalcation. He made no defense. While the crime was only technical he could not avoid punishment. It was said by members of the grand jury and Judge Duncan, who sentenced Rush to a year in the penitentiary, that it was one of the saddest duties they ever had to perform.

Five Negroes Lynched in Arkansas, Two of Them Women, for the Crime of Murder.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 10.—Five negroes are hanging from the limbs of trees near the railroad track and the widow of John T. Orr is dead in her cell. This is the tragic denoument of the assassination of John T. Orr, a wealthy merchant at Clarendon, a few nights ago. The wife died from a dose of poison, self-administered, while the negroes, her associates in crime, were strung up by a mob of citizens.

The lynched are: Manse Castle, Dennis Ricord, Rilla Weaver, Susie Jacobs, and Will Saunders.

THE WAR IS ENDED

Proclamation by the President Ordering a Cessation of Hostilities.

All Military and Naval Commanders Are Notified to Cease Their Operations.

The Blockade of Cuban and Puerto Rican Harbors Is Ordered Raised at Once.

Brief Resume of the Provisions of the Protocol Between United States and Spain.

Full Text of the Orders Sent to the American Generals and Admirals.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The president has issued the following proclamation:

"By the President of the United States of America—A Proclamation: Whereas, By a protocol concluded and signed August 12, 1898, by William R. Day, secretary of state of the United States, and his excellency Jules Cambon, ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the republic of France at Washington, respectively representing for this purpose the governments of the United States and the government of Spain, the United States and Spain have formally agreed upon the terms on which negotiations for the establishment of peace between the two countries shall be undertaken, and

"Whereas, It is in said protocol agreed that upon its conclusion and signature hostilities between the two countries shall be suspended, and that notice to that effect shall be given as soon as possible by each government to the commanders of its military and naval forces;

"Now, therefore, I, William McKinley, president of the United States, do, in accordance with the stipulation of the protocol, declare and proclaim on the part of the United States a suspension of hostilities, and do hereby command that orders be immediately given through the proper channels to the commanders of the military and naval forces of the United States to abstain from all acts inconsistent with this proclamation.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the city of Washington, this 12th day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand, eight hundred and ninety-eight, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-third.

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

"By the President:

"WILLIAM R. DAY, Secretary of State."

A copy of the proclamation has been cabled to our army and navy commanders. Spain will cable her commanders like instructions.

The Protocol.

The protocol provides:

1. That Spain will relinquish all claim of sovereignty over and title to Cuba.

2. That Puerto Rico and other Spanish islands in the West Indies and an island in the Ladrones, to be selected by the United Sta s, shall be ceded to the latter.

3. That the United States will occupy and hold the city, bay and harbor of Manila pending the conclusion of a treaty of peace, which shall determine the control, disposition and government of the Philippines.

4. That Cuba, Puerto Rico and other Spanish islands in the West Indies shall be immediately evacuated and that commissioners, to be appointed within ten days, shall within 30 days from the signing of the protocol meet at Havana and San Juan, respectively, to arrange and execute the details of the evacuation.

5. That the United States and Spain will each appoint not more than five commissioners to negotiate and conclude a treaty of peace. The commissioners are to meet at Paris not later than the 1st of October.

6. On the signing of the protocol hostilities will be suspended and notice to that effect will be given as soon as possible by each government to the commanders of its military and naval forces.

The above is the official statement of the protocol's contents as prepared and given to the press by Secretary Day. The protocol was signed at 4:23 p. m. by Secretary of State Day, representing the United States, and M. Cambon, the French ambassador, representing the Spanish government.

Ordered to Cease Hostilities.

As soon as the peace protocol was signed the president sent for Secretaries Alger and Long and Gen. Corbin, and by his direction orders to cease hostilities forthwith were sent to Gens. Miles, Merritt and Shafter, to Admirals Dewey and Sampson, and military commanders generally.

The orders to Gen. Merritt to suspend were as follows:

"Adjutant General's Office, Washington, Aug. 12, 1898.—Merritt, Manila: The president directs all military operations against the enemy be suspended. Peace negotiations are nearing completion, a protocol having just been signed by representatives of the two countries. You will inform the commanders of the Spanish forces in the Philippines of these instructions. Further orders will follow. Acknowledge receipt.

"By order of the secretary of war:

"H. C. CORBIN, Adjutant General."

The orders sent to Gen. Miles and Gen. Shafter were identical with the above save as to names. As the order states, further instructions will be sent to each general. Gen. Merritt will be directed to confer with the Spanish commandant at Manila to carry out the terms of the protocol, and to occupy Manila immediately. Gen. Miles will put himself in communication with the chief authority in Puerto Rico for the purpose of having Spanish forces turn over San Juan and other points to him preparatory to evacuation. Owing to conditions in Cuba, the orders to Gen. Shafter to be sent hereafter will be much different than those to other generals.

Naval Commanders Notified.

In accordance with the proclamation issued by the president suspending hostilities, orders were issued to the naval commanders at the several stations in the United States, Cuba and the Philippines carrying into effect the directions of the proclamation. The navy department not only transmitted the president's proclamation in full to the several commanders in chief, but also directions as to the disposition of their vessels. The following orders are in that sense self-explanatory:

"Navy Department, Washington, Aug. 12.—Sampson, Santiago: Suspend all hostilities. Blockade of Cuba and Puerto Rico is raised. Howell ordered to assemble vessels at Key West. Proceed with New York, Brooklyn, Indiana, Oregon, Iowa and Massachusetts to Tompkinsville. Place monitors in safe harbor in Puerto Rico. Watson transfers his flag to Newark and will remain at Guantanamo. Assemble all cruisers in safe harbors. Order marines north in Resolute.

(Signed) ALLEN, Acting Secretary."

"Navy Department, Washington, Aug. 12.—Remey, Key West: In accordance with the president's proclamation telegraphed you, suspend immediately all hostilities. Commence withdrawal of vessels from blockade. Order blockading vessels in Cuban waters to assemble at Key West.

(Signed) ALLEN, Acting Secretary."

The notification to Admiral Dewey was not made public, but Assistant Secretary Allen stated that besides being put in possession of the president's proclamation, he was ordered to cease hostilities and raise the blockade of Manila.

CUBANS MUST OBEY.

Defiant Insurgents Notified That They Must Submit to the Policy Mapped Out.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The war department late Tuesday afternoon posted the following reply to an inquiry from Maj. Gen. Lawton, commanding the department of Santiago, for instructions as to the policy to be observed toward the Cubans that are within his military department:

"Commanding General, Department of Santiago, Santiago de Cuba: Replying to your message for instructions, the president directs that you be informed that the United States is responsible for peace and must maintain order in the territory surrendered and in your department, and must protect all persons and their property within said jurisdiction. Interference from any quarter will not be permitted. The Cuban insurgents should be treated justly and liberally, but they, with all others, must recognize the military occupation and authority of the United States and the cessation of hostilities proclaimed by this government. You should see the insurgent leaders and so advise them.

"By order of the secretary of war.

(Signed) "H. C. CORBIN,
"Adjutant General."

The war department did not make public the dispatch from Gen. Lawton relative to the Cubans in Santiago, but the order which Gen. Corbin sent to Gen. Lawton indicates something of its nature. Gen. Lawton reports that the Cubans are encamped about the city, and do not seem disposed to accept the conditions imposed by the armistice, and some troubles have occurred. Secretary Alger, in speaking of the matter, said that it might as well be fully understood that the United States would control the surrendered territory, and that it would manage the affairs of that territory. Those who remained within the jurisdiction would have to obey the laws and officers of the United States, as Gen. Lawton was informed.

SHOT DEAD.

State Senator Wall, of Illinois, Murdered at Stanton, Ill., by Otto Mattias.

Staunton, Ill., Aug. 17.—State Senator W. H. Wall was shot and instantly killed here Tuesday evening by Otto Mattias, who escaped after the murder. Senator Wall discovered a horse belonging to August Schadlich in his field and went out to capture it and take it home. While he was running after the animal Mrs. Schadlich came out into the field and a quarrel started between the two. The quarrel was of only a few minutes' duration, when the woman returned hurriedly to the house, where Mattias, who boards with the Schadlichs, was standing. The woman came out of the house with a shotgun, which she handed to Mattias. What she said to him is not known, but he raised the gun to his shoulder and fired, the charge of shot entering the back of Wall's head, producing instant death. Mattias at once left the house, and has not yet been captured. The sheriff is on his track with bloodhounds, and it is believed that he will be captured. Mrs. Schadlich was arrested.

Senator Wall had served several terms in the state senate, and was one of the leading democrats of the state. He is well known among politicians all over Illinois. He was senior member of the banking firm of Wall & Panhorst, of this city.

FINANCES OF MICHIGAN

A Condensation of the Annual Report of State Treasurer Steel, Just Made.

THE TREASURY IS IN GOOD CONDITION.

Issue of War Bonds Makes the Report Show an Increase in the Bonded Indebtedness for the First Time in Thirty-Two Years—Bonds Are Easily Placed.

Lansing, Aug. 15.—The annual report of State Treasurer Steel for the year ending June 30, 1898, which was submitted to Gov. Pingree Saturday, shows for the first time in 32 years an increase in the bonded indebtedness of the state. Since May 1 Michigan has sold $400,000 of war bonds. A portion of this loan, aggregating $208,700, dated May 2, 1898, was issued bearing interest at the rate of three and one-half per cent., while the interest on the balance, dated July 1, 1898, is three per cent., interest being payable semi-annually in each case. The first issue was sold at a time when the bonds of the general government were being sold in the open market at a price which would net the investor three and one-eighth per cent., yet the premium received on this made the net cost in interest to the state about three and one-fourth per cent. For this first issue of $208,700 subscriptions aggregating $944,000 were received from citizens of Michigan. The second series of bonds were offered for sale at par, notwithstanding the fact that the general government was at the same time offering for sale an issue of $200,000,000 bearing the same rate of interest. In less than ten days subscriptions for more than seven times the amount offered were received, none being from without the state. All these bonds are payable May 1, 1908, and may be paid at the pleasure of the state on May 1, 1903.

In contrast with this satisfactory condition, Treasurer Steel mentions the fact that the last previous offering of bonds by this state was in 1866, when tenders were asked for an issue of $1,000,000 of seven per cent., 25-year bonds. The total bids received aggregated only $41,000, for which there was offered a total of $37,375, or an average rate of $91.16 for each $100 bond. The outstanding bonds of the state now consist of the $400,000 of war loan bonds of 1898 above mentioned and $19,000 of past due non-interest bearing part paid $5,000,000 loan bonds, adjustable at $10,992. The state, however, is annually paying interest on trust funds aggregating $5,910,104, divided as follows: Agricultural college fund, $625,790; normal school fund, $66,125; primary school fund, seven per cent., $3,861,018; primary school fund, five per cent., $833,612; university funds, $532,556.

The total receipts of the state for the last fiscal year were $5,122,859.36 and the total disbursements $4,690,534. The balance in the state treasury at the close of the year was $1,216,212, as compared with $783,888 at the close of the previous year.

Two Long Bridges.

Muskegon, Aug. 15. — The board of county road commissioners has let the contract for what is believed to be the longest bridge in western Michigan. It will be 550 feet long and will consist of 35 16-foot spans. It will be placed over the Cedar creek and Indian channels on the new dump road to North Muskegon, connecting Muskegon with the county roads to Holton and Whitehall. Another bridge will be 200 feet long with 16-foot spans, and one 40-foot span for running logs.

Bank Robbers Caught.

Battle Creek, Aug. 16. — Arrests in Richland of great importance have been made. Recently William Kulp was arrested and through him Sheriff Stone learned of Joseph Gregory, who was found in Jackson. Search of his house revealed a combination lock taken off the safe of the Richland bank. Officers also found silk and satins hidden in a bed tick, which proved to have been stolen from a dry goods house six months ago.

Must Vouch for Mediums.

Lansing, Aug. 17.—At the annual meeting of the Michigan State Spiritual association Tuesday a decided stand was taken against pretended mediums who bring spiritualism into disrepute. No medium will hereafter be recognized, unless vouched for by some state association. D. P. Dewey, of Grand Blanc, was elected president and May F. Ayres, of Lansing, secretary.

Killed by Wrestling.

Grand Haven, Aug. 13. — Thursday afternoon a boy named Van Toevering, while wrestling in a friendly bout with another boy at the glass factory, was thrown on his head and fatally hurt. He was unconscious for awhile and died later.

Holland and the Jews on our Side.

Sympathy for our side in our war with Spain comes from two sources, which the reader of history will find particularly interesting. A Philadelphia newspaper, which is quoted by Dr. William Elliot Griffis, prints a letter from a correspondent in Rotterdam, who says that, while most of Continental Europe is inclined to sympathize with Spain, Holland stands out for the Cubans. It is apparent, from the leanings of the Dutch newspupers, that Holland has not yet forgotten Alva.

An analogous report comes from Jerusalem in the form of a copy of a prayer offered at Jerusalem on June 17, at a service in behalf of the American arms, held before a large congregation of Jews in the largest synagogue in the city. "Let Thy face shine, O God," runs this prayer, on the young men and their leaders who risk their lives for a just cause to save the oppressed from their oppressors. But on their adversaries show Thy might. Avenge the blood of Thy servants that has been shed by a cruel nation, and crush Thine enemies for aye."—Harper's Weekly.

KNOWING HOW PAYS.

The Moral of This Old, Old Anecdote Will Save a Heap of Trouble and a Pile of Money.

Something had gone wrong with some simple part of a stationary engine, and the stoker could not fix it. After spending a day or two on it, he was forced to ask the aid of a more competent workman. He failed also, and some one suggested the employment of a local celebrity, a sort of tinker at any mechanical job. There is generally one in every locality. He gave two or three raps with his hammer and touched up a rod or two, when the pounding or whatever ailed the machine ceased. When asked to make out his bill, it read as follows:

Fixing engine——— .50
Knowing how———10.00
$10.50

This anecdote clearly demonstrates that it pays to know how. Engineer J. J. Jeffries of the Royal Cycle Works at Marshall, Mich., residing in that city, at No. 141 S. Marshall street, tells in the following of his experience with the little conqueror; it will pay you to know how he got rid of a troublesome companion, he says: "My kidneys troubled me more or less for years and finally became so bad that I was compelled to give up locomotive engineering on account of the jarring of the rain, and seek employment as a stationary engineer. When the attacts of kidney complaint occurred I could not rest or lie comfortably in any position and often in the mornings after a restless night I was more tired and worn out than when I went to bed. When the attacks were at their height I was unable to stoop or lift anything and despite the use of every remedy that came to my notice, preparations recommended to me by my acquaintances, numerous plasters of all kinds worn day and night, I was unsuccessful in procuring anything to help me until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. The first box helped me. I steadily improved while taking the second and I stopped the treatment when I had finished the third as I considered there was no more necessity for continuing the remedy."

"Saved Her Life."

MRS. JOHN WALLET, of Jefferson, Wis., than whom none is more highly esteemed or widely known, writes. "In 1890 I had a severe attack of LaGrippe and at the end of four months, in spite of all physicians, friends and good nursing could do, my lungs heart and nervous system were so completely wrecked, my life was despaired of, my friends giving me up. I could only sleep by the use of opiates. My lungs and heart pained me terribly and my cough was most aggravating. I could not lie in one position but a short time and not on my left side at all. My husband brought me Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Cure and I began taking them. When I had taken a half bottle of each I was much better and continuing persistently I took about a dozen bottles and was completely restored to health to the surprise of all."

Dr. Miles' Remedies are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee, first bottle benefits or money refunded. Book on diseases of the heart and nerves free. Address,

CUBA'S GOVERNMENT.

Its Form Will, of Course, Be Dictated by This Country.

Grave Problems Which Must Be Solved in the Near Future by President McKinley and the Congress.

NOW that this republic has passed through an epoch of war our greatest statesmen are studying the new problems before our people, for we are entering an epoch of peace for which we seem to be unprepared.

To one of his cabinet ministers President McKinley has said: "We were wholly unprepared for war, and we are as wholly unprepared for peace. The conditions which confront us are of the most grave portent."

The meaning of this solemn view of the situation is that the giant republic of the western hemisphere is obliged, by the course of events, to take its place among the foremost nations of the world; and our statesmen must grapple with the duty of governing people outside of our oiriginal borders, and entirely unlike our own people by birth, traditions and aspirations.

Five of our ablest statesmen are now in the territory of Hawaii, 2,100 miles from San Francisco, and they are charged with the duty of investigating the conditions there, the capabilities of the people for self-government, the educational condition and facilities of the people; and those statesmen will make a report with recommendations for the formation of a government suitable to our new territorial possession.

Another commission will be appointed to make similar examination and investigation concerning the best government to be given to the long-misgoverned people of Puerto Rico. The kind of government which may be suitable to Hawaii may be entirely unsuitable for the people of Puerto Rico. Wisdom, prudence, sagacity, Christian charity and patriotic purpose must be the controlling impulses of the men upon whom these responsibilities primarily devolve. Ultimately these problems must be solved by the president and by the congress. The recommendations of our commissioners, however, will have great influence in directing the channels in which the thoughts of other statesmen must flow.

Very recently in this city a popular preacher unintentionally and unwittingly made many enemies for himself by declaring himself to be earnestly opposed to sending money to foreign missions. He said: "God gave to the Jews a religion which was suited to their peculiar mental caliber. He gave a different form of religion to the Arabians, Persians, Hindoos and Chinese. These religions are suitable to those classes of intellect. It will be many centuries before the religion of Christ envelops the world; because it takes many centuries for the development of the mighty plans of the Almighty. Therefore I am in favor of spending our missionary money upon the heathen in our own country; and when our country is evangelized the religion of the Cross will go beyond the seas."

GEN. LEONARD WOOD.
(Military Governor of the City of Santiago.)

Whether this theory is right or wrong, the reader will determine. The sentiment is quoted to illustrate the problem which confronts this government and this people. Our strong men realize the great differences in races, and the fact that arguments will convince one class of people, while nothing but force will convince another class. And this is true where the races seem to be equally intelligent and well informed.

For example, the differences which have existed between Great Britain and this country have been adjusted by statesmen, solely by the application of logical argument to existing facts. But argument was wasted on Spain, and nothing but force, nothing but the terrible punishment of war could bring that people to a realization of the difference between humanity and barbarity in the treatment of an innocent and suffering people.

One of the members of the cabinet recently told the writer that the subject before the cabinet meetings during the past two weeks has been what kind of government to give to the people who are dependent upon us for government. These responsibilities have come upon us as part of a providential plan and purpose. The people and the government of the United States did not originally seek the expansion of our boundaries. Circumstances compelled us to go to the relief of the tortured, starved Cubans; and in doing so there has been committed to our care the grave responsibilities thus outlined.

The people of Hawaii and the people of Puerto Rico come into our national family with rejoicings. They give glad welcome to our flag, and with the glee of children they come into our home. We receive them with manifestations of pleasure. We must treat them with kindness and consideration, and must realize that they must have time to become accustomed to new laws and to the honest administration of those laws.

The people of the Philippines, so many of them as shall become a part of our country, are savages, guided and directed by men of savage instincts. The government at Washington realizes at the outset that a large standing army must be maintained at Manila because those people understand nothing but the arguments of force.

The people of Cuba are to be given a stable government of their own, if they are capable of self-government. But they are also of a class capable of first realizing only the argument of force, and it is presumed that there must be a standing army of not less than 100,000 soldiers of the United States maintained on the island of Cuba for an indefinite length of time.

LIEUT. GEN. MACIAS.
(The Last Spanish Captain General of Puerto Rico.)

The Cuban insurgents fought for independence. They did not fight alone for relief from Spanish oppression. They have established a form of government and call it a republic. But the plain people are ignorant, illiterate and without anything like an adequate knowledge of the value of the ballot. They have in their midst a number of shrewd men who have formed for them a government on paper, but it is not a stable government. To permit those Cuban political leaders to at once obtain control of the island would be to transfer the ignorant masses from Spanish rapacity to the rapacity of Cuban leaders who have Spanish blood in their veins, and who would as mercilessly oppress them, all the while deluding them with the belief that they were governing themselves.

It was because President McKinley foresaw the danger of this probable condition that he exerted his powerful influence and succeeded in preventing the congress from recognizing the independence of the Cuban republic. Since our army and navy have subdued the Spanish forces in eastern Cuba, if there had been any actual government in existence, some manifestations of such government would have been made. But there is no capital, no presidential headquarters, no congress, no department of state; in fact, nothing to indicate that the Cuban republic ever had any existence.

Gen. Gomez, Gen. Garcia and the others who have armed followers are likely to cause a great deal of trouble for our country in the efforts which will soon be made to give a stable government to the Cuban people. They have fought for spoils, for their own enrichment. They will be satisfied with nothing else. They have already so indicated. Gen. Garcia, with his rag-tag and bob-tail army left Santiago in high indignation because Gen. Shafter would not permit the pillage of Santiago.

It is the opinion of our best and strongest statesmen that good government can be given to Hawaii and Puerto Rico with but little show of armed force. Those peoples do not require the argument of force. They are tractable, and desire to do right. At the outset there must be force used at Manila; probably for at least a full generation. But ripe statesmanship will be required to deal with the solution of the problem of what will be the best government for each of these possessions.

The great and grave and vexed problem, however, confronts us in Cuba. Senor Bartolome Masso, the head of the so-called Cuban republic, has written a formal letter to President McKinley, claiming the right of immediate self-government for the Cubans. His letter is interesting, well written, argumentative, plausible and well calculated to create a public impression in favor of his proposition. He eulogizes the Cuban people for their "courage, intelligence, humane aspirations and lofty patriotism."

But beside that letter our statesmen will place the reports of Gen. Shafter and his general officers, showing that the intelligence of the Cuban insurgents amounts to but little more than the intelligence of the Sioux Indians; their "humane aspirations" constitute a desire to machete Spanish prisoners, and their lofty patriotism was displayed in running away from Pando's army and in refusing to carry litters for our wounded soldiers.

The Cuban republic will wait awhile. The form of government will be dictated by this country. As a result of this war the United States is responsible before the nations of the world for the protection of the Cubans from their own inherent enemies as well as from foreign aggressors; and the good faith of the United States stands pledged to give to Cuba a stable government. This problem cannot be solved at once. The situation is grave, and its gravity is fully realized in the capital of this republic.

THE MAJOR'S EXPERIENCE

How He Spent the Greater Part of His Life—His Time When His Life was in Danger.

From the Free Press, Detroit, Mich.

One of the staunchest supporters of the deep-water way from the Great Lakes to the ocean is Maj. A. C. Bishop, of 715 Third Ave., Detroit, Mich.

MAJOR A. C. BISHOP.

Maj. Bishop has had unusual experience in that line of work and probably few are so well qualified to speak intelligently of it as he. For the greater part of his life he has been engaged in water ways, and is one of the oldest and best known civil engineers north of the Ohio river.

Commencing in 1850, he was for a number of years an assistant engineer for the Hudson River Railroad, and later held like positions with the Genesee Valley Canal, New York, and also the Des Moines River Improvement and Railroad Co.

He has been superintendent of large mining operations and when the State Reformatory at Elmira, N. Y., was built, he was superintendent and engineer in charge of the construction.

Major Bishop was attached to the staff of Brigadier General Chamberlin, of the National Guard of New York, with the rank of Major from 1857 to 1865.

He has been located in Detroit since 1865 and has a large acquaintance among the business men and citizens of this city.

Two years ago, for the first time, Major Bishop was in the hospital. For two months he had the best of medical attendance but when he was discharged he was not like the Major Bishop of old.

When asked regarding his health, he said: "When I had my last spell of sickness and came out of the hospital I was a mere sight, I could not gain my strength, and could not walk over a block for several weeks.

"I noticed some articles in the newspapers regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which convinced me that they were worth trying and bought two boxes. I did not take them for my complexion but for strength. After using them I felt better and know they did me worlds of good. I am pleased to recommend them to invalids who need a tonic or to build up a shattered constitution. "A. C. BISHOP."

Subscribed and sworn to before me this eighth day of January, 1898.

ROBERT E. HULL, JR., Notary Public.

The pure, powerful vegetable ingredients in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People supply the antidote for poisonous matter in the blood and add those elements needed to build up body and brains. Many diseases long supposed by the medical profession to be incurable have succumbed to the potent influence of these pills. They can be taken by young or old, being harmless in their nature, but powerful in eliminating disease.

Hush money usually speaks for both parties in the transaction.

The string a woman ties around her husband's finger is a forget-me-not.

By Absorption.

Catarrhal sufferers should remember that Ely's Cream Balm is the only catarrh remedy which is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the diseased membrane. It does not dry up the secretions, but changes them to a limpid and odorless condition, and finally to a natural and healthy character. The balm can be found at any drug store, or by sending 50 cents to Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York, it will be mailed. Full directions with each package. Cream Balm opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays inflamation, thereby stopping pain in the head, heals and protects the membrane and restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils.

To Cure Stomach Trouble Has Not Failed.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure & Nerve Restorer is not a cure-all, but is intended for the treatment of STOMACH and NERVE troubles only. A great many preparations have been advertised, for years, for the special treatment of various diseases as foreign to the stomach as can possibly be, that are now being advertised for the special treatment of dyspepsia, simply because of the prevalence of this peculiar malady. When as a matter of fact, a preparation for the treatment of stomach diseases must necessarily be prepared for those and nothing else.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer is the result of patient study and experience by one fully equipped for the task, as is being clearly demonstrated by the many testimonials where marvelous cures have and are being produced daily in chronic and complicated cases that have baffled the knowledge of local physicians, besides the various remedies so highly advertised for the treatment of stomach diseases.

Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer is a combined method treatment in tablet form, which does not become stale and worthless with age, as do liquid preparations. These tablets are pleasant to take, can easily be carried in the pocket to be used when necessary, and can be taken by children and invalids with perfect impunity.

A valuable book on stomach and nerve troubles, their symptoms and cure, can be had free at any place where this preparation is sold. Fifty cents invested in Drake's Dyspepsia Cure and Nerve Restorer will substantiate all that is claimed for it. For sale by

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

Considerable interest is just at present attached to the word protocol, pronounced pro-to-col, accent on the first syllable, from its use in peace negotiations between this country and Spain. It is derived from two Greek words protos meaning first and kolla, glue and originally referred to a small sheet which was pasted on the head of a document giving a synopsis of what followed. As now used in diplomatic parlance it is the first draught or original copy of a dispatch, treaty or other instrument; the expanded form of which will appear later.

LITERARY NOTES

The cartoons reproduced in the August Review of Reviews from Spanish journals serve to indicate the density of popular ignorance in Spain as to the facts of the present war. For instance, one cartoon shows Cervera's fleet as successfully slipping past Samson at Santiago; another represents Cervera as having Schley bottled up; while in a third Admiral Dewey figures as a rat caught in Spain's Philippine trap.

"Prospecting the Klondike," and "Who Discovered the Klondike?" are the titles of two richly illustrated articles that will appear shortly in Harper's Weekly. They are written by Tappan Adney, the Weekly's special correspondent, who has been in the gold regions for the past year and has therefore ample opportunity to study his subject.

An unusual number of short stories with a war flavor will be found in Harper's Round Table for September. The opening one, "How the Powder-Boy Gave us Courage," is by Lieutenant-Commander Albion V. Wadhams, U. S. N. Others are, "An Episode of the War of 1870," by H. W. Fischer, and the "The Boy is Father to the Man," an interesting account of Admiral Dewey as a Boy, by S. A. D. Cox. The issue also contains: "The Latest Explorer of Asia" an account of Dr. Sven Hedin's perilous trip through the deserts of Central Asia.

Among the interesting articles announced for early publication in Harper's Bazar may be mentioned "Leading Feminine Educators," by Carolyn Halsted, an illustrated paper giving portraits and sketches of the deans and presidents of the foremost women's colleges in the United States; a short story by Marion Harland; and "Every-Day Talks with Mothers," by Margaret E. Sangster. The usual letters and departments are continued including Club Women and Club Work, by Margaret Hamilton Welch.

The September number of Harper's Magazine will be unusually cosmopolitan in character. The timely subject of the outcome of the war with Spain will be treated in three important articles: The Future Policy of the United States, by James Bryce; The United States in Foreign Military Expeditions, by Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart; and The New Fiscal Policy of the United States, by Worthington C. Ford. England receives attention in Mr. Smalley's second paper on Gladstone; and in Social Life in the British Army, illustrated by R. Caton Woodville. The Romance of a Mad King is a vivid sketch of the life of King Louis II, of Bavaria; Sidney Whitman, F. R. G. S., writes of The Turk at Home; and Days in the Artic are notes from the journal of Frederick G. Jackson.

Well, there are worse fellows in the world than Willard and some of them have been sent to congress. One thing is certain, they would know he was there and what was his opinion.—Blissfield Advance.

For years I have been a sufferer from chronic constipation and dyspepsia. I tried different doctors and all the remedies I could hear of, but nothing helped me and I grew worse. A lady recommended Carter's Cascara Cordial to me, and I decided to try it, and am very thankful that I did, for it completely cured me; my friends were astonished, for they thought I would never be any better. I take great pleasure in recommending it, for I know of others whom it has helped as well as myself.

The war with Spain is over, and with only one regret that our own soldiers were not properly cared for. It is the duty of every honest American to endeavor to find out who is to blame for such negligence and properly punish the offenders.

Letter from Chickamauga.

Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park Ga.
Co. C, 31st Mich. Aug. 16, 1898.

Homer Palmer, one of the most honorable and upright members of Co. C, died in the regimental hospital at six o'clock Monday morning. For several days he had been very ill with typhoid fever and the fatal termination was not unexpected. Although it is our business to die, Palmer's death has stirred the feelings of the company to the depths. One of the largest, strongest and most healthy men when he enlisted three months ago, yet he was the first to succumb to disease. Never having been sick he did not recognize the serious character of his trouble till too late. Even then it was with much reluctance that he gave up and went to the hospital. Death is depressing at any time, but is especially dreadful when far away from home and from the ministering grace of female hands.

The members of Co. C. were unremitting in their attentions but were unable to successfully combat the disease.

This is the first time that death has come to our company and every man feels a sense of personal loss. Private Palmer was every inch a soldier. He was 22 years of age, stood 6 feet 2 inches in height and was as straight as an arrow. He performed his duties quietly and with dignity, commanding the respect of officers and men. He was one of the first to offer his services when the war commenced and ardently desired service at the front. He bore the disappointment of camp life uncomplainingly and gave up his life for his country as bravely and as truly as if he fell before Santiago. All the victories are not won in the field nor should all the honor go to those who have bled. Co. C. will always cherish the memory of our departed brother. His life was an inspiration to his comrades and his death leaves a vacancy that can't be filled. In response to a telegram, Mr. Samuel Palmer, father of the deceased, arrived from Manchester, Mich., in time to see his boy alive.

Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved father as he journeys northward with his dead son and we mingle our tears with those of the mother and sisters who are awaiting the return of their soldier boy.

The long expected and anxiously awaited paymaster showed up in camp Saturday and proceeded to make the boys temporarily happy by the distribution of fifteen sixties. Everybody in the regiment was broke. Only a few had money enough to buy a postage stamp.

The 31st will soon leave Camp Thomas forever. The present arrangement is to send us to Johnson City, Tenn., where we will go into camp. The second division will be at Johnson City and the third goes to Lexington, Ky. Most of us would rather go to Kentucky, but we are so glad to get away that we have no kick coming. The date of our departure is not yet announced.

Tomorrow occurs the greatest military parade since Gen. Sherman reviewed the 50,000 troops in Washington at the close of the Civil War. There will be 48,000 men in line and there will probably be as many spectators. The business houses in Chattanooga will be closed and the whole city will visit the park en masse. Gen. Breckinridge, assisted by several officers of high rank, will occupy the reviewing stand and the scene will be one of great magnificence.

Yours truly,
FRANK C. DUDLEY.

Ann Arbor will have a lady assistant postmaster in the person of Mrs. Geo. H. Pond vice W. W. Watts resigned.

Miss Harriet Hogaboam, daughter of and housekeeper for J. C. Hogaboam, was stricken with paralysis Sunday morning and cannot live. The circumstances are peculiarly sad, as she is the sole help of her aged parents. In addition to the shock she also suffered a fracture of the right hip. The shock affected both arms and the organs of speech. She is sixty six years of age. —Hudson Gazette.

This is according to the Enterprise: Manchester has the reputation of having the best sidewalks of any town in the country. Travelling men say that we have more cement walks than any town they know of. We have very good sewers and could have the finest system known if we would extend it. But we need water works. Every man who owns property—resident at least, says so. We could put in a good system of water works very cheap. We could get a supply from springs or flowing wells. There is no question about water, what we want are pipes and force to push it along.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

In a village on the line of the D. & L. N. railway, and considerable less than a hundred miles from this place is a hustling firm composed of five members of the genius gamin, headed by a lank and wiry damsel of some sixteen summers, the remainder of the aggregation being of the male persuasion. Every train passing this village is boarded by the enterprising youngsters carrying pop corn, lemonade, daily papers and the like, with which they propose to capture the nimble nickle of unwary travelers. Business has proven good but like many another firm the members have begun to feel their independence and terse comments on those who might otherwise be customers is killing trade while they entertain the smoking car passengers with a voluble flow of street slang. Recently a young blood who was on the train and had been particularly conspicuous, was the victim of a well merited retort given him by the girl, much to the amusement of the other passengers. "Fresh buttered popcorn" was her call as she entered the car. "But I want mine salted" said his youthship. "Yes you need a barrel in yours" came the reply, while an audible convulsion went through the car and our young man only came to life three stations further up the pike and then only for a gasping breath.

As one of our jovial conductors was passing through his train the other day with his polite "tickets please," a passenger tendered him a bill of the saw buck denomination as fare. Our friend being a little shy of change that morning said so and went on through the cars to find some one who could help him out. Five minutes passes and our passenger looked worried, so calling the brakeman he said confidentially "I gave that conductor a $10 bill and he hasn't come back." The brakeman looked as surprised as he could and stated in all probability the conductor had jumped off and taken to the woods, but he'd see. The passenger had become very uneasy when the conductor suddenly appeared, gravely handed over the change and receipt and blandly inquired, "Did you think I'd jumped off?" "O no" was the reply with the most becoming hypocricy, "I had entirely forgotten the fact that you had my bill." And the recording angel calmly tore out the leaf, wadded it up into a ball and threw it at the shade of the printer's cat.

A pruning knife is to be applied to the passenger service of the Vanderbilt lines. The traffic managers of all the lines controlled by the Vanderbilts returned from the recent meeting of the presidents, with instructions to abolish all trains that do not pay expenses. Economy is to be the watch word, and every train is to be individually an investment, not according to what the train is expected to earn in the future but what it is netting at present. This policy, it is said, if followed closely, will result in taking off quite a number of trains on the Lake Shore.

The Nickel Plate will suffer the most, as it has recently put on some trains with a view to building up its passenger traffic. Some of these trains, it is said, are not paying expenses as is always the case with a train until it is fully established. It is said that the axe is being sharpened for the Michigan Central's North Shore limited. They figure that all of this business can be handled by the Lake Shore fast service except from Detroit, and it does not pay to run the train for Detroit business exclusively.—Blade.

One day last week as the train was bowling along out of Detroit on the Lima Northern, the engine shrieked out a danger blast, the brakes were applied and the train like a crab began crawling backward to where a bundle of humanity lay in a heap beside the track at the end of the ties. Passengers crowded to the windows, the trainmen tumbled off to investigate and everyone held his breath in dread of the result. Now it is against the law to move a person violently killed and its against the law to leave him. However in this case no difficulty was experienced for the supposed victim instead of having been tossed from the track by the preceding train, suddenly sat up and with a drunken lear dove back into the grass to finish the sleep from which even a train of cars failed to awaken him.

General Freight and Passenger Agent Chambers of the Detroit & Lima Northern, says the company's line into Columbus, O., will be opened to day. The road has been completed to Peoria, and from there into Columbus, a distance of 36 miles, will operate over the Ohio Central. The Ohio Central's freight and passenger terminals at West Columbus will be used, and there will be a through passenger train each way daily between Columbus and Detroit, leaving either terminal in the morning. There will also be a passenger train out of Napoleon in the morning for Columbus and again out of Columbus in the afternoon for Napoleon, and a morning train from Lima to Detroit and an afternoon train from Detroit to Lima.

Regular trains will be hauled between Peoria and Columbus by Ohio Central engines, but excursion trains will be hauled through by D. & L. N. engines.—Blade.

Lima, O., Aug. 16.—The sale of the Ohio Southern railroad company, which after being postponed several times was set for next Saturday, has been postponed again. Judge J. H. Doyle, of Toledo, representing the trustees of the first mortgage bondholders, appeared before Judge Richie yesterday afternoon, and had the sale postponed until September 20th.

On account of Ringling Bros. circus held in Toledo Aug. 29th, the D. T. & M. R. R. will sell tickets to Toledo on above date at rate of one fare for round trip, limited to return not later than train leaving Toledo 7:30 o'clock following morning.

The parlor car Leon of the Cincinnati Northern, passed through here yesterday going west on the D. T. & M. while the east bound pulled the car of the United States fish commissioner.

The Lima Northern R'y. are constructing a large water tank upon Bone Hill, on the farm of B. E. Bullock, and will pump water thereto from the river Raisin.—Dundee Reporter.

Arthur S. Lee spent Sunday visiting in Detroit.

A Letter from Ed Pritchard, who is with Co. C, to his sister, Mrs. Nellie Lillie.

Co. C, 31st M. V. Lytle, Ga.
July 31, 1898.

DEAR SISTER: As I have a little spare time I will write you a few lines. There's not much news but I will give you what there is. We had a very fine concert in the Y. M. C. A. tent last night. It consisted of mandolin, violin and band music and singing.

There is a fellow by the name of John Breen sleeps with me in a pack tent. His brother works in the steam mill across the road from your house.

We have been having some very hard rains. The other night while we were sleeping up came a storm. The water filled the ditch we had around our tent, overflowing into the tent. We didn't know it at the time, but I began to feel cold and awoke. When I went to pull the blanket over me, I found it wet. My feet then felt cold and on examination they were found soaking wet. I felt of my bedfellow and he was soaked too. The first thing he said when he awoke was "What makes it so cold?" I told him I reckoned that we had a right smart change in the weather. He soon found his blanket and feet were wet. We didn't know what to do; the rest of the tents were full of men, so we found a dry place in one corner and made the best of it until morning. I caught a little cold but I am all right now. We have made our ditch deeper and I think we are free from all storms now.

We had a sham battle yesterday and it was the worst one we ever had. A good many of the boys fell out as they couldn't stand it. It was double time through underbrush, over rail fences, through small streams of water and jumping ditches. It was all I could do to stand it, but I was right guide of the company and I had to keep to the front.

Some people may think it's a snap to be a soldier but it is the hardest work that I have ever done. I am getting tired of this kind of life. I wonder why they don't let us go on to Spain and whip those Spaniards and get through with this war instead of keeping us here and drilling the life out of us. There are a good many sick in our regiment and I think it is caused by the drilling we have been getting. This war life isn't what it is cracked up to be. The boys all want to go to Porto Rico. This park is condemned and it is not a healthy place. When I was mustered into the United States service I was sure I was mustered in to go to war not to come down here and stay all summer. If I had known that we would have to stay here so long I wouldn't have enlisted and I am not the only one that says this. If United States tried to get us to join the army after our time is out they would get badly left. I don't believe they could get enough soldiers for a corporal's guard. All the soldiers seem to be dissatisfied with the way they have been used. I think the president of the United States is doing wrong with us. After this war is over and we get our discharge and another war should break out United States troops would be very scarce. An Illinois regiment was ordered out the other day to go to Porto Rico. When they were loaded on the train about to start a message came from Washington saying the troops must be unloaded and sent back to camp. It made the troops so mad that some of them broke their guns against trees and others threw theirs in a pond. They were fished out this morning and were hard looking weapons. I think some of the other regiments will show their tempers before long if they are not moved.

I got a twelve hour pass the other day and went to Chattanooga. I had a good time a saw lots of strange sights. I went up on the mountain and could see seven states at once from the top. It is a beautiful place. Can tell you more about it when I get home. I bought a three foot watermelon for 30c. It was a a smasher and the finest I ever ate.

There is an old gentleman living near here that ran a cider mill in Dundee. He comes to see the Michigan boys quite often.

I have not heard from father and mother in quite a while. Tell them I am still living.

I meant to have answered your letter before but I have not had time as I am busy doing something all the time. This letter is for all at home. Love to all.

Your brother,
ED. PRITCHARD.

One step won't take you very far—
You've got to keep on walking;
One word won't tell folks what you are—
You've got to keep on talking;
One inch won't make you very tall—
You've got to keep on growing;
One little "ad" won't do it all—
You've got to keep 'em going.

Addison citizens have organized a Citizens' Promotive Club with a membership of 100 for the purpose of furthering the collective interests of Addison and vicinity. The first thing on the program will be a Water Carnival about the 10th of September. We may be a little lame on carnival proceedings but we know Addison has plenty of water to drawn all the hobos, two thirds of the agents and half the politicians in Lenawee. Let the carnival proceed.

Our rising young attorney, W. M. Long, rode 100 miles on his wheel in eight hours last Wednesday, over our country roads. Any lawyer who has the wind and speed to perform a feat like that is surely a safe man to intrust with business cares. He is a stayer, and all right.—Deerfield Times Journal. We don't know about our contemporary's judgement in this case; it appears to us that the attorney is a better goer than a stayer.

A Double Wedding.

August 16 the birthday of Mr. J. H. Osborn was celebrated by the marriage of his daughters, Miss Carrie to Mr. Alvin C. Bryan and Miss Mary to Mr. Fred Osborn.

At 11 o'clock little Lucile Lester, who acted as maid of honor, entered the sitting room, carrying the brides' roses. She was immediately followed by the wedding party, the brides being daintily gowned alike in white organdie with valenciennes lace. They proceeded to a canopy of feathery white clematis, where a double ceremony was performed by the Rev. Clement Lester, of Muskegon, Mich.

The maids two

Their father a son.

After receiving the congratulations of their friends, the guests were invited to the dining room and for a short time both the pleasure and sorrow attendent upon a wedding were forgotten in the enjoyment of the good things set before them. These two rooms were decorated, the one in sweet peas and the other in brilliant geraniums. Yellow and green formed the decoration of one room and masses of nasturtiums and myrtle still another.

Many beautiful and useful gifts were received and after an hour or so of visiting, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Osborn left for Olivet, Mich., where a furnished home awaits them. Mr. Osborn for the past two years has been engaged as one of the professors in the college of that place. He was a graduate in our own high school and afterwards at the U. of M.

Mr. and Mrs. Bryan, a little later took the train for Detroit but will return to make their home with the bride's parents. Mr. Bryan is a brother of Frank Bryan, of this place, and until recently Kansas has been his home.

Among the guests from out of town were: Mrs. E. M. McLeod, of California; Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Osborn and daughter Margaret, of Saginaw; Mr. and Mrs. Lampman, Chicago; Mrs. C. D. Warden, Toledo; Mrs. S. W. Hart, Elkhart; Mr. and Mrs. Weir and Mrs. Watson, Manchester; Mrs. Frank Crossman and daughter, Jackson; Mrs. VanCamp and Miss Effie Yawger, Summerset; Miss Bertha Bennis, Sylvania; Miss Lou Hendricks, Escanaba; Miss Drake, Weston; Miss Jennie Osborn, Mrs. S. WEDDINGS IN BRITTANY.

There Is No Limit to the Guests Bidden and No Stint to the Feasting or the Frolic.

The Bretons are a most sentimental people. Their wooings and their weddings are most picturesque. Some of the prettiest things that have ever been said about women have been said in Brittany by Breton men. Some of the very finest saws imaginable about marriage and love are Breton proverbs.

A Breton bride must wear a silken girdle or sash, so tied that it falls, not in single ends, but in long double loops. When the wedding party has formed into a procession, and is about to walk to church, it is arrested by the bride's mother, who cuts the loops of her child's sash, embraces her, blesses her, and says: "The tie which has so long united us, my child, is henceforward rent asunder and I am forced to yield to another the authority which God gave me over thee. If thou art happy—and may God ever grant it—this will be no longer thy home; but should misfortune visit thee, a mother is still a mother, and her arms are ever open to her children. Like thee, I quitted my mother's side to follow a husband. Thy children will also, in their turn, leave thee. When the birds are grown, the maternal nest cannot hold them. May God bless thee, my child, and grant thee as much consolation as He has granted me!"

It is not known how old this little speech—half prayer and wholly blessing—which every Breton mother makes to her bride-daughter, is. It has long been handed down from generation to generation, and probably is, for that very reason, the more full of beauty and of meaning to the simple, but by no manner of means weak-minded, people of Brittany.

There is no stint to the feasting or the frolic at a Breton wedding, and there is absolutely no limit to the guests bidden. The Bretons are as lavish within their means, though less extravagant, and as little exclusive in their marriage hospitalities as the Sikhs are. Between 300 and 400 peasants have been seen dancing at a rather humble bridal festival, and a thousand is by no means an unheard-of strength of wedding guests.

The trousseau is commenced—almost at the bride's birth — by the bride's mother. A Breton bride never has to wait for her trousseau. Often the quite completed trousseau has to wait some years, if not exactly for the bride, why, then, for the bridegroom.

Exit Wooden Furniture.

It is possible in these days to fit out a bedroom with the use of little wood. To the brass bedsteads are now added brass dressing tables and cheval glasses mounted in brass. Clothes trees of brass or nickel are also seen, and towel racks of either metal may be had. The dressing tables are mounted in brass and have a glass top, the drawers being of wood with brass trimmings. Wicker sofas piled with cushions, a wicker table and a low chair continue the elimination of the heretofore indispensable woods.

Cornmeal Breakfast Cakes.

To make cornmeal breakfast cakes, mix one tablespoonful of salt in one quart of cornmeal and pour over this enough boiling water to scald thoroughly. Stir this until it is free from lumps, making it like a thick mush which will just drop from the spoon. Heat your griddle and grease it with clear drippings, and spread the dough over it three-quarters of an inch thick. Bake slowly on top of stove until well done on under side, then turn. Keep covered till well done, turning often.

Shorter Dresses for Children.

Children's better dresses are made with such full skirts that they swing to and fro when worn. Multitudinous ruffles add to the fullness, and the little petticoats are trimmed to imitate women's. A party gown of white muslin has a narrow ruffle, edged with bebe white satin ribbon. The yoke is open-work muslin, and there is a tiny sash of narrow white ribbon. One notices a tendency to make the finer skirts of children shorter.

TO REMOVE STAINS.

Not a Very Difficult Task If You Happen to Know How to Go About It.

Coffee, tea or wine stains are rather difficult to remove from table linen if they are of long standing and have been washed with soap, which tends to set their color, says the Philadelphia Times. Javelle water—which can be made at home or purchased from the druggist—is generally most successful. Put about half a pint of javelle water and a quart of clear water into an earthen bowl. Let the stained article soak in this for several hours, then rinse thoroughly in three waters. It is only white goods that can be treated in this manner, as the javelle water bleaches out the color.

Sewing machine oil stains can be removed by rubbing the stain with sweet oil or lard and letting it stand for several hours. Then wash it in soap and cold water. For peach or tar stains rub hard, let it stand a few hours and sponge with spirits of turpentine until the stain is removed. If the color of the fabric be changed, sponge it with chloroform and the color will be restored. Use lemon juice and salt to remove iron rust, ink and mildew on white goods. Whiten yellow linen by boiling half an hour in one pound of fine soap, melted in one gallon of milk. Then wash in suds, then in two cold waters, with a little blueing.

By putting lace handkerchiefs in warm water in which are a few drops of ammonia and using castile soap they are easily cleansed and made a beautiful, clean white. Then do not iron, but spread the handkerchief out smoothly on marble or glass, gently pulling out or shaping the lace. Just before it is entirely dry, fold evenly and smoothly and place under a heavy weight of some kind, and you will find handkerchiefs lasting thrice as long as before.

CASTELLANE SKIRT.

This Charming Accessoire du Toilette Was Designed for the Clever American Girl.

While rumors of the "transformation of the beautiful American heiress into a Parisian beauty" are reaching this country, reports are also being sent over of the lovely clothes that she is wearing. The other day a favorite few patrons of a famous Paris designer were given the pleasure of a glimpse at a few of her most beautiful pieces of lingerie, and among them were the corset cover and underskirt shown in the accompanying cut.

Puffed headings and edgings for frills must be the proper decoration in Paris this summer, for they are seen on all of the latest importations. The underskirt of this suit was made of plain white taffeta and heavy figured India silk. The frill was made of the

CORSET COVER AND SKIRT.

India silk gathered very closely and headed with a puffing of the material. It was sewed upon a very tight-fitting yoke of white taffeta. The belt of the yoke was made like a girdle and hooked in the back.

The corset cover was of the finest India linen, so fine that it looked like silk, and was trimmed with frills of the most delicate hand embroidery and finished in front with a carelessly tied bow of the same embroidery.

The stripes in the belt of the underskirt and the figures in the frills were of very dainty violet color and the suit was to be worn under a violet organdie without other lining.

AT A COST OF MUCH BLOOD

Manila, the Capital City of the Philippine Islands, Falls Into Our Hands.

BATTLE WAS FIERCE WHILE IT LASTED.

Eight Americans Killed and Fifty Wounded in the Attack—Spanish Loss Much Greater—Seven Thousand Prisoners and Much Ammunition and Guns Taken.

Hong-Kong, Aug. 17. — Manila was captured on Saturday, August 13, by the combined land and naval forces. At nine o'clock in the morning the fleet opened fire at Malate fort and the Spanish trenches. The fire continued for two hours, with no response on the fleet, but a heavy fire on the troops. The formal surrender occurred in the afternoon. The Spanish flag was replaced by a 40-foot American flag, the fleet giving the national salute. Seven thousand prisoners were taken with 12,000 rifles and unlimited ammunition. Merritt assumes command, leaving temporarily the civil laws in force. Eight Americans were killed and 50 wounded. The Spanish loss was much greater. The ships were not struck. The blockade was raised and the shops are reopening. The people are pleased. The cable will shortly be repaired.

One Version of the Battle.

Hong-Kong, Aug. 17.—Admiral Dewey gave Gen. Augusti an hour to surrender at the time of the last demand, made on Saturday. Gen. Augusti refused to comply. The bombardment, which began at 9:30 a. m., was continued for two hours and then the Americans stormed the trenches, sweeping all before them. Those within the walls attempted no resistance. The First Colorado volunteers stormed the outer trenches and drove the Spaniards into the second line of defenses. Then the American troops swept on, driving all the Spaniards into the inner fortifications, where the Spanish commander, seeing that further resistance was useless, hoisted the white flag and surrendered.

Losses Not Known.

The losses, American and Spanish, are not yet known. The Spaniards in the trenches probably numbered 3,000 men. The American attacking force numbered 10,000, and the Americans were better armed, better trained and in better condition. The foreign fleets watched the bombardment with acute interest.

Warships Engaged.

The American warships engaged were the Olympia, Raleigh, McCulloch, Boston, Monterey, Charleston and Baltimore. The Spaniards assert that the fire of the Americans for the most part fell short, the only effective fire being from a small gunboat armed with quick-firing guns that was close in shore.

Say Our Losses Were Heavy.

It is also asserted by the Spaniards that "the Americans lost heavily in the storming, owing to the faulty construction of their entrenchments, which the Spaniards could command from the heights, and upon which they poured a galling fire." The Spanish trench extended around Manila at a distance of from two to four miles from the walled city, forming a circle ten miles in circumference, and it was impossible, the Spaniards say, to hold so long a line against the American attack.

American Story Not Yet Told.

The American version of the battle is not yet obtainable. Gen. Augusti, former captain general of the Philippines, will start for Madrid to-day by the German mail steamer.

Admiral Dewey and Gen. Merritt, it is reported, had issued orders to spare all except armed defences of the city, and consequently the town is understood to have been but little damaged. Some street fighting between the insurgents and the Spaniards occurred on the outskirts, but order prevailed within the walled section.

Thinks Our Losses Were Small.

London, Aug. 17.—The Manila correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, telegraphing Saturday, says:

"Nothing could be more humane than the Americans' capture of the town. Gen. Merritt's and Admiral Dewey's plan was to spare every object but the armed defenses and the trenches. Apparently the American losses were extremely small. The Spanish intrenchments varied in point of distance from two to four miles from the center of Old Manila.

"Defending this long line of at least ten miles were not over, and probably under, 5,000 Spanish regular troops, volunteers and natives. About half that number were in hospital. The attacking force numbered from 10,000 to 20,000 natives and 10,000 Americans, on shore and aboard the fleet. In every respect the advantage was on the side of the attack. The American field guns threw heavier metal and had longer range than the Spanish, the marksmanship of the United States gunners was much superior to that of the Spaniards and the men were stronger and in better condition. The Spaniards are a small race compared with their stalwart opponents, and, worn out by a hard day's siege and disappointed by the failure to arrive of the promised Spanish relief squadron, they had lost heart. It was a hopeless struggle.

Olympia Fires First Shot.

"The attacking squadron formed in line between Malate and Old Manila with the Concord watching the fort at the mouth of the Pasig. The American fleet lay outside the breakwater. The Olympia fired the first shot at 9:40, and a fairly continuous but by no means furious cannonade was kept up until 11:20. By that time the Malate fort was silenced and the American troops then stormed the intrenchments. The Spaniards who were in the earthworks tell me that the quick-firing little gunboat Rapido, which lay close to the shore, were far more terrible in their effects than was the raking fire of the ships.

"Resistance to the American attack was impossible. The First Colorado regiment was the earliest to charge the Spaniards, who retired to the second line, but, soon outnumbered, they were forced into the old city. A part of Malate suffered severely from the bombardment. The vaunted intramures defenses were not tried.

The Surrender.

"The Spanish commander, convinced that further resistance was hopeless, hoisted a white flag at 11:20 and the order to cease firing was immediately issued in the center of the town, but in the outskirts street fighting continued for some time afterwards between the rebels and Spaniards.

"The only fear felt in the city is in regard to the conduct of the insurgents. As I write this in the house of the German consul a brisk fusillade is going on between the combatants and musketry fire is rattling all around."

Battle with Rebels Rumored.

Hong-Kong, Aug. 17.—It is rumored here that the United States troops at Manila have had trouble with the rebel forces under Aguinaldo. According to one account the insurgents, upon whom various restrictions had been placed by Maj. Gen. Merritt, mutinied at not being permitted to have any share in the surrender of the city. It is even reported that they attacked the Americans in the trenches.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

In the matter of the estate of JOHN AIKEN, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that pursuant to an order granted to the undersigned administrator of the estate of said John Aiken, deceased, by the judge of probate for the County of Lenawee, on the 25th day of July A. D. 1898, I will sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, at the dwelling house on the hereinafter described premises, on the 27th day of September A. D. 1898, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day (subject to the dower and homestead rights of the widow of said deceased therein) all those parcels of land situate and being in the Township of Macon, County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, known and described as being the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section twelve, town five south range five east; and one and one-half acres of land adjoining the above and lying in the southeast corner of the northeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section eleven, town and range aforesaid, containing in all forty-one and one-half acres of land. JOHN G. BOYD,

Dated, August 5th, 1898. Administrator.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

Probate Court for the County of Lenawee.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on the 8th day of August in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, judge of probate.

In the matter of the estate of JOHN HOY, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John Hoy, Jr., a son of said deceased, praying that an instrument in writing purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, may be duly proved and admitted to probate, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Fred'k B. Wood, the executor named in said instrument or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered that Tuesday, the sixth day of September next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition.

And it is further ordered that a copy of this order be published in THE TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulated in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

(A true copy.) RICHARD B. ROBBINS. Judge of Probate.

COL. ATKINSON DEAD.

Prominent Michigan Politician and Gov. Pingree's Champion in the Lower House.

Detroit, Aug. 15.—Col. John Atkinson, a prominent Irish-American of this city, died suddenly of neuralgia of the heart Sunday. He led the Pingree forces in the last legislature, in which he was a representative. Few men in Michigan have been more prominent in state politics than Col. Atkinson, although a lucrative law practice has on many occasions precluded his acceptance of public office. He became politically associated with Gov. Pingree when the latter was mayor of Detroit, and during Mr. Pingree's crusade against the street car companies of the city he was his adviser and champion. When Mr. Pingree was elected governor Col. Atkinson consented to enter the legislature to represent the governor in the lower house, and his handling of that body, presided over by a speaker who was hostile to the Pingree reforms, proved his mettle as a manager of men. The house adopted almost every suggestion of the governor, and throughout the session, which was marked by many bitter contests, Col. Atkinson was the ruling power. The Pingree projects went down in defeat, but because the senate, where those opposed to the peculiar reforms insisted upon by the governor were in small majority, voted against the bills that Col. Atkinson had introduced into and had passed by the house.

FOUND WITH THROAT CUT.

A Michigan Girl Cruelly Murdered and Body Left in the Grass at Village of Dearborn.

Detroit, Aug. 13.—The village of Dearborn, ten miles from here, is at present wrestling with the most mysterious murder in its history, Frank Greenwald was driving a cow through his orchard when suddenly the animal refused to go further. On investigation Greenwald found under a tree a short distance from the road the body of Mary Mahil, a domestic who had been employed in the village. On closer investigation he found the girl's throat was cut, the bloody razor with which the deed was done lying but a few feet away. For a distance of several yards the tall grass showed evidence of a terrible struggle. An examination showed that the girl had not been assaulted, and as she had no money the motive for the terrible deed cannot be imagined. Officers discovered the tracks of a man leading to the railroad track from the scene of the crime and found blood on a barb-wire fence where he had crossed the track. The girl had told several friends she was to be married soon to her foster brother, Albert Parish. Parish, however, denies this. After working on the case officers arrested Parish on suspicion, but soon after released him.

Maccabees in Session.

Adrian, Aug. 17.—The first national encampment of the uniformed rank, Knights of the Maccabees, opened with reveille at six o'clock Tuesday morning. It was named Camp Abt, in honor of Adjt. Gen. Peter J. Abt, of Detroit. The day was devoted to the reception of incoming divisions. At dress parade Mayor Kirk delivered an address of welcome to the visiting knights, and presented Gen. White with a key to the city. A reception and ball was given in honor of Maj. Gen. White and staff at Light Guard armory at night.

En Route for Home.

Constantinople, Aug. 15. — Dr. James B. Angell, who resigned the post of United States minister to Turkey in May last and was succeeded by Oscar S. Strauss, Saturday left Constantinople with his family. A large gathering of diplomats and American and English residents assembled to bid the retiring minister farewell. The American community presented Dr. Angell with an address expressing regret at his departure and thanks for the services he had rendered during his stay.

Defy the Law.

Lansing, Aug. 15. — The state is threatened with trouble by the fishermen of the Beaver islands, as they make no bones of saying that they do not propose to observe the game laws fixing a closed season, as the time named by the law is the most profitable of the entire year to them. It is Game Warden Osborn's intention to have representatives on the ground and see that the law is enforced.

Suit for $25,000.

Saginaw, Aug. 16.—Anton Deisler, executor of the state of Elizabeth Mahnoke, has commenced suit against the Michigan Central Railroad company for $25,000 damages. The woman was killed by a passenger train on that road at the Sheridan avenue crossing in company with three others last February.

Gen. Duffield Recovering.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 15.—Gen. Henry M. Duffield, of Michigan, and his son Pitts, who both had yellow fever at Santiago, are now recuperating at York Harbor, Me. Their progress toward health is slow but sure. They are the guests of Maj. Daniel Goodwin, and Justice Brown is also one of the party.

Bodies Are Found.

Muskegon, Aug. 16.—The bodies of Lyman and Ira Van Kersen, the two boys who have been missing since last Thursday, were found in the channel of the big Muskegon marsh. Both bodies were fully clothed and were lying on top of the water entangled in some logs not 20 feet apart.

Died of His Injuries.

Grand Ledge, Aug. 12. — Hovey Blough, aged 40 years, who resided seven miles north of here, while driving through the streets was thrown from his cart. He struck upon his head and died from his injuries in two hours.

Gov. Pingree has paroled Mrs. Mary McKenzie, sent last January to the Detroit house of correction for one year for adultery.

Dr. A. T. Stevenson, of Bay City, has been appointed pension examiner in place of Dr. C. T. Newkirk, who is now field surgeon with the American army in Cuba.

Fred A. Percival, company F, Thirty-third Michigan, who was reported dead in Cuba, is alive and well. His brother at Port Huron received a cablegram from him.

Gov. Pingree has been informed by the Yosemite park commissioners that one of the big trees in the Mariposa Big Tree grove has been named Michigan in honor of this state.

The companions and brother officers of Lieut. A. J. Babcock, of Flint, of the Thirty-third Michigan, who died of yellow fever in Cuba, have sent a touching memorial to the family of the dead soldier.

FOR A NEW ROAD.

Railway to Be Built from Gladstone to the Whitefish Valley Very Soon.

Gladstone, Aug. 15. — It is given out here that arrangements have been made for the construction of a railway from Gladstone north up the Whitefish valley. The money for its construction has all been paid in, and the engineers will begin running lines for it immediately, and as soon as the route is selected work of construction is to commence and the road is to be finished by early spring. The road will tap a large tract of hard wood and pine timber which will be used by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company and the mills on Little Bay de Noc. The deal originated with F. J. Merriam, general manager of the Gladstone company, who has worked on the project for three years.

Grape Growers Organize.

Lawton, Aug. 16.—An association known as the Southern Michigan Grape association has been organized. The object of the association is to get a better price for fruit than has been paid here in the past. All grapes will be weighed and inspected before being placed on the market. A. D. Benway, of Chicago, has been chosen manager and salesman for the association. It is estimated that the output of grapes from this section will reach 600 cars this year.

Reserves to Be Mustered Out.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16. — The auxiliary cruiser Yosemite has been ordered to League island navy yard where the Michigan naval reserves will be mustered out of the service, receiving an honorable discharge. The Yosemite will be accompanied by the cruiser Minneapolis, which will go out of commission. The crew of the Minneapolis will take the Yosemite and do police duty on the Cuban coast during the evacuation of the island by the Spaniards.

More Convicts Wanted.

Ionia, Aug. 13.—Wallerstein & Co., who have the much-discussed shirt contract at the state house of correction, have their factory running and are turning out 100 dozen cheap white laundered shirts and negligee shirts a day. The employment of convicts on the class of goods turned out does not interfere with free labor. Warden Fuller says he could make use of 100 more convicts.

Flour for Havana.

Detroit, Aug. 16. — A special to the Tribune from Niles, says: The Niles Milling company has received a rush order from Fernandez Heres & Co., of Havana, Cuba, for 1,000 barrels of flour, to be shipped within the next 15 days. The company will work day and night to fill the order and the first carload will go forward immediately.

To Inspect Troops.

Detroit, Aug. 17.—Gov. Pingree received a dispatch from Assistant Secretary of the Navy Allen asking him to inspect the Michigan naval reserves at Washington on August 19. The governor replied in the affirmative.

FARM & GARDEN.

THE DERRICK STACKER.

A Western Device Which Gives General Satisfaction in Hoisting Hay and Grain.

The derrick stacker is in use in many sections of the west, and gives general satisfaction in hoisting hay, straw and grain. It is made stationary, and can be used in making a round stack, with the pole in the middle, or for lifting hay or grain to a platform, from which it may be put in the barn. This simple device is also handy for stacking on sheds, saving all the heavy pitching from the wagon. Some farmers have the derricks set against the barn, and use them for hoisting machinery to the top floor in winter and letting it down in the spring. The derrick will be found handy for filling and emptying silos and cellars, and will save time and money on any farm if properly handled.

A DERRICK STACKER.

The stacker consists of one long post or pole set solidly in the ground and extending 30 to 40 feet in the air, a short arm of ten or twelve feet, and the necessary ropes and pulleys. The arm is fastened at the height desired by bolting onto an iron band, sometimes made from an old wagon-tire inserted in a groove or collar cut around the post. A strong wire, rope or chain is then fastened to the outer end of the arm, or derrick, and on a band made to circle round near the top of the pole. Three pulleys are sufficient to hoist the load, and a small rope in the hands of the man on the stack or ground enables him to pull the hoisted load wherever desired.

As no one has disturbed the farmers using the derrick, it is supposed the stacker is not patented, hence no royalties will be demanded of anyone who wishes to make one.—Joel Shomaker, in Farm and Fireside.

CLEANING UP THINGS.

No Time of the Year Is Better Suited for This Kind of Work Than the Present.

During the next two months is one of the best seasons for cleaning up the farm, and in the majority of farms there is plenty of opportunity or need for this kind of work. After the plowing for wheat is done the manure can all be cleaned out of the stables, sheds and feed lots and hauled out and scattered broadcast on the land intended for wheat. The work of properly preparing the land for the reception of the seed will incorporate sufficiently with the soil. Weeds may be cut down in the meadows and pastures and along the fence rows to a good advantage. Many of them, if cut down before they mature seeds, will be effectually killed out.

This is one of the best reasons for killing out sprouts and briars. With the exception of sassafras and persimmon almost all kinds may be effectually killed out by cutting down reasonably close to the ground almost any time in August. With these two in nearly all cases the only safe plan is to grub out, cutting them off at least six inches below the surface. While this plan requires considerable work, in the end it will prove much the more economical. This is so much the case that generally it will be better to thoroughly clean an acre in this way than to spend the same amount of time and labor cutting off and burning a larger acreage, but doing less effective work.

Cutting close to the ground and letting lay until dry and then burning will kill out many weeds, moss and sprouts, but with persimmon and sassafras the tops will rarely be killed down so deep but that the roots will send up shoots next year, and in a short time they will be as much in the way as ever.

By keeping the farm clear the value is materially increased to say nothing of the better satisfaction in working it.—N. J. Shepherd, in Farmers' Voice.

Open Ditches Breed Weeds.

Open ditches are usually weed nurseries, because not one farmer in ten ever finds time to go along them and keep the weeds down to prevent them from seeding. An open ditch also occupies much more ground than the width of the cut. There must be a turn row on both sides or else the crop to the width of such a row is tramped down and ruined. For these reasons it pays to put in tile drains instead of open ditches. A tile drain lasts forever; an open ditch needs

Enroute to Alaska.—Letter No. 10.

In Camp on Lake LaBarge, N. W. T.
June 11, '98.

We arrived here at the head of Lake LaBarge last evening and camped for the night. This is a fine camping place and I presume there was 200 or more boats tied up here for the night, so you see we have lots of company and it makes quite a large camp. This morning we got up early intending to go on down the lake but found a strong head wind blowing up the lake which makes it next to impossible to row or sail against as most all the boats have only square sail and no keel or center board, so we are staying here waiting for the wind to change or go down. The lake is about 40 miles long and the wind has a pretty good sweep at it.

I understand there is a police station and postoffice at the foot of this lake so I will write this letter while I have the opportunity and mail it when I get there if I find a postoffice at that point.

On June 1st the ice was out of Lake Bennett where we were camped so that we made a trip by boat to Bennett City, at the head of the lake and 20 miles from our camp. We went to look for mail and to get our boat license and number. None of us got mail and were much disappointed. We got up at 2 a. m. and started and had to row all the way up as there was no wind, but we made good time and got to Bennett about 8 o'clock, making the trip in 6 hours. Boats were so thick for about half a mile that we could hardly find a place to tie up. We found nine of the boys there that came to the coast with us, and we had not seen any of them since we parted in Victoria, nearly three months before. They were camped at Bennett and building their boats there. It is needless to say that we were pleased to see each other, and nothing would do but for us to stay and take dinner with them so we stayed and had a good time. After dinner we went out to the river which was near by and watched the boats come down and go through the rapids.

There is one pretty bad place and a good many boats get smashed on the rocks and outfits lost. While we were there two men came down in a boat, striking a rock in the middle of the stream. The boat turned sidewise, swamped and finally rolled over and over with the men clinging to it. Soon one of the men lost his hold on the boat and swam down a few rods till he reached a sand bar and crawled out on it; the other man and the boat lodged on a rock and the man was helped off. The boat was pretty badly smashed and I think the men lost most of their outfit. Right near there on a little hill is the grave of a man who lost his outfit at this same place and felt so disappointed that he shot himself. This happened June 12, '97, as I read on the wooden headboard.

We stayed around Bennett till about 3 p. m. when the wind came up from the south which gave us good sailing back to camp. We made the trip back in half the time it took to row up. We were surprised at the way our boat ran; the wind blew so hard that we could only use part of the sail, but we passed every boat that we came in sight of and there were a good many. The wind blew a gale and the lake got very rough but we got back to camp all right and decided that we had a pretty good boat.

Last Monday, June 6th, we broke camp early in the morning and loaded everything into the boat, bid good bye to our old camp and started down the lake. The lake was covered with boats but it was so still—not a breath of air—that everybody had to row. It was very warm and pleasant; I don't think I ever saw a finer morning. I got out my cornet and played as we went down the lake and I never heard anything echo as that did, back and forth across the lake, from mountain to mountain and up and down the lake for miles. I got lots of encores and calls for different tunes till I got tired of playing and put up my cornet. About 1 o'clock the wind came up and we had good sailing from that time till night. We reached Caribou Crossing, which is at the foot of Lake Bennett, at noon, then passed through about three miles of river into Lake Tagish and sailed down about 10 or 12 miles and camped for the night. The next morning we went on down the lake and reached the foot about 10 o'clock a. m. This lake is 17 miles long. There is a police station and customs office located here and we had to go through some more red tape business by the officials inspecting outfits, boats, etc. This delayed us about two hours, and while we were waiting a man came to the post with about 1000 letters from Dyea and I was in luck to get two from home. I never paid a dollar for anything so cheerfully in my life. I don't think I would have complained if they had been $5.00 each instead of 50c each They were dated April 19th and 29th and I was very glad to get them and hear from home.

In the afternoon we sailed on down through about six miles of river and into Marsh lake which is 20 miles long and as we had a good wind we reached the foot of the lake about 7 o'clock that evening and camped. Here we overtook some of our Lake Bennett neighbors who left two days before we did, so you see we have a fast boat and pass everything on the lake.

Wednesday, June 8th, we left Marsh lake in the morning and went down the Lewis or Fifty-mile river as it is called. Rewed part of the time and floated the balance, just as the whim struck us, and enjoyed it very much as it was a very fine day. We camped about three miles above the White Horse Rapids for the night and had a fine camping place and lots of company.

Thursday morning, June 9th, we broke camp and dropped down stream about half a mile and tied up, then we walked on down to take a look at Miles Canyon and the White Horse Rapids and see the boats going through. It was very interesting, more so to the looker-on than the participants. The canyon is about 3-4 mile long and from 50 to 100 feet wide, the walls being from 100 to 150 feet high, and the water goes through there like a race horse. It runs in great waves or swells and is considerable higher in the center than on the sides. The boats have to be kept in the center or they will get smashed on the rocks at the sides. The river above and below is from 20 to 40 rods wide so you see the water is considerably confined when it goes through the canyon. The water runs very swift below the canyon for about a mile and then comes into the White Horse Rapids which is perhaps 3-4 mile long, 40 or 50 rods wide and very wild, narrowing down to 50 feet in its narrowest place, where it fairly boils and jumps 6 or 8 feet high. It takes a good boat and boatman to go through without getting smashed. About half way between the canyon and rapids in very swift boiling water, was a large raft with four or five men, a woman, two horses and a large outfit, lodged on the rocks, with the water roaring all around them and running over part of the raft. They have been fast there for a week I'm told and I am afraid if they get loose there they will never be able to go on through the White Horse Rapids with that rig and come out alive.

Below the White Horse a person would think he had struck a ship yard and fruit and grain drying institution combined. There were lots of boats, scows, etc., laid up for repairs; holes knocked in the bottoms, sides stove in, etc., and it seemed as if there were acres of evaporated fruits of all kinds, rolled oats, flour, meal, tea, coffee, ship crackers, etc., spread out to dry. While we were there a big scow came down and struck the rocks, knocked a hole in the bottom but came on through the rapids and lodged on the farther side. There were several men on board, also 4 horses and 11 tons of provisions; nobody drowned but of course everything soaked. Just below a short distance is another scow stranded which got wrecked coming through a few days ago with 3 men and their outfits on board and two of the men were drowned.

All of these things naturally would not be conducive of generating courage. There are two tramway companies and pack train companies that carry boats and goods from the head of the canyon to the foot of the rapids, a distance of 3 miles. Then you can pack your own goods if you want to and let your boat go through alone which some do, but it is liable to get smashed. I had a desire to take the trip through there in our boat so we decided to get a pilot and go through. We found a man who had worked on the Michigan lumber river for about 20 years and had made a good many trips through the White Horse Rapids and knew where all the hidden rocks and bad places were and we engaged him to go through with us. We packed everything good and solid in the boat and tacked a canvas over the best we could. As the bow was decked over for about 6 feet back we were in pretty good shape. Mac and I each took an oar and sat in the middle of the boat with our pilot in the stern with his oar. We told him to go ahead and when he wanted any help right quick to give the word and he should have it.

I saw before we got into the canyon that our pilot understood his business and I did not feel the least bit nervous. Sometimes he would not want any help for 10 or 15 rods and then he would call up quickly for left or right or both, as the case might be, to help him avoid a rock, whirlpool or other bad place, where one mis-stroke or the least hesitation would swamp us and perhaps send us to the bottom or on the rocks at the sides. We had to be very careful and not dip our oars too deep for the undertow would jerk them out of our hands so quick that we would not know what had happened. Our boat would plow through one big swell and into another and toss about like a cork but we went through all right and did not take in more than a pint of water and got that at the last big dive at the foot of the White Horse. Well we had ridden through the celebrated Miles Canyon and White Horse Rapids and got through all right with our boat and outfit in about 20 minutes, which would have taken several days of hard work if we had packed it over. Consequently we felt happy. It was a very exhilerating ride and I would like to take it again. There were lots of men you could not hire to go through. One man, who hired his boat taken down and walked from way up above the head of the canyon around to the foot of the rapids, a distance of 5 miles, told me he never enjoyed a walk so well in his life; anything but going through those rapids for him. Another man, who went through, told me that to find $1000 wouldn't please him more than it did when he got through the rapids; said he didn't want another trip of that kind. To see a boat going through the rapids one would think it impossible to go through but lots of them do and we did, and are alive to tell of it. I am sorry though for the many poor fellows who have bad luck there and get their boats smashed and outfits ruined, and after all this hard work of getting into the country so far.

After we got through the rapids we went down the river about a mile and camped for the night, and yesterday morning we went on down the river and had a very pleasant day and trip, reaching the head of Lake LaBarge about 4 p. m.

I have not seen Will Ross since we were sledding between Lake Linderman and Bennett. We used to meet on the trail quite often then. That was about the middle of April. I looked and inquired for him when I was at Bennett, but could get no trace of him; do not know whether he is ahead or behind us.

You asked if I had got my new spring hat yet. Yes, and it is a beauty. You ought to see it. It is white felt with a rim about a foot wide and is trimmed with white mosquito bars, which drop down gracefully to my shoulders and with a puckering string around the neck makes it very useful if not so ornamental as yours. Most all the men have their hats trimmed in this way for the benefit of the mosquitoes and it is a pretty good thing.

I wish you could see the boats as they come down the lakes; it is a very pretty sight viewed at a distance when there is a fair wind and they all have their sails spread. I have counted over 100 in sight at one time. Take them all together it is a great aggregation and I do not believe its equal has ever been seen, not even at the time of the famous Spanish Armada. All the boats are numbered and most of them are named, having the name painted on each side near the bow. The owners of a good many are young unmarried men, I should judge, and named their boat after their best girl. I will give you the names and number of some of the boats tied up along here in front of our camp: 1604 Alice A., 211 Blanche, 2835 Elizabeth of Me., 188 Catherine, 1704 Marjorie, 1705 Winnie, 1117 Helen, 717 Ella, 1854 Juniata, 2210 Grape City, Pa., 12812 Maude and has the name Rev. David Gardner, Kingston, Ont., and at the mast head has a banner which reads "All for Jesus." The boat tied next is 313 and is painted black with the name Demon in large white letters. I do not know whether the two crafts are travelling together or not, but it strikes me that one or the other is in bad company. And last but not least 2328 Michigan and at the mast head a banner with the same name, which is our boat. This name has been the means of our meeting a good many Michigan people; they see the name and say "Hello, 'Mich.' what part are you from? We are from Detroit, Saginaw, Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, etc.," as the case may be.

Fort Selkirk, N. W. T., 6-16-98.

We just reached here this afternoon and as we found no postoffice at the foot of Lake LaBarge when we reached there, we were unable to mail our letters, but find a chance to here. The officer in charge here says mail goes out over the Dalton trail every 15 days and will go out again in about 4 days and I am in hopes you will get this O. K. We had to lay over till Sunday at 2 p. m. at Lake LaBarge before the wind shifted so that we could get away, but we have not lost any time since and have got along first rate and not an accident so far although we have seen a plenty.

There is a strip of river for 30 miles after we left the foot of LaBarge that I think is the most dangerous water we have found so far. It runs very swift, has a current of from 8 to 12 miles per hour and has lots of rocks to dodge so you have to watch every minute. There are a good many boats smashed and outfits lost on this stretch of water. We passed a small steamboat that had gone to pieces on the rocks a few hours before we came along. They were taking things ashore and had the bank covered with stuff drying. This party was from Kalamazoo, Mich. A short distance above this wreck a large scow with several men and a large outfit, just behind us, ran on a rock, broke in two and left one man on the rock and the others and goods in the water. The men were helped out but I suppose most of the outfit was lost. We saw the rock in time to dodge it, but they were not as lucky. This party was from Minnesota and started in about ten months ago. After having all their hard work to get so far into the country and then to have this hard luck is too bad.

The river bank is just lined with flowers—blue, purple and pink and the wild rose is everywhere, varying in color from a light pink to a dark red. Lots of the boats have an empty baking powder can filled with a bouquet of flowers and set up on the bow of the boat. We have one.

Ft. Selkirk was established something over 100 years ago by the Hudson Bay Co. and they have a store here now. It is situated on the left bank of the river on a bluff which gives a fine view across and up and down the river. The Pelly river comes in here just across and a little above. The place consists of about 15 log buildings, including the store, Indian huts and police buildings.

We came through the Five-finger Rapids about 6 o'clck last evening and found it a pretty rough piece of water. It tossed us about considerably, but we got through all right and without getting wet a bit. I steared the boat through and I think now I will do for a professional pilot. About an hour afterwards we passed through the Rink Rapids, but they were pretty tame affairs compared with the Five Fingers.

As near as I can figure it we are about 170 miles from Dawson and will run it in about three days more if nothing happens, as we have made from 35 to 70 miles per day. When we get there will write you again. We are all well and enjoying this trip immensely. Goodby.

CARE OF CORN FODDER.

Running the Crop Through a Husker and Shredder Is the Best Known Method.

Allow the corn to stand in the field until the grain begins to harden and the bottom leaves are turning yellow. Secure as much of the fodder as possible while it is green. Cutting must be done before frost or the blades will be brittle and break off, causing a loss of the best part of the feed. Place in shocks of medium size. They must be large enough to stand well, but small enough to dry out thoroughly. If the corn is on the green order, as it will always be at the beginning of the cutting season, set up about half of the shock, let it stand for several days, until thoroughly cured, then cut the remainder. Shocks 12x12 hills are about the best size.

The shocks must remain in the field until the entire plant is thoroughly dried. Not only must the blades be well cured, but the stalks must be free from moisture to insure perfect keeping in the stack or after shredding and storing in the mow. The time required will depend upon the season, but usually five or six weeks will be sufficient. It can then be put into a stack or rick, arranging the bundles or armfuls of fodder as in stacking small grain. If left in the open field, as is often done, there is great loss from exposure of the surface of the shocks to the weather and the occasional "twisting down" of a shock. Stack where it will be most convenient in feeding.

Running the crop through a husker and shredder is the ideal way of taking care of corn fodder. There is some objection to this method on the score of the fodder molding in the mow. If it is thoroughly dried out before it is shredded there is little danger from this source. The practical experience of many farmers and feeders has proven this. True, the shredding is expensive, due to the limited capacity of the shredders. Improvements are being made each season, and this objection will be removed before very long. The fodder is left in splendid condition, and is readily eaten by all kinds of stock.—American Agriculturist.

TYING CORN SHOCKS.

How Any Wide-Awake Farmer Can Construct a Serviceable and Lasting Device.

A very handy device for tying shocks of corn can be easily made. Take a piece of wood about five feet long and shave it out round with a diameter of two inches, tapering to a point at one end. Flatten the last six inches of the other end making it 1x1.5 inches.

Get another sound piece of wood three inches square and 18 inches long. Taper this at one end as seen in the illustration, and two inches from the other end cut a mortise through it four inches long and one inch wide. Insert two pins near the lower end as illustrated.

The flattened end of the long piece is to be put through the mortise and pinned fast leaving it on a pivot. Six inches from the large piece of wood make a three-eighths-inch hole through the shaft and get a small rope large enough to go around the largest shocks of corn. Put the end through the hole and tie in a knot that it may not pull through.

It is now ready for use. When a shock of corn is cut thrust the shaft through it, carry the rope around and drop the end down between the shaft and rope. Grasping the pin, draw it towards you and turn the shaft round and round, using the pin for a handle, until as tight as desired. Push the head from you and thrust the other pin into the shock, which will prevent its turning back and loosening. While in this position tie with a fodder twine. This device is particularly valuable when one is working alone.—Agricultural Economist.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Overstock your pastures and you will have weeds in them.

Good pure white lead paint ought to last on a building eight or nine years.

The sheep will turn most of the weeds into money if they can get at them.

Neglect to mow the weeds this year, and you will have double to take care of next year.

If we get and keep a good hold on the Philippines, binding twine ought to be cheap hereafter.

Just as soon as the pastures begin to fail supplement them with grain to the cows and young stock.

Don't let a single machine stand out in the possible storms and sun a day after you are through with its use.

The hay crop is one of the most important crops grown, and if it were baled, as a rule, it would be still more valuable.—Western Plowman.

City Girl in the Country.

The girl who expressed so much sympathy for the poor farmer because of his cold job in harvesting his winter wheat is equal in agricultural knowledge to the one who expressed a desire to see a field of tobacco when it was just plugging out. But the damsel who asked which cow gave the buttermilk is entitled to the whole bakery. And a girl on her return from a visit to the country who was asked if she ever saw anyone milk a cow replied: "Oh, yes, indeed I have; it tickles me to death to see uncle jerk two of the cow's faucets at the same

A ROYAL WELCOME HOME

New York Welcomes with Great Enthusiasm the Return of the Famous Sea Fighters.

AN IMPOSING PARADE ON THE HUDSON.

Seven Big Warships in Line—Cheers from the Throats of Hundreds of Thousands—The Tomb of Gen. Grant Saluted by Guns That Have Made a Wonderful Record.

New York, Aug. 22.—Hundreds of thousands of people along the banks of the Hudson and thousands on all styles of river craft blended their shouts in a royal welcome Saturday to the returned North Atlantic squadron under command of Rear Admiral Sampson, and as fine an August day as could be desired was nature's tribute to the return of the victors. For almost three solid hours steam whistles of all sizes, steam sirens and small guns along the shores shrieked and boomed in the effort to display the heartiest enthusiasm for the homecoming of the naval heroes with their battle-scarred ships.

Seven Big Ships in Line.

Early in the morning the seven big ships, the New York, Iowa, Indiana, Brooklyn, Massachusetts, Oregon and Texas, lay in New York bay just off Tompkinsville, S. I. There was no idea with Admiral Sampson that New York city was prepared for a rousing reception, but the news was brought shortly by a tug from the navy yard, and all the ships of the squadron were immediately put under preparation for dress review. By nine o'clock the big, dull-looking fighting ships, looming high above the picturesque confusion of smaller craft which had come down to get a glimpse of the ships, were ready for movement. Strung out along their decks in long, regular lines were the white-uniformed jackies, with here and there a bluecoated officer, all strongly contrasted against the somber, lead-colored armor of the ships.

The Start.

When the hour for the start came it looked as if it would be impossible for the ships to make their way through the perfect jam of river craft. Vessels of all descriptions, from the smallest steam launch to the great ocean liner, were banked around the squadron. Cheers and shouts of welcome rose from every deck and the boats' whistles all joined in the shouts of welcome. Suddenly there was a movement on the flagship New York as the big ship started forward with a slow, stately glide. She was immediately followed by the other six vessels in the following order: Iowa, Indiana, Brooklyn, Massachusetts, Oregon, Texas. It was some time before the ships could get into review formation, but by the time the New York's prow came in line with Governor's island the other ships had formed in a regular line.

Great Guns Boom.

The start was accompanied by tremendous cheering, screeching voices and booming cannon. From Castle William came the first salute. It was merely a flash of bright red, which was immediately smothered in a sheet of smoke before any detonation was heard. Then came the roar across the waters, and the ships headed right in the river on the way to Gen. Grant's tomb.

All along the line, on piers, on sheds, houses and every possible point of vantage people were packed. The river craft, crowding the warships close, were jammed with passengers, sinking the sides of the vessels almost to their guard rails on one side, giving the impression that even the ships themselves bowed in unconscious salute to the returned naval heroes. The width of the Hudson river was a struggling, fluttering, darting mass of color, confusion and cheers. As the grim-looking battleships moved up the river the crowds became denser, and the enthusiasm was more marked. At Riverside drive, with its steep, grassy slope, the scene was like a vast amphitheater. Tens of thousands of persons covered the green slopes, and as the battleships approached, a mighty cheer arose that reverberated back and forth across the Hudson.

At Grant's Tomb.

At the bottom of the slope an observation train crawled lazily along, keeping even with the ships, above this the vast sea of humanity, and crowning this Gen. Grant's tomb, which was to mark the beginning of the return of the squadron, where a national salute of 21 guns was fired. The tomb, standing high, white and solemn, far above the waters of the river, looked to be built upon a foundation of faces. For the first time in the parade the battleships drew together. Just at the point of return there was a momentary lull, as if expectant of the climax.

Salute to Dead Hero.

Suddenly, from the sides and turrets of the battleships there was a vivid flash; following this a tremendous roar announcing the first gun of the national salute. The heavy smoke curled and tumbled down towards the water and up into the air until the ships had been almost hidden, but the roar, coming again and again, seemed to rock the waters themselves. It was an imposing spectacle as the big battleships boomed a salute to the nation; as the warships saluted the final resting place of Gen. Grant, and the guns that sounded the knell of Admiral Cervera's ships at Santiago boomed a reverential obeisance to the dead hero.

The salute ended, the return of the squadron along the line of review was begun. It was a repetition of the enthusiastic scenes on the way up the river. Every whistle that could be brought into its use played its part; every bell, every band joined in honoring the fleet, and above all were the resounding echoes of the shouts from on water and on land.

The parade of the ships, from the time it passed the battery on its way up the river to the time it repassed on its way to anchorage off Tompkinsville, S. I., occupied just two hours and 35 minutes.

VISITS THE PRESIDENT.

Admiral Sampson Calls Upon the Chief Executive and Consults Over Future Plans.

Washington, Aug. 23. — Admiral Sampson called on President McKinley Monday and spent 35 minutes with him in discussion of the Cuban commission's plans and other matters.

The president shook the admiral's hand very cordially and inquired about his experience in commanding the fleet in the Cuban waters. Admiral Sampson referred briefly to a number of the important incidents in the war, and in response to an inquiry from the president expressed his gratification at the achievement of July 3, when Admiral Cervera's fleet was annihilated.

The plans of the commission to arrange for the evacuation of Cuba were talked over, and the president was asked as to whether formal instructions would be given the commission. Mr. McKinley told the admiral that written instructions would be given the commission in a few days. The talk along this line was of a general nature and laid down no strict line of policy. No time had been fixed for the commission's departure. Pending the receipt of the president's written instructions Admiral Sampson will go to his home in New Jersey to spend a few days.

THOUSANDS IN CAMP.

Nearly Every State in the Union Represented at the National Gathering of Uniform Rank of Knights.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 23.—The national encampment uniform rank Knights of Pythias was formally opened at Camp Cosgrove, north of this city, with nearly every state in the union represented and with between 12,000 and 13,000 men in the camp.

The order is very prosperous. The major general's report shows an excellent condition both with respect to finances and to membership. The total receipts for the fiscal year ended March 31 were $11,785 and total expenditures $9,192. The total membership of the uniform rank is 45,000.

Michigan Prohibitionists.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 24.—Samuel Dickie, of Albion, was chairman of the prohibition state convention, which met here and nominated the following ticket:

Governor, Noah W. Cheever; lieutenant governor, N. Norton Clark; secretary of state, John Sweet; state treasurer, Robert King; auditor-general, Henry Andrus; land commissioner, Jacob Van Zollenberg; attorney-general, Myron H. Walker; superintendent of public instruction, David S Warner; member of state board of education, Delevan B. Reed.

Blanco Ordered to Fight.

Madrid, Aug. 24.—At the cabinet council Gen. Correa, minister of war, read a telegram from Capt. Gen. Blanco, in which he informs the government that the Cuban insurgents continue attacking the Spanish everywhere. In consequence of this report the council instructed Gen. Blanco to resume an offensive attitude toward the insurgents only.

A Fatal Collision.

Sharon, Mass., Aug. 22.—A frightful rear-end collision occurred in the Sharon station of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad last night, when an express train which was running as the second portion of a long train crashed into the first section, composed of local cars. As a result seven persons were killed and 26 seriously injured.

Wards of America.

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 22.—The national conference on the foreign policy of the United States closed its session here after passing resolutions asking that islands taken from Spain be considered as wards of America and commending President McKinley for his course in striving for peace and then pushing the war.

Postal System of Hawaii.

Washington, Aug. 24.—The postal system now in operation in the Hawaiian islands will be retained pending the recommendations of the Hawaiian commission, which has just begun its labors there. This announcement was made by Postmaster-General Emery Smith at the white house.

HAWAII JOINS THE UNION

Stirring Incidents Mark the Raising of the Stars and Stripes at Honolulu.

AUGUST 12 IS NOW A HISTORIC DATE.

President Dole Yields Up the Islands and Minister Sewall Accepts the Transfer—The National Salute Is Given and the Oath of Allegiance Is Taken.

San Francisco, Aug. 23.—The steamer Belgic brought the following:

Honolulu, Aug. 12.—Precisely at eight minutes to 12 o'clock to-day the Hawaiian flag descended from the flagstaffs on all the government buildings, and at exactly five minutes to the same hour the stars and stripes floated on the tropical breeze from every official flagstaff.

An Impressive Ceremony.

The ceremony was a most impressive one. To hear the strains of "Hawaii Ponoi" for the last time as a national anthem; to hear the bugle blow taps as the Hawaiian ensign sank from its position, and to notice the emotion of many who had been born under it and had lived their lives under it, was solemn. But then came the bright call for the raising of Old Glory and the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" broke forth as that banner was unfurled to the breeze. Then the cheers broke forth, and eyes that had been dim for a few minutes became bright and lightened up when the stars and stripes blew out.

Proceedings in Detail.

The ceremonies began with the departure of the First regiment of the national guard of Hawaii from their shed at ten minutes to ten in the morning. The parade was headed by a detachment of 26 police, under command of Capt. Kane and Lieut. Warren. Then came the Hawaiian band and the drum corps.

The regiment marched to the boat landing to escort the troops from the Philadelphia and Mohican, which were already drawn up on shore. The United States forces were commanded by Lieutenant Commander Stevens, and consisted of one company of marines and two of blue jackets from the Philadelphia, a company of blue jackets from the Mohican and an artillery detachment of two guns and 42 men. The naval detachment was headed by the flagship's band.

At the Stand.

Several hundred citizens' guard preceded the troops up the main avenue and took a station on the left of the stand. The police deployed on either side of the avenue. The Hawaiian band took up a position on the right of the platform, and the Philadelphia band on the left. The First battalion of the Hawaiian regiment occupied the immediate left of the stand, and the Second battalion was on the right.

The United States troops were stretched across the avenue in double file, the marines being in front.

President Dole Arrives.

As soon as President Dole and his cabinet came from the executive building to the platform, the justices of the supreme court, followed, and then Admiral J. N. Miller and United States Minister Harold Sewall came down the steps, followed by Capts. C. H. Wadleigh, of the Philadelphia, and S. M. Book, of the Mohican, and their staff of officers, and Col. Barber, of the First New York regiment.

The Transfer Is Made.

The ceremonies opened with prayer by Rev. G. L. Peterson, pastor of the First Methodist church, of this city.

United States Minister Sewall then rose, and, addressing President Dole, who had risen, presented him with a certified copy of the joint resolution of congress annexing the Hawaiian islands to the United States.

President Dole answered, acknowledging the making of a treaty of political union, and formally yielded to Minister Sewall, as the representative of the government of the United States, the sovereignty and public property of the Hawaiian islands. Mr. Sewall replied:

"Mr. President: In the name of the United States I accept the transfer of the sovereignty and property of the Hawaiian government. The admiral commanding the United States naval forces in these waters will proceed to perform the duty entrusted to him."

Hawaii's Flag Comes Down.

The Hawaiian band played "Hawaii Ponoi," the national anthem. Col. Fisher gave the order to the national guard battery, stationed on the executive grounds in command of Lieut. Ludwig, to fire the national salute of 21 guns, which was also repeated by the Philadelphia. As the echo of the last gun reverberated in the hills a bugle sounded, and the national ensign of Hawaii came slowly down until it reached the ground, never to go up again.

Stars and Stripes Go Up.

There was a short pause, and then the admiral nodded slightly to Lieut Winterhalter, who gave the order: "Colors, roll off." The flagship band struck up the well-known strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," and as the stars and stripes slowly ascended there was breathless suspense. But as it reached the top cheers broke forth from the crowds below, and salutes of 21 guns were again fired by the Hawaiian battery and the Philadelphia.

A few minutes after the hoisting of the official flag others were raised from two side towers and the military headquarters.

A Proclamation.

Minister Sewall then read a proclamation stating that President McKinley directs that the civil, judicial and military powers of the government shall continue to be exercised by the officers of the republic of Hawaii. All such officers will be required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States and renew their bonds to the United States government.

The powers of the minister of foreign affairs will cease, so far as the relate to diplomatic intercourse between Hawaii and foreign nations.

The municipal legislation of Hawaii and the existing customs regulations will practically remain in force until the congress of the United States shall otherwise determine.

Oath of Allegiance.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies the national guard was marched to the parade grounds, where Minister Cooper administered the oath of allegiance to Col. Fisher. The colonel then administered it to his officers, and the captains to the men. The regiment then escorted the naval battalions to their boats, and returned to the drill shed to sign the roll.

A ball at the executive building, at which 2,000 guests were present, was the culmination of the festivities which followed the ceremony of flag raising.

The West Indies Our True Market.

(Worthington C. Ford in the September Atlantic.)

It is not in Asia that new opportunities for American commerce should be sought, says Worthington C. Ford in the September Atlantic. A monopoly, even partial in its nature, of the Cuban and Peurto Rican markets would offer far larger returns in a year than a long period of Asian trade. Not finding a market in Spain for their chief products these islands sought others, and the United States naturally absorbed a good part. In sugar here was the only market; and under the stimulus of free sugar the cultivation of the cane was greatly extended in Cuba, often with American capital. In tobacco, in fruit, in coffee, and in all tropical products, the two possessions now slipping from Spain could rise to any demand made upon them.

Nor would the advantage be only on the side of imports from these islands. The West Indies have always looked to the United States for certain supplies: flour and fish, and such meats as are used, machinery, and wooden staves or box-shooks for packing their sugar and sugar products. The good quality of these articles was quite as active in determining the direction of the trade as any question of actual cheapness. Early in the century England sought to restrict the transations of her West Indies with the United States, and inflicted lasting damage upon their interests. Spain has maintained the same policy in all its vigor up to the present war, and has sucked out the life-blood from her colonies in that tribute and a host of similar taxes. Apart from certain articles of luxury, the United States could hold its own in the two islands, and here will be found the true openings for our commerce.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley of Ann Arbor Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence, No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache," "modern wonder-workers," etc.

Mr. Wooley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold, which as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal, but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

General Greely's 278 Days of Death.

The true story of those 278 days of suffering by Greely's heroic little band of explorers in the Arctic region has been told by Gen. Greely himself, for the first time, for the October Ladies' Home Journal. For years Gen. Greely has kept an unbroken silence about his fearful experience and that of his companions, as they dropped dead one by one at his side, and it was only after the greatest persuasion that the famous explorer was induced to write the story.

Dr. Miles' Nervine Restores Health

UNCLE EZEKIEL OBEAR, assessor and tax collector, Beverly, Mass., who has passed the 80th life mile stone, says: "Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine has done a great deal of good. I suffered for years from sleeplessness and nervous heart trouble. Would feel weary and used up in the morning, had no ambition and my work seemed a burden. A friend recommended Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I purchased a bottle under protest as I had tried so many remedies unsuccessfully, I thought it no use. But it gave me restful sleep, a good appetite and restored me to energetic health. It is a grand good medicine, and I will gladly write anyone inquiring, full particulars of my satisfactory experience."

WELCOME FOR RESERVES.

Michigan Representatives in the Navy Warmly Greeted on Reaching Detroit.

CHEERS FROM THOUSANDS OF THROATS

Bouquets and Wreaths Showered Upon the Brave Fellows as They March Through the Crowded Streets—Have Been Mustered Out of the Service.

Detroit, Aug 22.—The home-coming of the Michigan naval reserves, which have served so gallantly on the auxiliary cruiser Yosemite, is an event which will be long remembered by those who witnessed it. As the train dashed into the depot at four o'clock p. m. Sunday the sunburned, happy faces of Michigan's favorite sons were thrust from the windows and the flat caps with golden Yosemite upon them came off and were frantically waved toward the eager crowd awaiting them. They were still in the service of the United States navy, however, and the splendid discipline was manifested when, eyes to the front and with immovable faces, they fell into line and marched through the crowd of loving friends and relatives to the United States steamship Yantic at the foot of Bates street.

Cheer after cheer greeted the appearance of the reserves. The multitudes that lined the street numbered fully 50,000 persons. They stood back until the home part of the parade passed, but when the sailor boys hove in sight the crowds grew frantic, and for a few moments the police were powerless, while bouquets and wreaths were showered on the Yosemite's men. At the Yantic the boys were met by Mayor Maybury and the citizens' committee. A warm welcome was given by the mayor and the freedom of the city was bestowed upon them. They were drawn up and formally mustered out of the service of the United States, the order taking effect at midnight.

BOAT CAPSIZED.

Distressing Accident at a Michigan Sunday School Picnic—Two Children Drowned.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 22.—A special to the Tribune from Gaylord, Mich., says: A sailboat containing eight people, three men and five women, was caught in a squall Sunday afternoon, capsized, and two people were drowned. The dead are: Teeter Creska, aged 18, and Allie Stott, aged 15. A sudden puff of wind struck the boat and this was followed by a sharp squall. A panic ensued, and before the sails could be let down the boat turned over. The Gaylord Baptist Sunday school picnic was being held at Otsego lake, and the sailboat party was composed of members.

Barn Destroyed by a Storm.

Menominee, Aug. 22. — During a heavy electrical storm Sunday morning one of the large barns at the Kirby Carpenter company's Nine-Mile farm was struck by lightning and consumed, together with 300 tons of hay and a horse. Loss, $7,000; fully insured. The horse was killed by lightning while the teamster, Joseph Whitker, was grooming him, and the latter was injured by the horse falling upon him. There were 60 more horses in the barn.

Robbed and Murdered.

Laporte, Ind., Aug. 20.—Coroner Ketchum, of Porter county, has rendered a verdict that Charles J. Yeaden, of Alpine, Mich., was robbed and murdered. Yeaden's body was found strewn along the Lake Shore tracks between Porter and Dunn Park. The untimely fate of Yeaden makes the tenth victim who has been lured to his death in that locality.

Woman to Inspect Food.

Charlotte, Aug. 22.—Dr. Mary E. Green, of this city, president of the American Household Economic association, has been appointed a special inspector of foods by the war department. Mrs Green is an authority on this subject and is well known as a lecturer on household topics. She left for Camp Thomas, Chickamauga Park, Ga.

Cut His Throat.

Mason, Aug. 20.—William Chandler, of Holt, four miles from this city, committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, and died immediately. Five weeks ago he tried to kill himself by stabbing. He leaves a widow and three sons. His mind has been unbalanced for a long while.

Shock Was Too Much.

Battle Creek, Aug. 23. — Artemus Beach, who celebrated the seventy-first anniversary of his marriage on Monday last, died at his residence, aged 93 years. The shock received from a fall August 10 was too much for the old gentleman's constitution.

Caused by Lightning.

Menominee, Aug. 23.—During a heavy electrical storm one of the large barns at the Kirby Carpenter Co.'s nine-mile farm was struck by lightning and consumed, together with 300 tons of hay and a horse. Loss, $7,000; fully insured.

Two Drowned.

Gaylord, Aug. 23.—A sail boat on Otsego lake, near here, containing eight persons, was struck by a squall and capsized. T. Creska, aged 18, and Miss Allie Stott, aged 15, were drowned.

Found Dead.

Leonidas, Aug. 23.—R. Taylor, a well-known citizen of this place, was found dead in the road south of his residence. Apoplexy is the supposed cause.

FOUND IN THE RIVER.

Discovery of the Murdered Remains of Valmore Nichols, of Pittsfield, at Detroit.

Detroit, Aug. 20.—With the feet tightly bound together with copper wire, and with two large square stones fastened to it by the same material, the body of Valmore C. Nichols, of Pittsfield, Mich., was pulled out of the Detroit river, near the Detroit Boat club, Thursday evening. Everything points to the conclusion that the man was murdered. On the left side of the head was a wound evidently given by a blow from a blunt instrument. The pockets were turned inside out and nothing was found by which to identify the body, but with the aid of a photograph in the possession of the police it was proven to be that of Nichols, who drew $500 from the bank a week ago last Wednesday and came to Detroit to consult a spiritualistic medium regarding the discovery of valuable oil lands on his farm.

SOLDIER KNIGHTS.

Officers Furnished by the Uniformed Rank to the Volunteer Forces of the State.

Battle Creek, Aug. 22.—M. T. Curtis, of this city, grand keeper of records and seals of the Michigan Knights of Pythias, has ascertained the number of officers that the uniformed rank of the order has furnished to the volunteer forces of the state. So far the record stands: One colonel, three lieutenant colonels, 16 captains, ten first lieutenants, three second lieutenants, two first sergeants, two second sergeants, six first corporals, two second corporals, three seamen, one drum major, one regimental quartermaster, one engineer, five quartermaster sergeants, two quartermasters, one orderly, two company clerks, one major surgeon, one chaplain, one ordnance sergeant, one hospital steward, two pharmacists, two assistant surgeons, two musicians.

A PECULIAR ACCIDENT.

Woman Found Dead on a Grand Rapids Street—Had Fallen from a Buggy.

Grand Rapids, Aug. 20.—A mystifying accident occurred here Friday morning. Mary Epp, wife of David Epp, a baker, living at Mackie avenue and Cook street, was driving to meet her husband, who works in a downtown bakery nights. She was found on the pavement of Grandville avenue, stone dead. She had evidently fallen from the buggy, broke her neck and died instantly. No person can be found who saw her fall. The horse was discovered jogging toward town and bore no appearance of having been frightened. The coroner is inclined to think that the woman had heart disease and fell from her seat. She was 47 years old and had lived in this city 12 years. She leaves the widower and four children.

Named for Congress.

Saginaw, Aug. 20.—The republican congressional convention of the Eighth district, held here Friday, nominated Joseph W. Fordney, of Saginaw, for congress on the first ballot. He had 52 votes to 32 for W. A. Norton, of Clinton, and three for Emery Townsend, of Saginaw. Mr. Fordney is a wealthy lumberman and manufacturer, and has never held an office other than that of alderman in this city.

Prohibition Ticket.

Lansing, Aug. 24.—Samuel Dickie, of Albion, was chairman of the prohibition state convention, which met here and nominated the following ticket:

Governor, Noah W. Cheever; lieutenant governor, N. Norton Clark; secretary of state, John Sweet; state treasurer, Robert King; auditor general, Henry Andrus; land commissioner, Jacob Van Zollenberg; attorney general, Myron H. Walker; superintendent of public instruction, David S. Warner; member of state board of education, Delevan B. Reed.

Death of Ex-Senator Mugford.

Hart, Aug. 20. — Ex-Senator Mugford died Friday morning. While in the pension office at Detroit two years ago he was stricken with paralysis, and never recovered. He was a member of the "Squawbuck" legislature, was supervisor 16 years, and postmaster during Cleveland's first term.

Eagles in Oakland County.

Pontiac, Aug. 20.—For the first time in years eagles are reported to be in Oakland county. One of these birds is located near Scott lake, near Pontiac, while Mr. and Mrs. Harmon recently saw one old and four young eagles between Northville and Novi. One was recently shot in Farmington.

Grand Peace Jubilee.

Lansing, Aug. 22.—A movement is on foot to have Michigan citizens indulge in a grand peace jubilee in connection with the dedication of the Blair statue on October 12. The design is to make the occasion one for the assembling of citizens from all parts of the state at the capitol.

Burglar Shot.

Niles, Aug. 20.—W. G. Blish, jeweler, shot and badly wounded a burglar who attempted to get into his house. A tooth and a part of the jaw of the fellow were found a short distance from the house, and he was tracked several blocks by the blood. The burglar made his escape.

Big Diamond Theft.

Charlevoix, Aug. 23.—Mrs. W. F. Stine, wife of a prominent Kansas City undertaker, who has been a guest at the New Arlington at Petoskey for the past few weeks, was robbed of $1,500 worth of diamonds and a small sum of money at the Charlevoix swimming pool.

Fordney Nominated.

Saginaw, Aug. 22. —The republicans of the Eighth district nominated J. W. Fordney for congress on the first ballot.

HOW A WOUND HEALS

When the Blood is Pure a Wound Heals Quic

The Fact Demonstrated in the Case of a Baptist Clergyman of Ashley, Ohio.

From the Times, Ashley, Ohio.

Elder A. S. Shoemaker has been a lifelong resident of Ashley, Ohio, and is favorably known by a wide circle of friends in this part of the state. For many years he was a prominent Baptist minister. He has been Mayor of Ashley for three successive terms, filling the position with dignity and honor, and has held other offices of trust.

He is sixty-six years of age, hale and hearty, and attributes his present healthful condition entirely to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"For about twenty-five years," he says "I was afflicted with rheumatism and was constantly in pain. I could not remain in one position for but a few moments at a time and could sleep but little at night. I was dragging out a miserable existence. Especially in damp, lowery weather I would be very miserable. I frequently remarked that I was a traveling barometer, as I coul always tell when a change in the weather was coming. I tried a great many remedies that were recommended, but they did not help me.

"One day while at work and complaining of my pain in the presence of Mr. Elias Bishop, a neighbor, he asked me if I had ever tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People; I told him no. I had never heard of them. He advised me to try them, saying they had benefited him and might help me. I replied, that I had no faith in any medicine as I had tried so many different remedies without receiving any benefit that I did not think it worth while to throw away more money.

"Time passed on for nearly a year until one night I was suffering intense pain and I thought of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and concluded to try them. The morning I went to the drug store and purchased a box of the pills and commenced using them according to directions.

"It was the wisest thing I ever did. By the third night after commencing their use I went to bed and slept all night without a particle of pain. I continued taking the pills until I used five boxes and have not had any symptoms of my old trouble since. That time, now two years ago.

"Just after I stopped the use of the pills I met with an accident. In chopping wood I cut my foot very badly, the axe going entirely through the instep of my foot. I thought the wound would be very hard to heal for a man of my age, but to the surprise of everybody it healed quickly without any difficulty. I attribute this also to the good condition of my blood through the use of the pills."

In rheumatism the blood has a poison or impurity which irritates the sensitive tissues that unite the joints and cover the muscles, thus causing those indescribable tortures which rheumatic sufferers endure. Rheumatism is always dangerous as it tends to attack the heart.

Years ago those afflicted were bled, thus taking away some of the impure blood as a remedy the balance. This folly is now abandoned, and to-day physicians prescribe and druggists recommend the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, as these marvelous vegetable pills go directly to the seat of the trouble exerting a powerful influence in purifying and enriching the blood by eliminating poisonous elements and creating health-giving forces, thus making them a remedy for curing this disease.

You cannot stop brain plant ea you stop going to school. The most you can do is to select your teachers.

The 10 cent trial size of Ely's Cream Balm which can be had of the druggist is sufficient to demonstrate its great merit. Send 10 cents, we will mail it. Full size 50 cents.

ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y. City.

Catarrh caused difficulty in speaking and to a great extent loss of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm dropping of mucus has ceased, voice and hearing have greatly improved.—J. W. Davidson, Att'y at Law, Monmouth, Ill.

It is easy enough to say bright things; the difficult part is to think of them.

To Cleanse The System

Effectually yet gently, when costive or bilious, to permanently overcome habitual constipation, to awaken the kidneys and liver to a healthy activity, without irritating or weakening them, to dispel headaches, colds, or fevers, use Syrup of Figs, made by the California Fig Syrup Co.

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and will reproduce the music of the best orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for entertaining at home or in the society of everybody it healed quickly without any difficulty. I attribute this also to the good condition of my blood through the use of the pills.

ering. You can sing or talk to it and reproduce immediately and as often as you your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines have only records of cut and dried subjects, prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. This instantly awakens new interest and its charm is fresh. The reproductions are clear and true.

Graphophones are sold for Cash or on Easy Payments

Manufactured under the patents of Bell, Edison and Macdonald. Our establishment quarters of the world for Talking Machine Supplies. Write for catalogue.

The Little Queen's Picture.

Wilhelmina, who is to be crowned queen of the Netherlands on September 6 next, has personally sent to Mr. Bok, editor of The Ladies' Home Journal—himself a Hollander by birth—one of her private portraits for publication in the next number of his magazine. It is the last portrait which will be taken of the little lady before her coronation, and will be printed in connection with a specially prepared sketch, showing the personality of the first Queen of Holland from every point of view.

Floyd Cooper and some other boys were experimenting with steam one day last week, when they filled a large can with water, and they thought they could get up steam and try and run some machinery with which they were experimenting. The result was an explosion, and the hot water and steam were thrown over young Cooper in such a manner that he was so badly scalded he was compelled to remain in bed for several days.—Hudson Post.

SYRUP OF FIGS

NEVER IMITATED—QUALITY.

THE EXCELLENCE OF SYRUP OF FIGS is due not only to the originality and simplicity of the combination, but also to the care and skill with which it is manufactured by scientific processes known to the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only, and we wish to impress upon all the importance of purchasing the true and original remedy. As the genuine Syrup of Figs is manufactured by the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. only, a knowledge of that fact will assist one in avoiding the worthless imitations manufactured by other parties. The high standing of the CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP CO. with the medical profession, and the satisfaction which the genuine Syrup of Figs has given to millions of families, makes the name of the Company a guaranty of the excellence of its remedy. It is far in advance of all other laxatives, as it acts on the kidneys, liver and bowels without irritating or weakening them, and it does not gripe nor nauseate. In order to get its beneficial effects, please remember the name of the Company—

Ten Million Wheelmen.

It is stated by competent authority that there are ten million people in America who are bicycle riders. Probably each one gets an average of one hurt in a season, and that is just when Henry & Johnson's Arnica & Oil Liniment gets in its good work. Nothing has ever been made that will cure a bruise, cut or sprain so quickly. Also remove pimples, sunburn, tan, or freckles. Clean and nice to use. Take it with you. Costs 25 cents per bottle. Three times as much in a 50 cent bottle. We sell it and guarantee it to give satisaction or money refunded.

SUMMER CATARRH

Catarrh of the bowels, because it is most prevalent in the summer months, is called summer catarrh.

It surprises many that bowel trouble is catarrhal. Dr. Hartman's books make this plain. Write to the Pe-ru-na Medicine Co., Columbus, O., for them. They tell all about catarrh and how Pe-ru-na cures it wherever located.

"I had chronic diarrhœa for fifteen years," writes Mr. T. E. Miller, Grand Prairie, Tex. "I tried many medicines and doctors in vain. At last Pe-ru-na was recommended, and it relieved and cured me at once."

Mr. John Harting, 633 Main St., Cincinnati, O., writes: "My wife and myself took your Pe-ru-na for chronic diarrhœa and it cured us. No doctor or medicine we tried before helped us."

Mr. Edward Wormack, Ledbetter, Tex., writes: "Pe-ru-na for bowel troubles is unequalled by anything in my experience. I owe my life to Pe-ru-na, and shall always recommend it to those suffering as I was."

Mr. John Edgarton, 1020 Third Ave., Altoona, Pa., says: "I suffered from dysentery for three years I took Peru-na and am now well."

Action may not always bring happiness, but there is no happiness without action.

"I had a running, itching sore on my leg. Suffered tortures. Doan's Ointment took away the burning and itching instantly and quickly effected permanent cure." C. W. Lenhart, Bowling Green, O.

Don't think the umbrella that goes to the pawnshop is the only one that gets soaked.

For years I have been a sufferer from chronic constipation and dyspepsia. I tried different doctors and all the remedies I could hear of, but nothing helped me and I grew worse. A lady recommended Carter's Cascara Cordial to me, and I decided to try it, and am very thankful that I did, for it completely cured me; my friends were astonished, for they thought I would never be any better. I take great pleasure in recommending it, for I know of others whom it has helped as well as myself.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

Lima, O., Aug. 20.—There is a lively war going on between the Detroit & Lima Northern and the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton roads over the effort of the former to get across the latter's track at Wapakoneta. The grading is completed up to the right of way of the latter company, and they got out an injunction to prevent them from crossing their tracks. The court granted a temporary order and the case will be tried before Judge Sheets Monday morning. Last night the Detroit & Lima Northern Company began condemnation proceedings against Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Company to compel them to give them the crossing over their tracks they desire. The Lima Northern road does not want to pay the C. H. & D. the price they ask to cross their line. The companies are very lively competitors for northern travel from this city, the Lima Northern paralleling the C., H. & D. part of the way. This condition makes the affair harder for the companies to come to terms.—Toledo Blade.

Enroute to Alaska.—Letter No. 11.

Dawson, N. W. T., June 22, 1898.

Well we reached here on the 20th all right and well, and it was a very fine trip. Mail will not leave here till July 15, but there is a steamer going to start for St. Michael's tomorrow morning and there are a good many passengers going out that way to Seattle and a man has promised to take a letter out for me and mail it when he reaches Seattle; if he don't forget to mail it, it ought to reach you before the government mail would from here. I wrote you a long letter and mailed it at Fort Selkirk and hope you will get it allright.

To see the crowd of people, great number of boats and novel sights here at Dawson at present is something well worth a person's time and money. It is estimated that there are from 25,000 to 40,000 people here at present and more coming. A good many are going on down the river into American territory and, of course, a good many are scattering out into the country about here. The town is scattered along the river for about a mile and a half and boats are wedged in from two to six deep the whole length of the town. Tents are put up in every available place from the river bank to the top of the mountain almost, and there is not near room enough. You can see people sleeping around everywhere, on the ground and in boats. We have been sleeping in our boat as we could not find a place to put up our tent. We found a place on the bank near by where we got room to put up our stove and do our cooking and as we intend to stay only two or three days we can get along. There is lots of building going on and three saw mills and planing mill running night and day. There are quite a few stores and more coming in daily, besides a good many large scows and boats that have come down with general merchandise and are tied up along the bank doing business. But the greatest business of all and the one which seems to be the best patronized is the saloons and gambling and dance houses. They are very numerous and several more building, and are the finest buildings in town. They don't do much business in the day time but all seem to be crowded at night. Whiskey is "four bits" (fifty cents) a drink; it is so expensive I can't afford to get drunk, so have kept sober so far, but I have seen a lot of men who must have been better fixed financially than I or else brought their wiskey with them.

Flour is worth from $6 to $7.50 per 100 lbs., bacon 40c per lb., beans 20 to 25c per lb., sugar 30c per lb., oranges 50c each, butter $2.00, eggs $2.50 per doz., and lemons $2.50 each. A man just brought down a large scow loaded with potatoes and they are selling at $1 per lb. Another man brought in ten head of cattle and sold them for $8000. The buyer was offered $10,000 for them soon after, but refused it, and killed them. He is now selling the beef at $1.50 per lb. Moose meat is selling at $2.50 per lb., oysters $5 per qt. can. Meals at hotels and restaurants from $2.50 up. Bath costs $2.50, hair cut $1.50 and shave 75c. Wood $40 per cord and lumber $200 per M. and the nails to put it together with 30c per lb. The wages paid for common labor is $10 per day or $1 per hour. I was offered $15 per night for my services as a musician for six nights in the week from 8 o'clock in the evening to 6 in the morning. Gold dust is the common money here, every place of business having gold scales. The customer hands over his bag of dust, the proprietor helps himself to as much as he wants to make the scales balance to suit and then returns the balance, if there is any left.

There are a great many woman in the town; a good many came to go into business for themselves, such as laundry, bakery, etc., and I have no doubt are doing well. I went into a bakery the other day to see what the prices were. The proprietor turned out to be a pleasant, neat, nice looking, middle aged lady, and, although it was in a log hut, everything was as clean and neat as wax, and she ran the whole business alone. I asked her the price of bread and she said "Four bits a loaf," and they were pretty small loaves at that. I also asked the price of ginger bread and she smilingly answered "Only $1 a square." I think a dollar would cover the square, if it was a paper dollar. I didn't ask the price of anything more, but told her perhaps we should want some in a day or so. But we haven't yet; we have pretty good bread and ginger bread of our own make.

I had quite a little fun with Mac about his drink of lemonade yesterday. He felt thirsty while down town so went into a soft drink establishment, called for lemonade and they gave him a pretty small drink; after he had swallowed it he threw down a quarter, but he was told it was four bits and he had to put down another quarter.

All the creeks and even sides of the mountains are staked out in every direction from 30 to 80 miles. None of them have been worked a bit; they don't know as there is a cent in the dirt but they got so crazy and excited that they staked everything for fear there might be gold. A good many men have sold their outfits and gone or are going right on out. A good many have not even been out of town to see if there was a chance, but were homesick and disgusted I think; did not find it as they expected. There are chances to buy outfits as cheap or cheaper than they were bought in Seattle. A great many parties are dividing up, part are going back, some staying here, and others going to Circle City and other places in American territory. I think we will go on down the river into American country in a day or so. We had intended to go to Circle City direct which is about 300 miles farther down the river, but I think now that we will stop along at several places this side and perhaps wont get down there very soon. Don't worry if you do not hear from me often, for if you knew how uncertain the mail is in this country you would know the reason. Write to Circle City as often as you can. Goodbye. GEO.

P. S. Later. I have just found out that the government is going to try and send mail out from here to-morrow by small steamers up the River; one takes it to the foot of Rink Rapids, another between Rink and Five Fingers Rapids, another between Five Fingers and White Horse Rapids and still another from White Horse on up the lakes. I think I will send this out on that route now. I will try and get a paper and send you; there are two papers here but they are small affairs, except the price, which is four bits a single copy.

Goodby,

GEO. W. KNAPP.

Letter from Santiago.

The following letter was written about the time of the fall of Santiago by John McLeod, a nephew of M. Smeltzer:

Santiago de Cuba, July 26, '98.

DEAR BROTHER: I received your letter and was glad to hear from you. The reason I did not write was because I did not have time; we have been on the jump all the time we have been on the Island, in all kinds of scraps and when we marched up to take Santiago hill, it was awful to see the troops and men of the old 34th walk in skirmish lines and make charges. Though awful we soon got used to it, the bullets cutting the grass in front of us and bullets throwing dirt into our eyes as they went humming by; but we got the hill, the strongest place the Spaniards had, and the old Stars and Stripes float over it and over Santiago too. We hold the left flank, about 600 yards from Santiago. I saw the surrender of the city.

I am in the best of health at present, but if you have some headache powders send them. We will probably be back to the States before long. Write soon, don't wait for me. Well as we have to move, goodby. From JOHN MCLEOD.

Clarence Monaghan.

C. C. Monaghan, chief consul of the Southern California division of the L. A. W., died suddenly late yesterday afternoon at the Rossmore hotel at Santa Ana. The cause of his death was cerebro-spinal trouble, resulting presumably from a hard fall from his wheel last June. He was not considered in a dangerous condition until yesterday morning, when he was taken with light spasms. At noon his condition was considered serious, and at 4 o'clock he was dead.

Mr. Monaghan was perhaps the most active spirit among wheelmen of Southern California and was a pillar of strength to the League of American Wheelmen.

The above is taken from the Los Angeles Times, August 9th.

Clarence Monaghan, who left here but a few years ago, a bright promising boy, is well remembered by many warm friends. He was prepared here and at Raisin Valley Seminary for college and graduated at the University with honors, going from there to his sister, Mrs. Lula M. Walcott, in Los Angeles.

"His success in Los Angeles in his profession has been something phenomenal, honors have come to him from every side, his logical mind and well-balanced intellect placing him among the foremost in a large cosmopolitan city where one finds some of the brightest minds from all over the world."—Los Angeles Times.

The Omaha Exposition.

When the World's Fair at Chicago ceased to exist, it was supposed that we should ne'er look upon its like again. However, the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha has effectively reproduced in similarity all of the buildings which made the White City so attractive in 1893.

It does not now take weeks to wander through grounds and structures and then be compelled to go away with a jumble of ideas, for the Omaha Exposition people have profited by past experience, and have so improved the arrangement of exhibits that no more than two or three days of time need be consumed in admiration and inspection of the marvelous resources of the West, collected together in the chief city of Nebraska.

Even the new Midway, is a reproduction of the far famed Street of All Nations of 1893, with many improvements on the original.

The electric lighting of the buildings, grounds and lagoon at night makes a scene of enchanting beauty, alone worth traveling a thousand miles to see.

The means of communication between the city and the grounds are ample, and the distance to be traversed is short.

The ways of reaching Omaha are innumerable, but the chief among them is the direct Chicago and Omaha short line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, with its electric-lighted, vestibuled trains, leaving Chicago every night at 6:15 p. m., and arriving at Omaha at 8:20 the next morning. Dining car service en route.

Excursion tickets are on sale at every coupon ticket office in the United States over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway through Northern Illinois and Central Iowa, as well as at 95 Adams St., and at the Union Passenger Station, Canal and Adams streets, Chicago.

Pioneers, Attention!

Those furnishing logs and other material for the log house on the fair grounds, will on the 29th inst., when they arrive in the city, report to me on North Winter street, where the column will be formed with the right resting on Maumee, at 11 a. m. The column will move along Maumee, east to Broad, north on Broad to Toledo, west on Toledo to Main, and south on Maine to Church street, east on Church to Dean, and thence north to fair grounds. The following named gentlemen will act as aides on that occasion:

Wm. R. Tayer, S. W. Sharp, Capt. J. W. Spear, C. E. Rogers, H. H. House, John Gregory, Charles Conklin, James Vosburg and J. R. Bennett.

B. F. GRAVES, Acting Marshal.

SOUTH SEA ISLAND CUSTOMS.

Some Peculiarities of Love Making and Marriage Among the Fiji Islanders and Others.

One would imagine that love making in Fiji was a very tame affair from the fact that marriages are often arranged while those most nearly concerned are still in their infancy. However, courtship there is quite as interesting as anywhere else, and it has some peculiar features, says the Chicago Times-Herald.

Cupid's happy hunting ground is generally a garden or a plantation, and on a moonlight evening he is generally pretty busy. At that time, high up in the branches of the bread fruit trees, those who have eyes to see may spy a pair of human love birds perched on the branches 40 feet or so from the ground. Fijian etiquette seems to demand that the fair one and her lover should occupy different branches, and should be separated by the trunk of the tree—this, at any rate, is the usual custom.

"Spare the bite and spoil the child," would probably be the South Sea island mother's rendering of the wise man's saying, for she knew nothing of the use of the rod as a means of correction.

Instead of punishing her offspring in ways known to European mothers, she pulls hair and bites some part of its body, generally selecting the fleshy part of its arm for the purpose. Thus it happens that travelers note among little South Sea islanders many bearing wounds or scars which have been produced by the mother's teeth.

The mode of caress is as queer as that of punishment. It is either to gently take hold of the child's neck with the teeth, or to pass the thumb deftly over its eyebrow or cheek.

PROBLEMS IN BUILDING.

The Settling of Huge Structures Must Always Be Carefully Provided for Before Erection.

Next to the strength of materials the distance that a building of a given weight will settle into the ground is perhaps the most serious question presented to the Chicago architects, says the Chronicle of that city. Such settlings vary with the character of the ground, and calculations of great nicety must be made to insure the future stability of the structure. Thousands of people have noticed the enormous slant of certain downtown sidewalks without understanding the reason.

"The explanation is simple. The large paving stones are solidly attached to the structure and settle with it. The architect has made most minute calculations, and when the continued pressure of the large building has packed the earth beneath it to the greatest possible extent the great flagstones will have descended to exactly the right incline for a proper drainage.

It has been a thousand times remarked that tall buildings in Chicago have been gradually crowding their more humble neighbors out of existence, and in some instances this is proving literally, as well as figuratively, true. The natural settling of tall and heavy buildings sometimes imparts a lateral movement to less heavy adjoining foundations, more or less seriously affecting the superstructure.

Jubilee of Austria's Emperor.

On December 2 next the Austrian emperor will have completed the fiftieth year of his reign and the event is to be signalized in a fitting manner. The jubilee will begin on November 30, when there will be a procession of imperial and royal personages from the Hofburg to St. Stephen's cathedral, where a grand Te Deum will be sung. The following day there will be a court dinner, a dinner for all the generals of the Austro-Hungarian army and a gala performance at the imperial opera.

An Artificial Sea Breeze.

One of the features of a new hospital building in Berlin is to be a large room in which patients suffering from lung diseases can breathe air artificially impregnated with salt.

Connecticut claims a parrot 118 years old. It has been for 100 years in one family, having descended from father to son through two or three generations.

Toledo Excursion on Sunday Aug. 28

The D. T. & M. R. R. will run an excursion from Allegan to Toledo and return. Train will leave Allegan at 5:25 a. m Returning, train will leave Toledo at 6 p. m. Tickets will also be good on train leaving Toledo 7:30 the following morning. Do not miss this chance As it is the opening of all the theaters in Toledo; besides the attractions at the Casino and Presque Isle, and the various boat rides on Lake Erie, all of which will tend to make the day attractive.

"A certain girl was named Mary at her birth," says an exchange. "When she grew up she dropped the 'r' and it was May. When she began to shine socially she changed the 'y' to 'e' and her name was Mae. About a year she was married and now she has dropped the final letter and spells it plain 'ma.'"

To return. Tecumseh is to have a theatrical treat. The Maxwell Stock Company are to appear here Sept. 1st 2nd and 3rd in repertoire. Mr. Maxwell is well known to all theater-going people and his name coupled with the above is all that is necessary to assure a good performance by a No. 1 company. Mr. Maxwell's repertoire has been in the city several days arranging for his appearance here. It is seldom that we are favored by such a company as the Maxwell's and let all who can attend, they will surely get their moneys worth.

The manner in which some people use their brains would to say the least lead one to believe they were sadly out of practice. Wednesday afternoon a workman cut down a tree on one of our principal streets, chopped it into stove wood and a big heap of brush and left the whole thing out in the public street all night. After half a dozen people had run into the obstruction, complaint was made and an officer placed a lantern there. It would have been no more than he deserved if the man who did the chopping had been made to get out in the night and clear away the rubbish left so carelessly.

John Mull was exhibiting a couple of fine pickerel to admiring friends this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Garlinghouse, who have been making a week's visit with relatives in Hillsdale county, returned home yesterday.

The 31st regiment have been transferred to Knoxville, Tenn., and letters from there state that they have an excellent camp, on high ground and supplied with pure water, that the sick list is diminishing and the general health of all improved.

MILL BURNED

Self-explanatory Letter from E. M. Lewis.

Millersburg, Mich., Aug. 22, 1898.
TECUMSEH HERALD:

My friends in and about Tecumseh have no doubt heard of the burning of my mill and about thirty thousand feet of lumber on the night of the 11th of August, which is a total loss to me and a very bad loss to the village of Millersburg. We have every reason to think the mill was set on fire by some unknown person. Had just got the mill and everything around it in good shape for doing business and had large orders to fill at the time. My friends here insist that I shall rebuild at once with the latest improved machinery and larger capacity, which I am considering at this time. I send you clipping from the Presque Isle County Advance.

Respectfully, E. M. LEWIS.

The burning of the Lewis saw mill at Millersburg on Friday was unquestionably the work of an incendiary. Like all cowardly deeds of this nature the proof is probably impossible to obtain, but the citizens of Millersburg are almost unanimously agreed on this point, and feel that, although they cannot prove the crime, they are morally certain that they could name the perpetrator. The loss seems to have been a complete one and includes several thousand feet of hardwood lumber. There was no insurance.

The people of Millersburg and the whole township of Case are most anxious to see Mr. Lewis rebuild the mill, which he probably will do, as we understand he has plenty of timber and good financial men back of him. The Advance, while deeply sympathizing with Mr. Lewis in his loss, is also amongst the number of those who hope to see him rebuild. Presque Isle county wants more men of Mr. Lewis' stamp and cannot afford to loose any of those she has. —Presque Isle County Advance.

SOLDIER, REST !

An Immense Concourse of Friends Pay Final Respect to Marvin Gray.

When death calls one of those who have gone forth at the call of country, to his final rest, the Nation mourns. When word was received here that our village had suffered its first loss by death in the present war, and one who had gone forth in all the vigor of his young manhood was returning to his home wrapped in dreamless sleep, our people with one accord mourned with his stricken family in their bereavement.

Marvin Gray was a member of the 31st Michigan Volunteer Band and one of our finest musicians. Quiet and unassuming, with a determination to be first in his vocation, he had a host of friends, not only here where he was born and spent the greater portion of his life, but in many surrounding towns where he was a well known clarinet player.

The funeral was held at the Co. C armory Sunday at 4 p. m., Rev. Burleson, of St. Peter's church, officiating. The 1st Regiment band of Adrian attended and furnished music. The Tipton band boys also attended, as did Co. C with 30 men, ex-members of Co. C, 50 men and Beers Post, 40 men, making a total escort of 150. Six members of the Tecumseh Band acted as pall bearers. The floral offerings were beautiful and profuse, three of the finest being a harp from Co. C 31st, a lyre from the 31st Infantry Band and a spray from the 31st Infantry Trumpeters. As the sun dropped behind the horizon the mortal remains of our comrade and hero were laid to rest awaiting the bugle's revielle sounded from another world.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to our many friends for their assistance and sympathy in our bereavement. To the 1st Regiment Band and to the 31st Michigan Volunteers.

Harris, who makes switches from combings, repairs and colors old switches, and who also makes a specialty of hair cleaning and treating of scalp diseases, will be in Tecumseh from Aug. 30th to Sept. 2, again from Sept. 27th to 30th. Any one desiring any work done in this line, drop a card to Box 276, Tecumseh, or leave word at Theo. P. Wood's residence.

—The Maxwell Stock Company comes next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. It will be the largest repertoire show that has ever visited our city. Turn out and see them. Price only 10 cents Reserved seats 10 cents extra.

HEAD FOR BUSINESS.

Remarkable Financial Success Achieved by Mrs. McAdow.

She Succeeded in Making a Vast Fortune in a Country Where Scores of Able Men Had Made Dismal Failures.

[Special Washington Letter.]

A RETIRED business man who formerly resided in Montana, but is now making his home on Capitol hill, tells an interesting story of the life of an ambitious and energetic young woman who by her own business sagacity and astuteness not only earned for herself and her husband a living, but has become a millionaire.

"Mrs. McAdow," he says, "is one of the richest women in the state of Montana. She has earned her possessions by her own energies. Before going west she was married in New York, but her married life was a failure and she accordingly went west on her own responsibility. She had saved quite a considerable sum of money, and on her way west she stopped at St. Paul and made an investigation of the prospects which the various cities of the northwest offered to investors. She finally decided to put some money in lots at Miles City, Mont. She invested quite a sum and purchased title to a number of lots in the most promising part of the city. After a few years the property appreciated and she realized quite a sum out of the investment. She possessed remarkable business sagacity and understood how to invest her money. In the meantime she had married a gentleman named Bud McAdow, and she still bears his name. He was a lawyer of some note, and had some interests of his own, but just at that time he was in somewhat straitened circumstances, because the mine owned by himself and partner was not paying, although it was a very valuable possession and could be made to produce abundantly if properly worked. It was learned that a prominent politician of Helena, Sam Houzer, who was afterwards the governor of Montana, was anxious to buy the mine and relieve the owners of their debts, which had been incurred as the result of the improvements they had made. But Mrs. McAdow was too sharp. The indebtedness of McAdow and his partner amounted to $11,000, and she consented to clear off the debt if they would deed the title of the mine to her in her own name.

"She had the money on hand, as she had realized about that much off her investment in Miles City, and the proposition being satisfactory to her husband and the other part owner she bought the mine from them. In a short time she had that mine running and bringing her immense profits, for it was a very rich vein of gold, and was considered the finest in that section of the state. It is a well known fact out there that her mine furnished Mrs. McAdow with a surprisingly large income, and it is said that one month she took out $75,000 worth of gold bullion. She was a rather peculiar woman; that is, she had peculiar characteristics. She was not very prepossessing in appearance, and did not dress like a woman who was the possessor of a fortune. She always carried the bullion to the point of shipment herself. She had a little buckboard and a fast horse, and in carrying the precious ore to the town she packed it away in an old cloth trunk which she placed in the front of her vehicle. It was known, of course, that she owned the mine, but very few knew how much it was producing, and so she made constant trips back and forth to town, carrying the precious gold without even exciting a particle of suspicion. But after awhile it was noised around that Mrs. McAdow had struck a rich vein and was every day taking out gold which was worth almost a fortune. It soon got to the hearing of Sam Houzer, and as he was a very wealthy man he concluded that Mrs. McAdow's mine would be a good investment for him. He sent out one of his agents to negotiate with the owner, but Mrs. McAdow in the meantime learned of his intentions and refused to make any bargain with his representatives. He had offered her $100,000 for the mine, but she sent back word that she would not take less than $500,000 for it, and that she would only deal with him in person. Several weeks passed and no word was received from Sam Houzer, and at last he presented himself and said that he had come to take Mrs. McAdow at her word, and offered her $500,000 for the mine. After some deliberation on her part she consented to sell and it was transferred to him.

"The new owner took hold of the mine, and began to operate it, but had not gone far when the vein of gold was lost. In the language of mine experts, it 'bulged.' The operators started to dig to one side, as they believed without a doubt that the vein extended in that direction. After some time spent in futile attempts to find the vein the effort was abandoned, and the owner found that he had bought a mine which appeared to be worthless. He had paid Mrs. McAdow $350,000 in cash, and had given his note for the remainder. He immediately made the offer to deed back the property to Mrs. McAdow for the $150,000 which he still owed her. She consented to this, for she knew that he was mistaken about the worth of the mine, and she believed that there was still a prize hidden in it. After she had taken it again, she got back her old superintendent, and directed him how to search for the vein. She was really a practical miner herself, and after seven days spent in probing the vein was found, and it turned out to be as rich as it formerly was. I am not exaggerating when I say that the mine immediately began to pay at a surprising rate, and during one month she took out $48,000 worth of gold bullion."

Mrs. McAdow still has mine possessions, and is quite wealthy now, and has a beautiful home in one of the prominent cities of Montana. Her husband is an excellent lawyer, and was at one time a member of the state legislature. She spends part of her time in traveling and enjoys life to its fullest extent. She was in Washington during the last meeting of the Woman's Rights society, and met Miss Susan B. Anthony. They formed an intimate acquaintance, and Miss Anthony was afterward entertained by Mrs. McAdow at her home in Montana.

While the women of the society were holding a meeting in the parlor of a prominent hotel in Washington, Miss Anthony called for contributions for the cause. The ladies gave according to their financial ability, but the total amount was very small, in comparison with the demands of the occasion. Miss Anthony informed them that a great deal more money must be raised, and suggested the appointment of a committee on ways and means. At this juncture Mrs. McAdow drew out a check book, and wrote her check for $1,000. She handed it to Miss Anthony, asking her if it would be sufficient. The astounded lady leader replied that it would be enough, if the check was good for its face value. She looked at Mrs. McAdow, who was plainly dressed, and the expression on her face indicated that she doubted whether the check was worth anything at all. Mrs. McAdow said she would go to the bank with her, after the meeting was over, and have it cashed.

Miss Anthony then informed the ladies that she had a check for $1,000, which would be more than sufficient for the present emergency of the society. The meeting adjourned, and Miss Anthony went to the bank with the donor, and the check was cashed at once. That was the first meeting of the two ladies, who afterwards became such fast friends.

Mrs. McAdow has given away many thousands of dollars in charity, and has donated large sums of money to institutions and societies which have met with her approval. She is always full of business, and constantly looks after profitable investments for her money. She has had many temptations to speculate in stocks, but has always insisted that the stock market would ruin any capitalist who entered it without experience, and so she has refrained from speculation of that character. She buys lands wherever her judgment prompts her, and she has never made a mistake in any of her investments. From the time she bought lots in Miles City, she has manifested unerring judgment, and all properties purchased by her have increased in value.

It seems almost fabulous that one woman could accomplish all that she has accomplished in the business world. Tens of thousands of men have traversed the same country, put forth their energies and abilities, only to completely fail, or else to make bare livings for themselves. But this one woman has done all that has been narrated, and is likely to accomplish much more in the world of business before her career is closed. SMITH D. FRY.

MAKE YOUR OWN FILTER.

There Is No Excuse for Drinking Water Which Is Full of Germs and Impurities.

Everybody knows, or ought to know, that at this time of the year it is the height of folly to drink water that has not been previously purified in some way, either by boiling or by filtration.

Boiling is an effective way of freeing the water from impurities, and should certainly be done where no better method exists, but a useful filter can be made so easily at home, at an almost nominal cost, that there is scarcely any excuse for a household not possessing one.

The homemade filter consists simply of an ordinary decanter, a lamp glass, such as can be purchased anywhere for a few cents, by way of a funnel, and a piece of sponge or cotton wool. Some people prefer cotton wool because it can be thrown away after a time and renewed at a nominal cost. If a sponge is chosen it ought to be taken out often, cleaned in hot salt water and afterward rinsed in cold.

The sponge or cotton wool is placed for the distance of an inch in the lamp shade. This is then covered by a layer of fine white sand, which has been washed very clean, and placed in a fine lawn bag. This must be packed through the top of the glass, and spread out to fit across by the aid of a long pencil or a skewer.

On top of the sand must be placed a layer of animal charcoal which has been previously thoroughly washed by putting it in an earthen vessel and pouring boiling water upon it. This layer should be at least an inch deep and should be well pressed down upon the layer of sand. The filter is now ready for use.

Water is poured into the lamp shade and allowed to percolate slowly through to the decanter beneath. After a time the charcoal will get clogged and a little must be taken from the top and boiled for a few minutes and then spread out before the fire. It will then be as good as ever and can be thus cleansed indefinitely. From time to time, also, the whole apparatus will want cleansing, and the whole of the charcoal, as well as the bag of sand and the cotton wool, or sponge, will have to be taken out and thoroughly boiled, or, better still, replaced with new material.

Provided the filter be thus kept thoroughly clean it will yield as good results as any of the patent filters on the market costing many times the value of this simple apparatus.—N. Y. Herald.

FOR BEAUTY'S SAKE.

The Secret of a Clear, Attractive Complexion Usually Is a Perfect Digestion.

Remember that no woman can be lovely with a poor complexion, nor will cosmetics, however fine and expensive, delude the observer in the searching light of day, cautions the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The secret of a clear, beautiful complexion is perfect digestion, and in summer, especially, a light diet is sufficient for the indolent lives led by most of us during the heated term. Fruit, fresh and ripe, boiled milk, clear soup, whole wheat and rye bread are the best friends for ruddy cheeks and bright eyes. Loose clothing comes next. Tight corset, shoes, belts and bands produce coarse, red skin and give a harsh, strained look to the lips and eyes. Friction bath, cool plunges and rigorous massage, laughter and exhilarating sport make the blood bound freely, round the muscles and reduce loose, flabby flesh to normal proportions. Do not eat if you are very tired and warm. Take time to bathe the face and neck freely, loosen your clothes and rest half an hour after a shopping tour or vigorous exercise, and you will feel like spending the evening sociably. If your skin feels parched and dusty on coming in bathe the face gently in tepid water, then apply a soothing lotion, which any druggist will prepare for you, of glycerin, benzoin, alcohol and rose water, and let it dry in the skin without wiping with a towel.

To Set Color in Gingham.

To set the color in gingham, the gingham dress may be dipped in a bucket of cold soft water before washing. Madras may be treated in the same manner, which frequently will set the color. A better way, however, is to try a piece of the dress by dipping it first into salt water, then washing it, next time dipping it into an acid water before washing. In which ever way the color seems best preserved the whole garment may be washed.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Appearances and Reality.

A lot of cushions on a couch look tremendously comfortable, but it is very few women who can sit so as to make them truly so.

AN EVENING FICHU.

This Is an Indispensable Accessory to the Up-to-Date Girl's Autumn Toilet.

All young women, and some old ones too, have an evening fichu. They are easily made, cost but little, and can be thrown over thin dresses without crushing them; and at the same time they add a more effective finish to the costume.

To make one of the fichus you need first of all a good pattern. Then purchase three yards of plaid silk, choosing your own colors, as long as the silk is plaid. Lay the silk on the pattern and cut it out so that it has two long, stole ends. Cover the collar with plaited chiffon of the color of your plaid stripe and put three ruffles of the chiffon around your fichu. Edge each side of the stole ends with the chiffon and finish the front with two large rosettes of the same.

YOUNG GIRL'S HEALTH.

Mrs. S. T. Rorer Gives Some Directions Regarding Her Dress, Diversions and Diet.

"A young girl should be taught to carry her body erect, holding her abdomen in, and putting the ball of her foot first on the ground," writes Mrs. S. T. Rorer on "The Best Diet for Bloodless Girls," in the Ladies' Home Journal. "This is of the utmost importance to keep the organs in good position. The clothing should be loose, light, warm and suspended from the shoulders. Skirts should be made of light material—either wool or silk. The stockings fastened to the waist by means of supporters; the one skirt worn buttoned to the bottom of the waist, with an outside dress supported from the shoulders, should form the necessary clothing. The shoes should be made to fit the feet, with broad soles and low, broad heels. Gloves should be sufficiently loose not to stop the circulation at the wrists. A short walk each day may be taken, but fatigue should never be produced; far better to spend most of the day out-of-doors in the hammock or a steamer-chair.

"Early to bed should be the first motto. In the morning, after a sponge bath with a thorough rub, she should drink half a glass of comfortably hot water. When appetite is felt a soft-boiled egg, a piece of whole wheat bread thoroughly baked and well buttered, and a little while after a glass of cool water, not iced, may be taken. The noonday meal should consist of a good, clear beef soup, a broiled steak or roasted beef, a little boiled rice, a lettuce salad with olive oil dressing, and some simple dessert, such as whipped or Bavarian cream. After dinner, rest should be taken in the open air, either in the hammock or steamer-chair, and without reading or heavy mental occupation. For supper, beef or mutton broiled, and good whole wheat bread well buttered. At the close of this meal she should take slowly about two teaspoonfuls of olive oil and masticate it before swallowing."

Delicious Sponge Cake.

For sponge cake, weigh six eggs, take their weight in sugar, and half their weight in flour; separate the eggs carefully; add the sugar to the yolks, and beat until light; then stir in carefully the well beaten whites; sift the flour two or three times, adding it a little at a time, folding and cutting it in. Turn into a pan lined with greased paper, and bake in a quick oven for from 20 to 25 minutes.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Decorating with a Shawl.

A pleasing effect was achieved in the decoration of a music-room recently, on the occasion of a wedding, by the use of an India shawl. It was a large and fine one, with a pink center. This was spread over the grand piano, and on the pink center stood a pink jardiniere filled with apple blossoms. At the side of the piano, in a tall Chinese jar of pale pink and green, were massed more blooms of dogwood and apple-blossoms mingled.

Sweaters for Children.

Every wee baby, girl or boy, to be strictly up to date, should have a sweater for its perambulator spins. In case of a sudden cool change the sweater is easily slipped on over the baby's clothes. White pale pink and sky blue are the favorite colors.

FARM & GARDEN.

THE CORN HARVEST.

How to Rig Up a Cutter Which Does Very Effective Work on the Average Farm Field.

Any ingenious farmer can rig up a sled with knives set oblique to the runners, so that when drawn between rows of corn the cutting may be done with horse power. This plan is far better than the old hand cutter, but not up to the patented corn cutters, each of which do the work of 15 men.

Runners (a) are 5 feet of 2 by 12-inch plank. Width of sled 2 feet 10 inches. Knives (b) are 28 inches long, made of blades of an old stalk cutter, very sharp, slant slightly upward to make a slanting cut; their front end is fastened firmly to the sled by a wood screw; the back end, 18 inches from the sled, is bolted to a hardwood 2 by 4 crosspiece (c) 5 feet 10 inches long. It extends clear across the sled and is spiked on. The seat (d) is 2½ feet long, 1½ high, and spiked on. The space (e) between the knives and sled is filled with a 2-inch piece made to fit, and is fastened securely. The spring contrivance (f) for holding the strings to tie the bunches or gallows hills is just back of the seat. Mine is made from a spring from an old steel trap; when in place it is upside down from what it was on the trap. A long spike with a flattened head is driven down through the holes. The spike when flattened looks like the letter T which is turned crosswise of the hole in the spring so as to hold it down. The strings are then put under the under side of the spring, which holds them firmly; at the other end they are held in place by a wire driven in the sled and bent over them. The strings never loose or become tangled. The draw rope (g) should be fastened on the outside of runners so as not to catch stalks. Lines (h) are sometimes, but not always used. Muzzle the horse.

I cut shocks ten hills square. When starting in I cut the two gallows hill rows first and drive a bill past where the shock is to be, and stop. As I get off the sled I hold my corn in one arm and pull a twine string 3 feet long from the spring back of the seat. I set up bunches together; father reaches around and squeezes it up together while I tie it; then we each take half of our bunch by the butts and set them out to the hills so they will stand, and get on the sled and go again till we get the gallows hill row cut clear through the field; that leaves four rows on each side to cut. Turn around and take two rows back, and son on; when we get even with each shock we stop the horse, get off and set up our bunches and go on again.

With a little practice one can set up the corn so it will stand for weeks without being tied. We had some that stood all last winter that way. We let them stand from one to three days to wilt, then draw them tight about two feet from the top and tie with binder twine wound on a spool that holds enough for 80 shocks. I think this handier and not so apt to tangle; this done, the shocks will stand.—J. T. Hubbard, in Farm and Home.

TWO FARM MANAGERS.

A Bona Fide Case from Which Scores of Land Owners Can Draw a Valuable Lesson.

The following case illustrates the difference between good and bad management on the same place: A farm contained about 800 acres. The manager was a good local farm foreman. He carried about 30 brood sows to produce pigs to be sold as "roasters" in the city. The sows lived in close confinement, became uneasy, ate their pigs and there were no sales. Hay was grown in connection with some corn, oats and potatoes. The manager worked at anything and everything, while his men loped along to suit themselves. This management continued for three or four years; then an energetic superintendent took hold. He released the brood sows, cut down the feed and got them into a healthy condition; purchased a lot of sheep for early lambs, raised a quantity of roots for the sheep and horses, potatoes in quantities for early market, and made other changes of importance. The first manager received $40 per month and found, and went behind $3,000 to $4,000 a year; the new manager received $1,000 per annum and found, and made the place self-supporting. Both men were honest, faithful and industrious, but fitted for different positions.—Troy (N. Y.) Times.

Tarred Felt for Roofs.

Although tarred paper roofs are preferred for winter, yet they can be put on to advantage during the summer. They make the cheapest and best roofs if the work is well done. Fasten the felt (paper) in places and paint it with coal tar, using the tar hot, and throw enough sand on it to prevent the coal tar from running off. In three months thereafter give another coating of tar and sand, and then a coating once a year. Such a roof will last a lifetime.—Farm and Fireside.

SEEDING IN THE FALL.

Plowing Should Be Done as Soon as Possible After the Harvest Work Is Completed.

If grass or clover is to be sown in the fall it is very essential to prepare the ground in a good condition in good season in order that the seeding may be done early. Usually unless the seeding can be done sufficiently early so that the plants can secure a thrifty, vigorous start to grow and get reasonably well established before cold weather sets in it is rather poor economy to sow the seed. One of the worst difficulties or objections to fall seeding is the lack of moisture in the soil. With all seed a certain amount of moisture is essential to the securing of a good germination and a vigorous start to grow, and it is always an item to sow the seed under as favorable conditions as possible.

One advantage in plowing the ground reasonably early, taking pains to plow deep and thorough and then making the surface a good tilth, is that the fine soil on the surface acts as a mulch and adds materially in retaining moisture in the soil. And with grass and clover it is often possible to secure a good germination and a good, even stand on land plowed and prepared in a good tilth early, when, if left until the ground gets dry, there will not be sufficient moisture to induce germination.

As with nearly or quite all other farm work, if seeding is to be done in the fall the fields to be sown should be determined in good season, so that the plowing may be done as soon as possible after the harvest work is done. Get the ground in a good condition to receive the seed, and a better opportunity for securing a good stand is afforded, and if the plants are able to make a good start to grow in the fall they will be better able to stand the thawing and freezing of winter.—N. J. Shepherd, in Farmers' Voice.

FARM HOUSE PIAZZA.

One Like That Shown in the Cut Can Be Built at an Expense Everyone Can Afford.

Many houses have no shade trees near them, and a piazza or veranda is almost a necessity in the summer. A permanent porch, deep enough to form the necessary shade in summer, is objectionable in the winter, as it shuts out the light that is then needed. Besides all this, the expense in building a permanent veranda is beyond the reach of many, and altogether unnecessary in any case. The illustration shows how to make a summer veranda that has all the advantages of the expensive permanent piazza and avoids the disadvantages in the winter. The expense is so small that everyone can afford it.

Build a platform or floor of length and width desired, with or without railing. Over this at the proper height construct a light frame to be covered with striped awning goods. The frame should be of same length and width as floor or platform, or larger. In many cases the awning and platform should cover the whole front or side of the building. The frame should be attached to the building by screws, so that it can be taken down in winter. Or it can be attached with hinges and made to elevate and drop, same as awnings over windows. The frame is made of light strips of wood, and can be braced from side to side with small wires secured to the house by small screw eyelets. The awning should be carefully taken down in the fall and put away for the winter. It must be properly fastened to the frame by small, large-headed tacks to prevent it from tearing in the wind.—Ohio Farmer.

BEEN A BIGAMIST.

A Grand Rapids Man Thought He Had a Right to Get Married, But He Had Not.

Grand Rapids, Aug. 22.—Humiliating news came from over the sea for James S. Middleton, a local business man. He formerly lived in Edinburgh, Scotland, where he married in 1882. He claims that his wife drank so heavily that he was compelled to leave her. He came to this country nine years ago and four years ago he was married again, claiming that he had heard that his former wife had obtained a divorce. He has received a paper from home containing an account of divorce proceedings just brought by her, and he realizes that he has been a bigamist for four years without knowing it. His present wife is nearly heartbroken, as she did not know that he had ever been married before.

The Maccabees.

Adrian, Aug. 20.—At the convention of the officers of the Uniformed Rank of Maccabees, Brig. Gen. George H. Scott, of Toledo, who was quartermaster general, was unanimously elected major general to succeed Gen. N. C. White. Adjt. Gen. Peter J. Abt, of Detroit, tendered his resignation, and it was accepted. Gen. Scott will also fill this position. A new ritual was adopted and a committee appointed to confer with officers of the supreme tent for its approval. A resolution was adopted to hold encampments of the uniform rank biennially hereafter. The next encampment will be held in Port Huron in July in conjunction with the meeting of the supreme tent.

Careless Handling of a Gun.

Big Rapids, Aug. 22.—A young girl named Hurd, living near Mecosta village, will be lamed for life through a singular accident. A relative had returned from hunting, and pushed his double-barreled gun under the bed. The trigger caught and one barrel exploded. The family were speculating as to the cause of the explosion, when, on moving the gun from its position on the floor, the second barrel exploded, and the charge literally blew off the girl's foot.

Gang of Burglars.

Ann Arbor, Aug. 23.—Ann Arbor is being terrorized by a gang of burglars and everything points to the strong suspicion that the work is done by home talent. The third instance inside of a week occurred when Charles Davison's home was entered. The burglars secured seven dollars in money, but left a watch untouched.

Died for His Country.

Eaton Rapids, Aug. 23.—The first Eaton Rapids man to give his life to his country is Howard Covey, of company F, Thirty-fourth Michigan, who died on board the hospital ship Olivette, August 14, of malarial dysentery and was buried at sea. Mr. Covey was 18 years of age, a model young man and widow's son.

HERBACEOUS PHOTOGRAPHY.

The Juices of Certain Fruits Can Be Made to Take the Place of Nitrate of Silver.

H. N. Toply, of the department of the interior in Ottawa, who discovered recently a method of developing negatives without the use of a dark room, has discovered that the printing of photographs is not dependent on nitrate of silver. Heretofore the nitrate has had to be used in all prints, but Mr. Toply says that the juices of certain fruits are equally as good, if not better than the nitrate for photographic printing purposes. By means of this discovery a photograph can be printed upon anything—wood, pulp, and paper—which can absorb these juices. The juice is not used just as it comes from the fruit, but it is subjected to a process which Mr. Toply, of course, desires to keep to himself at present. He has been engaged in the development of the process for five years, says the New York Sun.

His attention was first directed to the possibility of "herbaceous photography," as he calls it, by the withering of the white pine, which becomes a very dark gray under sunlight. A piece of planed pine was placed under the negative and exposed to sunlight without treatment, and a permanent print on wood was obtained. Mr. Toply followed up this discovery by a series of experiments with the juices of fruits, which he found would not only turn dark gray, but would become jet black in sunlight. The process is so simple that were it brought into general use the price of photographs would be reduced to a minimum.

LATEST CENSUS SCHEME.

By Which Every Person in the World Will Be Counted in One Day.

A scheme is now on foot in Europe to make a careful census of the entire population of the earth early in the year 1900. It is the intention of the people agitating the plan to have an army of census takers start out on a particular day in every quarter of the globe and complete the work in a few hours. The returns are to be sent into a central station at Berne, Switzerland. The governments of several countries are reported to have already expressed their willingness to aid the work in every possible way, reports the New York Journal.

The takers of this great census will of course have much important data to guide them in their work. The most important results in this direction are those obtained by John Bartholomew, F. R. G. S., of Edinburgh. According to his figures the present population of the entire globe is in round numbers 1,440,650,000. This is divided up as follows: Indo-Germanic or Aryan, 545,000,000; Mongolian or Turanian, 630,000,000; negro and Bant, 150,000,000; Hottentot and Bush, 150,000; Malay and Polynesian, 35,000,000, and American Indian, 15,000,000. It is expected that the most difficult part of the undertaking will be to count accurately the population of China and the vast hordes of central Africa. Those who propose to undertake this work claim to have such influence back of them that the scheme is sure to be successful.

MEXICO AND THE PHILIPPINES

The Latter Territory Was Long a Dependency of the Former.

From the foundation of Manila in 1571 up to the year 1819 the colony of the Philippine islands was a dependency of Mexico, says the Contemporary Review. During that long period there was absolutely no direct intercourse between the mother country and her far eastern colony. Everybody and everything destined for the Philippines passed through Mexico until the American colony threw off the Spanish yoke. Thenceforth, for 51 years, communication with Spain was via the Cape of Good Hope. The commercial history of the Philippines would be too long to relate here in extenso; suffice it to say that it is a series of struggles between the colonists, who sought liberty to trade freely with Mexico and China, and the Spanish king and his councilors and the trading community in Spain, who persistently determined to curtail that freedom as much as possible. The policy of the Spanish merchant class was to hold Mexico as their exclusive market. They opposed Philippine traffic with China because this necessitated silver dollars, which they knew must come from Mexico surreptitiously, if the islanders were not openly permitted to give goods in exchange. The famous galleons, which were so frequently interrupted and seized by British privateers from the days of our Queen Elizabeth onward, formed the only connection between Mexico (Acapulco) and Manila.

Jack Pot Is Still in the Game.

A Canadian exchange is responsible for the story that an Indian belonging to the Creek nation, and bearing the hazardous name of Jack Pot, is now living in comparative peace with his four wives, and seems to be happily consoled for the death of their 22 predecessors. It may seem incredible that this jack pot could be won so many times, but he is 108 years old. The sound teeth in his head are said to be the third set with which nature has endowed him.

NEWS READINGS IN DAWSON.

An Enterprising Man Who Made $300 by Reading to the Miners All About the Maine.

Claude Smith tells a novel story about the way the news of the blowing up of the Maine was received in Dawson City. An enterprising Yankee got hold of the first copy of a newspaper containing the account. He made arrangements for getting the news abroad in this businesslike fashion, says the Portland Oregonian.

Renting a vacant saloon building, he caused bulletins to be issued giving an inkling of the news that had been received, most judiciously worded, and announcing that the full account would be read in public in the evening in the mammoth one-story log edifice next the Blue Ruin dive on Brimstone street; admission, two pennyweights of gold ranging in value from $1.50 to $1.75.

At the appointed time the miners gathered to hear the news, and 200 or more of them tossed their gold dust into the doorkeeper's scales and crowded inside. The reading was satisfactory, if the news was not, and there was no grumbling about the investment. No less than $300, and probably much more, was realized from that idea. The reader was a liberal sort of chap, and he read the other news in the paper merely as a courtesy to the assembly.

This practice grew as the nation neared war, and after the war began, and it is a frequent occurrence for a public reading of important news to be given in Dawson at so much per head for admission. And the cooped-up men pay for nothing more cheerfully than for war news. Their liberality in this matter is sometimes taken advantage of, and stale stuff palmed off for news, and even the Dawson City public is discriminating in this particular, and is strongly disposed to resent the swindle.

MAN OF SCIENCE TO THE CATS.

Bomb Invented by a German for the Benefit of Victims of Nocturnal Concerts.

Germany has made another important contribution to the field of invention. This time a man of science, who, presumably, occupies a bedroom in the rear of a city house, has invented a bomb to be thrown at nocturnal cats. The bomb is of about the size of a baseball and will explode with a loud noise upon forcible contact, but is warranted perfectly harmless.

The innovation promises great relief and satisfaction to sufferers, and a mighty saving in books and crockery. Many a tooth mug has been shivered into bits on the back fence, and there are persons who are afraid to keep small books in their rooms because of the tempting fitness of such volumes for missiles. Apples or oranges covertly stolen from the dinner table are first-rate ammunition; but, unquestionably, the bomb fills a long-felt want. Even if one's aim is inaccurate and one doesn't hit the cat, the bomb is bound to hit something and make a racket.

Pessimists say that after the first experience the noise will not make the slightest impression upon the serenader, and that exploding bombs will only add to the suffering of the neighbors. The harmlessness of the bomb is its flaw, say these vindicitive persons, and the only way to stop a cat concert is to massacre all the performers. But the German professor insists that his bomb is a boon to humanity and it certainly would provide more exciting entertainment than the ordinary missile.

BIG LOTTERY IN SPAIN.

The Government Will Try to Raise $100,000,000 for Pressing Needs by the Scheme.

Under the auspices of the Spanish government a great lottery scheme has been launched in Madrid, the receipts of which, minus the prizes, will be turned over to the government for its most pressing needs. It is thought, says the New York Times, that by September the salaries of civil and military servants recently suspended can then be made good. Circulars are being sent out all over Europe, and it is expected that 500,000,000 pesetas, or about $100,000,000, will be netted by the government. There are five capital prizes of 500,000 pesetas each. The lottery is not new to Spain, but the Spanish lottery has never been popular in other parts of Europe, investors preferring to take their chances with the Dutch or Prussian lotteries. The Spanish lottery in 1897 brought the treasury 3,000,000 pesetas. In the same year the Portuguese lottery gained 1,750,000 milreis (nearly $2,000,000). The lottery is authorized in other countries of Europe. In Italy last year the government gained 62,000,000 lire ($12,400,000), showing that the poor lazzarone was not without his savings. In Holland the official lotteries gained $300,000; in Denmark the winnings amounted to about $500,000 more. But the Prussian lottery, which is annually operated under the direct authority of the state, is the most popular. There are a number of prizes of 500,000 marks every year, and in 1897 the receipts of the treasurer amounted to over 100,000,000 marks.

AFRAID OF THE GLASS EYE.

Japanese Coolies Who Could Not Be Induced to Serve the Owner of It.

A year or two ago an artist from San Francisco who wore a glass eye came to Yokohama and established himself in a little bungalow on the outskirts of the city, says the Porkville Yeoman.

The weather was extremely warm, and before the stranger had become settled he was besieged by a number of coolies, who wanted to get the job of fanning him at night. The artist looked over the applicants, and finally selected an old man who brought excellent recommendations from his last employer.

When it was time to retire the artist took out his glass eye, laid it on a stand at his bedside and went to bed. The old man picked up his fan and the San Francisco man was soon asleep. He slept peacefully for an hour or two, when he was awakened by a chorus of buzzing insects about his head. He looked about him, and found that the man whom he had hired to fan him was gone.

The next morning when he went in search of another coolie he was amazed to discover that no one would work for him. He was looked upon as a wizard and worker of miracles, with whom it was unsafe to be alone. The old man had gone among his friends and told how the Californian had taken out his eye at night and laid it on a stand in order that he might watch his servant at night and see that he kept his fan in motion. The old coolie's story created such excitement that the San Francisco man was never able to get another Japanese to fan him after that.

COMMERCIAL ENGLISH.

Warning to Those Who Would Send Trade Circulars Abroad—A Queer Translation.

Manufactures who wish to do an export business must have their circulars and catalogues translated into foreign languages, says Engineering, but care should be taken that the translator is not only a good linguist, but also an expert in the particular business to which the documents to be translated refer. Otherwise the translation is apt to be a matter of ridicule to those to whom it is sent.

We cannot well give an instance to show how an English circular might be translated into bad German, for example, but the London Engineer gives us the following illustration of a translation from another language into English which is probably no worse than many translations from English:

"We pique ourselves," says the circular, "on making you known that in the sale of the —— has by us undertaken. This preparated, exclusively arranged by some vegetables, is entirely spoiled about something hurtful to the steam boiler blades. By our preparated every calcarious substance is neutralized, reducing it to power, and at the same time steam boiler blades are conserved from the usual corrosion, not only, but the ebulition is totally avoided, as it appears about some very interesting experiments which have been made in several establishments."

In conclusion, the circular adds: "To be willing, this preparated may be decomposed."

FUNERALS OF SENATORS.

They Range in Expense from $4.50 in One Case to $21,322.55 in Another.

The first time any part of a deceased senator's funeral expenses was paid out of public funds was on the occasion of the death of John Gaillard, of South Carolina, who died February 26, 1826. Two other senators died that year—Nicholas Van Dyke, of Delaware, May 19, and Joseph McIlvaine, of New Jersey, August 19. The average public expense incurred on account of these three deaths was $292.47, says the North American Review.

Within the next 22 years—from 1826 to 1847, inclusive—27 senators died, and the remains of 11 of them were interred at the government's expense. The average expenditure in those cases was $618.80. From 1848 to 1867, inclusive, 28 senators died, and 18 of them were buried by the senate at an average expenditure of $1,365.13. The record from 1869 to 1894 shows 30 deaths in the senate, and all but five of these were the occasion of more or less outlay of public money, the aggregate amounting to $68,849.96, an average of $2,754.

In all, up to 1894, there were 54 interments from and by the senate, and the last 13 cost more, by $4,139.82, than all the other 41. The total amount of public moneys expended on account of senatorial funerals, up to 1894, is $100,234.18, ranging from $4.50 in one case to $21,322.55 in another. The average is $1,856.37.

Russia Hoarding Gold.

Financiers want to know why Russia is accumulating such an immense store of gold, and certainly the question is not without interest to the politician, says the Nottingham Guardian. A huge gold reserve implies that a great war will not lack the necessary sinews. Why should Russia, who already possesses a larger stock of gold than any other government, keep on adding to her store of the precious coin? It is two years since she began her accumulations, and apparently she has no intention of stopping them, for the latest arrival of gold from the cape has been wholly purchased for Russian account. Yet, with a stock on hand already reckoned at £120,000,000, the need for this purchase is not very apparent. A significant feature of the case is that whenever notice is called to these Russian gold purchases they cease for awhile, only to be resumed as soon as public attention is turned another way.

THE HERO OF SANTIAGO.

Rear Admiral Schley Visits Washington and Receives a Cordial Welcome.

EVERYBODY JOINS IN THE SHOUTING.

President McKinley Thanks Him for the Success of the Memorable Naval Battle on July 3—The Work of the Puerto Rican Commission Receives Attention.

Washington, Aug. 27.—Rear Admiral Winfield S. Schley reached Washing at 4:10 o'clock Friday afternoon over the Pennsylvania railroad. He was quickly noticed at most of the stations along the line, and throughout the trip he was greeted with cheering crowds. When the train pulled into the depot here he found a compact mass of spectators which filled the depot and overflowed out into the train shed.

A Hearty Welcome.

The admiral and Mrs. Schley when they appeared were greeted with cheers and shouts of "Hurrah for Schley!" Everybody joined in the shouting and the depot attaches crowded around the admiral and insisted on a handshake. At the gates the crowd increased, and amid deafening cheers the admiral and his wife, the former with hat off, passed through two solid lines of people. A lieutenant and a squad of police with difficulty cleared a passageway to the carriage which was in waiting. Through a mass of vehicles that had been drawn up by curious drivers the hansom pulled into Pennsylvania avenue and proceeded directly to the Shoreham hotel. There were groups of cheerers all the way, and a cavalcade of cyclists formed a voluntary escort.

Calls on the President.

The admiral stayed only a few minutes at the hotel and then drove over to the navy department, where, without any preliminaries, he reported directly to Acting Secretary Allen. The latter accompanied him over to the white house, reaching there at 4:50. The president gave him a most cordial reception. The president thanked the admiral, as he had Admiral Sampson, for the success of that memorable engagement of July 3, and took occasion to say that it was that battle which brought about the surrender of Santiago.

Discuss Puerto Rican Plans.

The president then entered into a discussion of the work of the Puerto Rican commission, to which the admiral has been appointed. He went over with him the general instructions which will guide the body in arranging for the evacuation of the Spanish forces from the island and other work. During most of the conference, which occupied about an hour, Assistant Secretary of State Moore was present.

Gen. Bragg Reelected.

Milwaukee, Aug. 31.—Gen. Edward S. Bragg was unanimously reelected president of the association of survivors of the famous Iron brigade at the meeting of the association Tuesday in the rooms of the E. B. Wolcott post, Grand Army of the Republic. The election was by a rising vote and was marked by great enthusiasm on the part of 80 or 90 veterans present.

Will Not Investigate.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Secretary Alger declares that he will not investigate the charges of mismanagement against the war department. He says he proposes to stand on his record, and "if anyone can be found who can perform the duties better than I have I am willing to give way to them, but not until the unjust, brutal and untrue criticisms have ceased."

Leavenworth, Kan., Aug. 29.—A gang of convict counterfeiters has been discovered manufacturing spurious coin at the Kansas state penitentiary. The work was performed in the coal mine.

THE PRESIDENT'S OUTING.

Leaves Washington with Mrs. McKinley for Visit to His Brother's at Somerset, Pa.

HE INSPECTS CAMP MEADE EN ROUTE

Met by Gen. Graham and Staff and Driven Through the Camp—President Pleased with Its Location and the Appearance and Condition of the Men.

Washington, Aug. 29.—The president and Mrs. McKinley left Washington at nine o'clock Saturday morning over the Pennsylvania road for Somerset, Pa., where they will spend some days with Mr. Abner McKinley, the president's brother. The only other members of the party were Mr. Cortelyou, assistant secretary to the president, and Mrs. McKinley's maid.

On the Way.

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 29.—The demonstration here in honor of the president was made notable by an electric display by the Johnson company. Their electric department was illuminated throughout with an enormous arrangement of variegated lamps forming the word "Welcome," and as the presidential train passed this flashed out in bold relief, while volleys of artillery salutes were fired and all the whistles in town were blown.

Welcomed to Pennsylvania.

Hamburg, Pa., Aug. 29.—President McKinley and party were met at the station here by Attorney-General McCormick and Secretary of the Commonwealth Martin, who had been requested by Gov. Hastings to welcome the president. The greeting was cordial, and the Pennsylvanians were then presented to Mrs. McKinley.

President at Camp Meade.

Middletown, Pa., Aug. 29.—President and Mrs. McKinley spent a pleasant hour at Camp Meade. Gen. Graham had ordered a marching review in honor of his distinguished guests, but at their request the order was revoked.

After a hurried inspection of the quarters of the general and his staff President and Mrs. McKinley were driven through the camp. Company streets were scrupulously clean and the men looked their best. The president was much pleased with the location of the camp and the appearance and condition of the men. The various regiments were drawn up in line to receive the party when it arrived at their quarters.

Arrive at Somerset.

Somerset, Pa., Aug. 29.—The presidential party, composed of president and Mrs. McKinley, Assistant Secretary Cortelyou, and Maj. Webb Hayes, of the Sixth Ohio cavalry, reached Somerset by special train from Johnstown at 8:40 Saturday evening. Burgess J. H. Pisell and the members of the town council boarded the president's car and welcomed the party.

Enjoy the Journey.

The president and Mrs. McKinley are in good health, having passed a restful day, and both say they greatly enjoyed their trip to Somerset. The party will leave here at 11 o'clock today for Cleveland, reaching there in the evening.

While in Cleveland President and Mrs. McKinley will be guests at the home of Myran T. Herrick. They will go from Cleveland to Canton to pass a day at their old home, then return to Cleveland and leave there Friday for New York, reaching there that evening.

The president will visit the camp at Montauk Point on Saturday and return to Washington that evening.

COMMISSIONERS CHOSEN.

Messrs. Day, Davis, Frye, Reid and White Have Been Selected by President McKinley.

Washington, Aug. 27. — Secretary Day, upon leaving the cabinet meeting Friday afternoon, announced that Whitelaw Reid had been selected as peace commissioner, and that Justice White, of the United States supreme court, had accepted the appointment made several days ago. This completes the commission, which is as follows: Secretary of State Day, Senator C. K. Davis, of Minnesota; Senator William P. Frye, of Maine; Whitelaw Reid, of New York, and Justice White.

John Moore, of Massachusetts, now assistant secretary of state, will be secretary of the commission, and J. R. MacArthur, of New York, assistant secretary.

Garcia Is Ousted.

Santiago de Cuba, Aug. 31.—Gen. Garcia has been relieved of his command by Gen. Gomez, acting under instructions from the provisional government. This is owing to disapproval of his action during the Shafter incident, and in view of the fact that Garcia is persona non grata to the American government.

TROOPS ARE COMING HOME

The Last of Gen. Shafter's Army Is Now En Route to the United States.

THE GENERAL AND HIS STAFF SAIL.

Puerto Rico Troops Are Also Returning—Spanish Transports Leave Santiago with Soldiers — Proposed Visit of the President to Camp Wikoff Pleases Gen. Wheeler.

Washington, Aug. 26.—The last of Shafter's army has sailed from Cuba. The following dispatch was received at the war department late Thursday afternoon:

Santiago, Via Hayti, Aug. 25.—Adjutant General United States Army, Washington: Command all embarked this morning except Twenty-fourth infantry, detachment of recruits for First Illinois volunteer infantry and a part of the Ninth Massachusetts volunteer infantry, all of which will embark to-morrow morning on transports now here. Gen. Butt, with the First Illinois on Berlin and Berkshire, with 350 convalescents, leaves this morning for Montauk Point. I will leave with headquarters and one company of First infantry on Mexico by noon to-day.

Puerto Rico Troops Coming Home.

Washington, Aug. 26. — Orders have been issued directing Gen. Miles to send home from Puerto Rico all troops not actually needed for service there.

Won't Disband the Navy.

Washington, Aug. 26.—Acting Secretary Allen said in an interview that there is no intention on the part of this government to diminish the fighting strength of the North Atlantic squadron until peace has actually been declared. For the present and pending peace negotiations the squadron under the command of Rear Admiral Sampson will be kept intact with a view to meeting any emergency that may arise.

Gen. Shafter Sails for Home.

Santiago de Cuba, Aug. 27.—Gen. Shafter and his staff sailed Friday afternoon on the United States transport Mexico. His departure was not marked by special incident. On arriving at Montauk Point Gen. Shafter will go with Maj. Miley to Washington to meet President McKinley and Secretary Alger, afterward proceeding to San Francisco. Col. Greene, of Gen. Shafter's staff, and captain of the signal corps, will remain for another ten days or until he is relieved by Capt. Leigh, who, with 50 men of the signal corps, is expected on the Seguranca.

Spanish Transports Sail.

Santiago de Cuba, Aug. 27. — The Spanish transports San Francisco, San Augustin and Colon left this afternoon for Spain with 4,568 Spaniards, including 15 officers and their families and four priests. Eight men died on the way to the ships. Their corpses were "checked off" as passengers. It appears that there have been many instances of this during the embarkation of the Spaniards, the transportation company thus being enabled to collect the passage money, a thing readily managed under the easy inspection of the Americans.

Letter from Gen. Wheeler.

Washington, Aug. 27.—The president has received the following letter from Gen. Joe Wheeler:

"Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, N. Y., Aug. 26.—To the President of the United States: I was very glad to hear that you would visit Montauk Point very soon. The visit of the secretary of war has accomplished more than I can express. He has promptly corrected evils, made valuable suggestions, given directions regarding administration. In addition, his personal visit to 1,500 sick soldiers in the hospitals has cheered them up, and it is difficult to adequately convey to you the change for the better since the secretary's arrival. The announcement that you will visit the soldiers has already added to this improvement, and your presence here for even a single day will accomplish good, the great extent of which you can only realize after you have made your visit.

"WHEELER, Commanding."

Fairly Satisfactory.

Washington, Aug. 27.—A telegram from Secretary Alger, at Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, was read at the cabinet meeting Friday. Secretary Alger stated that he found the existing conditions at the camp fairly satisfactory.

Gen. Merritt Sails.

Manila, Philippine Islands, Aug. 31.—The United States transport China left here Tuesday, having on board Maj. Gen. Merritt and his staff. The general is bound for Paris, where he will take part in the Spanish-American peace conference. Maj. Gen. Otis is acting governor of Manila. Gens. Greene and Babcock, with their staffs, are bound for Washington.

No Mines in Havana Harbor.

Madrid, Aug. 27.—Gen Correa, minister of war, has replied to the inquiries of M. Cambon, the French ambassador at Washington, concerning the condition of Havana harbor, saying that the mines have been removed from the harbor and merchant vessels are entering and leaving daily.

Washington, Aug. 31.—Now that hostilities are over the United States is at liberty to receive from the British builders the fine cruiser Albany, sister ship to the New Orleans, which was one of the two acquired from Brazil just prior to the outbreak of the war.

ANN ARBOR SPEAKS.

Contractor Wooley of Ann Arbor Makes a Public Statement.

Mr. Edwin Wooley, contractor and carpenter of Ann Arbor, adds his voice to that of the army of Michigan people who endorse the little conqueror. Our representative found him at his place of residence No. 618 Fountain street. Mr. Wooley appreciates "a good thing" as do most of our readers, and he does not hesitate to tell his experience for the benefit of others. Endorsement of this kind has made Doan's Kidney Pills a household word throughout the state. The good they have done has won them many a title and such worthy names among the people as the "little conqueror of kidney ills," "little enemies to backache," "modern wonder-workers," etc.

Mr. Wooley says: "I was subject for years to attacks of backache or pains through the loins and kidneys, generally of a dull, heavy, aching nature, but often when the weather changed or when I moved awkwardly they became sharp twinges of pain. As I was doing work which required stooping it was very painful, exceedingly so, if I caught cold, which as a rule, settled in my loins. I tried various remedies but was never successful in obtaining any permanent benefit until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. At the time my back was troubling me a great deal, but shortly after I began the treatment the aching abated and when I had finished it I was cured. This is months ago and up to date there has been no recurrence of the trouble."

From Extreme Nervousness.

THAT no one remedy can contain the elements necessary to cure all diseases, is a fact well known to everyone. Dr. Miles' System of Restorative Remedies consists of seven distinctively different preparations, each for its own purpose.

Mrs. L. C. Bramley, 37 Henry St., St. Catherines, Ontario, writes: "For years I suffered from extreme nervousness and annoying constipation, developing into palpitation and weakness of the heart. I was unable to sleep, suffered much from headache, pain in my left side, palpitation and a constant feeling of weakness and prostration. I began using Dr. Miles' Nervine, Heart Cure and Nerve and Liver Pills and the Anti-Pain Pills to relieve sudden paroxysms of pain and headache. I soon felt much improved and the pains and aches and weariness left me. I then took Dr. Miles' Restorative Tonic and am now restored to my former good health."

POLITELY NEUTRAL.

That's What We Would Be in Case of a European War.

Thoughts Suggested by the Strained Relations Now Existing Between Great Britain and Russia and China.

[Special Washington Letter.]

ONE of the problems now confronting the department of state is: "Shall we help England?".

Diplomats of various foreign nations say that since this country had the moral and physical support of Great Britain in the controversy and war with Spain we should aid England in her coming contest with Russia.

The major premise of the matter rests upon the assumption that China is to be partitioned and that the vast empire of the orient is nearing its end. If this should be conceded there could be no doubt that this republic might, in the immediate future, be confronted with the problems and responsibilities which are so clearly set forth in various state papers.

But is China to be partitioned? I do not believe it. Of course, surface indications are such that almost everybody believes that the nations of Europe will accomplish their unconcealed purpose. Men skilled in statecraft do not all concede this proposition. International lawyers who are most familiar with Chinese history—and but few men know Chinese history as it really is—believe that the European nations who are building warships, maintaining armies, making demonstrations, filling their souls with hopes of the glory and prosperity of conquest, will yet beat out their own lives against the invisible Chinese wall of reserved force, and all of their dreams become mere "crownless metaphors of empire."

It is true that China is giving up ports and granting concessions of land; but these are merely fringes of her possessions, and in parting with them China sustains no loss. Her statesmen see other nations building fortifications, going to great expense in the furtherance of their ambitions, and her statesmen simply smile at the folly of these children from Europe gamboling along the Chinese coasts.

We must remember that Li Hung Chang is one of the greatest of statesmen; and remember also that he is not the only great man within the Chinese empire who is capable of directing the forces which have made the vast empire coherent for so many centuries.

LI HUNG CHANG.
(The Greatest Chinese Statesman of the Century.)

The statesmen of China know how to lead the people of their empire, and they know that the people of China prefer peace to all other blessings of human existence. They will not go to war if they can avoid it. They have avoided war, and they will always avoid war. They will foil off trouble in every conceivable manner. But if the integrity of the empire should ever be really threatened and the homes of the common people invaded the tide of Chinese resentment and resistance would sweep before it all of the armies of Europe, even if they were allied.

Modern navies could not be reckoned in such a war. The people of China, the military men and statesmen of China, would not go beyond their borders. They would not conquest. They would simply preserve their imperial integrity, and make the world for centuries afterward hesitate "to ope

The purple testament of bleeding War."

It will be well for us to remember that the statesmen of China have viewed the rise and fall of Alexander, Cyrus, Moses, Mohammed, Caesar and Napoleon. They have known of the wisdom of Solomon, the history of Nebuchadnezzer, the glory of Belshazzar, have witnessed the growth of the realm of the Prince of Peace from the appearance of the Star of Bethlehem to the coming of missionaries to urge upon them a religion better than that of Confucius. They calmly witness these comings and goings of nations, kingdoms, empires; and contentedly they live, secluded by their great wall, taking no part in the unrest and upheavals of petty ambitions.

While living in peaceful isolation, they are not unprogressive. They are conscious of their tremendous reserve force. We know not what their artisans are doing, away off in the interior of China; but we may more wisely assume that they are preparing for emergencies than to assume that they are ignorant of current events and indifferent to their own future. Li Hung Chang saw the proposed partition of China, and he has been engaged in preparations for meeting that contingency. The people are children in diplomacy who have been unable to understand the trip around the world which that venerable statesman recently made. It was not prompted by idle curiosity, nor was the trip taken for his health.

Li Hung Chang went forth before the whole world, and the millions of people through whose territory he traveled saw back of his travels no purpose whatever. But he had a purpose. He was preparing to meet the invaders of his empire.

It would have been impossible for Li Hung Chang to go to St. Petersburg to confer with the czar without the whole world knowing it. The great statesman could not have sent forth any one of his most capable and trusted ministers without the fact becoming known and understood by the diplomatic world. But Li Hung Chang could take a trip around the world, and, in the presence of glaring millions, he could communicate with the czar and form an alliance which would be beneficial to Russia, and at the same time give to China a military force which would prevent her dismemberment. And he did it.

COUNT MOURAVIEFF.
(Russia's Clever Minister of Foreign Affairs.)

Within the past month Great Britain has discovered the fact that Russia and China are dominating northern Asia, and Great Britain may well beware of the Indiaward progress of the czar. The partitioning of China will not immediately occur. China is giving away a few territorial fringes; that is all.

Now the question is: "Shall we help England?" The answer should be, that, since receiving the moral aid of Great Britain during the past year, we should help England in every good and laudable endeavor, because England aided us in a laudable endeavor. But England has aided us in no international folly; has aided us in no attempt at national suicide; and, argal, England has no right to expect this country to aid her in any direction which might mean needless danger to our individual and collective interests. If it is deemed proper by British statesmen to try conclusions in war with China and Russia; to send armies and navies against two nations having 700,000,000 population—and that international folly may be committed by England—it is her undivided privilege. But England has no right to ask us to close our eyes to the conditions which obtain; has no right to ask us to assume that China is a sick man instead of a wonderful power, although absolutely dormant, so far as the outside world can see.

No; we shall not help England in any folly. We have troubles enough of our own. If England's chestnuts must be pulled out of the fire she must find some other victim than her Brother Jonathan to reach for these chestnuts.

The people of our republic fearlessly faced the dread problem of war, and the plain people have borne the brunt of it with courage and heroism. The administration at Washington is now endeavoring to solve the perilous problems of peace. The territorial expansion which grew out of the armed conflict is causing our best and strongest statesmen to pause and consider. The form of government which shall be given to Puerto Rico and the Isle of Pines, and what form of government shall be established and maintained for the Philippines, must be determined. What we shall do for Cuba, under our protectorate, while endeavoring to give the people a stable government, requires the manifestation of perfect statesmanship and of lofty patriotism. The president and his constitutional advisers are giving to these problems of peace the attention and consideration demanded by their gravity and lasting importance. Every cabinet meeting is devoted to these subjects.

At such a time as this our diplomatic representatives, and the diplomats of the civilized world who are located at this capital, are bringing forward the question of our future relations with Great Britain, and on every hand we are confronted with the inquiry: "Shall we help England?"

One of the oldest and ablest officials of the department of state this afternoon said to the writer: "Great Britain fully understands that the government at Washington appreciates the friendly attitude of the government at London during our recent international difficulties. But the government at London also understands that the people of the United States will not sanction any movement which would be likely to involve us in needless conflict with our always good friend, Russia. Therefore it will be safe for newspaper writers to predict that we shall not help England in any war which might be caused by the ambitious desires of British subjects to extend their trade relations in China."

That seems to wisely epitomize the entire subject, and to leave this country free from entangling alliances at this time.

MANY SUFFERERS.

What a Large Number of People are Enduring A Distressing Condition in Which Many American People are Involved—The Only Way to Alleviate it.

From the Mountaineer, Walhalla, N. Dakota.

The remorse of a guilty stomach is what a very large majority of the people of this nation are suffering with to-day. It is a well known fact that dyspepsia is a characteristic American disease and it is frequently stated that "we are a nation of dyspeptics."

It is a distressing ailment and because of its many forms is difficult to treat. Sometimes it is the result of improper modes of eating, improper food or mental worry and exhaustion; then again it may be sort of a depressed condition of the body and treatment should be directed to the restoration of the health, without special attention to the stomach. In other instances, the disease is evidently the result of inflammation of the stomach.

Anyone of these conditions produce a lack of vitality in the system, by causing the blood to lose its life-sustaining elements. The blood is the vital element in our lives and should be carefully nurtured. Restore the blood to its proper condition, dyspepsia will vanish and perfect health follow.

For example, in the county of Pembina, North Dakota, a few miles from Walhalla, resides Mr. Ernest Snider; a man of sterling integrity, whose veracity cannot be doubted. He was formerly a resident of Lansdowne, Ont., but removed to the west and is now a prosperous farmer.

For three years he has been unable to do his work because he was ill with dyspepsia. "I became seriously ill about three years ago," he says, and consulted a doctor who gave me some medicine for indigestion. I continued to grow worse and several physicians were called at intervals who gave me temporary relief, but the disease returned with all its accustomed severity.

"The distress after eating made me dread meal time. At times I became so dizzy I used to be unable to stand. I had sour stomach, heartburn, palpitation of heart, and was a nervous. The doctors disagreed as to the nature of my disease but all agreed that the stomach was affected. I suffered intensely and life was a misery.

"I tried several well known remedies but was not benefited.

"I read in the newspapers articles regarding the wonderful curative powers of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and finally after some urging on the part of a friend I concluded to try the pills. I purchased six boxes. This was five months ago.

"I had not taken all of the first box before I felt much relief, I continued using the pills, and after using four boxes was cured. I have none of those distressing symptoms now, and am completely restored to health, and can do as much work as any of the laborers on my farm. I owe my restoration to health to Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and gladly give my testimonial, hoping it may prove beneficial to some persons similarly affected."

By restoring to the blood the necessary constituents of life, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People renew the nerve force and enable the stomach to promptly and properly assimilate the food, thus speedily and permanently curing the dyspeptic. These pills are a specific for all diseases having their origin in impoverished blood or disordered nerves. They contain every element necessary to general nutrition, to restore health to the weak, good health to the ailing. Physicians prescribe them, druggists recommend them and everywhere the people use them.

Don't get the idea into your head that you can pull yourself out of trouble with a corkscrew.

By Absorption.

Catarrhal sufferers should remember that Ely's Cream Balm is the only catarrh remedy which is quickly and thoroughly absorbed by the diseased membrane. It does not dry up the secretions, but changes them to a limpid and odorless condition, and finally to a natural and healthy character. The balm can be found at any drug store, or by sending 50 cents to Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York, it will be mailed. Full directions with each package. Cream Balm opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays inflamation, thereby stopping pain in the head, heals and protects the membrane and restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is applied directly into the nostrils.

England and America.

We Americans are a fairly capable and adaptable race. Some few things we can teach the world; nay, we have once it already. But some other things we are not so good at. England could give us points on municipal government: our cities are scarcely so well managed as Manchester and Birmingham. England prepares her diplomatists by natural selection and systematic training: we trust the fitness of ours to luck. She has standards of public character and conduct in office: it is questionable whether we have any. She cultivates and defers to expert opinions on finance political ecomomy, and the like: we hold "professors and theorists" in some contempt, and consider one man's notion as good as another's. When new dangers and duties confront us, our happy-go-lucky temper recalls the man in Dickens who "supposed" he could play the fiddle; he had never tried.

Now Britian can as a rule rely on the qualities needed in any of her public servants. It is not that Englishmen are naturally better and brighter than Americans; they and we are built on the same foundations; but they are trained for their work—they have to be. It is not so long since appointments in them came by patronage and "influence," much as with us now; but they found it expedient to substitute a merit system. That system has had a great deal to do with England's prosperity and progress, with her recent strides toward widened empire, with her present isolated greatness.—Frederic M. Bird, in September Lippincott's.

A Woman Who Knew Her Business.

The men who came back from Santiago tell great stories, and, sad to say, make very serious complaints of mismanagement and neglect in that campaign. They knew what it really meant when food was wanting; they saw what were the results of confusion, unavoidable perhaps, in the quartermaster's and medical departments, and of the dearth of all means to make the wounded comfortable. They know who did well, and they think they know who did badly, and most of them do not hesitate to express their opinions and beliefs. They are generous in commendation as well as free with censure. One person whom many of them, especially many of the wounded, remember and speak of, is Miss Barton. "I tell you," said a returned newspaper correspondent, "that old girl knows her business. The way she took hold was beautiful. When she turned to after Sibony and made gruel for the men in the hospital, she must have saved many lives. Bacon and hardtack are not just the food for wounded men, or even for fever patients, but that is what they were getting when Miss Barton turned up. She had been through it so often before that she knew just what to do and how to go about it."

Probably Miss Barton can endure being called "that old girl" by observers so appreciative as this one.—Harper's Bazar.

must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will by its own action reach the inflamed and diseased surfaces. ELY'S CREAM BALM combines the important requisites of quick action and specific curative powers with perfect safety to the patient. This agreeable remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact. All druggists cheerfully acknowledge that in it the acme of Pharmaceutical skill has been reached. The most distressing symptoms quickly yield to it. In acute cases the balm imparts almost instant relief.

Don't forget to remember that there are a great many things that should be forgotten.

CLEAN PEOPLE

Cleanliness goes with health. If we have catarrh anywhere we cannot be wholly clean.

Make systematic efforts to be free from this disgusting disease. Mrs. L. A. Johnston, 103 Pilham and Ripley Sts., Montgomery, Ala., tells her experience with catarrh of the stomach and how she was cured:

"I will state to you that I have taken eight bottles of your Pe-ru-na and two of Man-a-lin and rejoice to say, 'God bless Dr. Hartman and Pe-ru-na.' And I earnestly assure you that it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken in my life. I prescribe it to every one I meet who is suffering, as the best medicine in the world, and have made many converts who are now rejoicing in the great good which they have derived from the same. I can tell you that I am almost entirely relieved of indigestion, that great foe which has tortured me so many years, and can now eat anything I desire without it is fruits or something acid."

To understand the scientific action of Pe-ru-na it is best to have Dr. Hartman's special book for women or his book on chronic catarrh. These books are mailed free by the Pe-ru-na Medicine Company, Columbus, O. All druggists sell Pe-ru-na.

"CLEANLINESS IS NAE PRIDE, DIRT'S NAE HONESTY." COMMON SENSE DICTATES THE USE OF SAPOLIO

Who is Responsible?

With the War Department's unlimited resources there was no possible reason why fever patients by the hundreds should have been dumped on the coast of Long Island, only to find the hospitals not yet built because mules enough had not been provided to haul the lumber from the railroad station. While hostilities lasted, it behooved us all to be very patient and forbearing in our criticisms. But when the War Department had no longer to cope with hostile armies, there was no reason why a single enlisted man, whether at Mantauk Point or any other camp in the United States, should have gone for another twenty four hours without suitable shelter, food, medicines, surgical attendance and nursing. Milk can be had in this country, and the men who have been responsible for feeding typhoid fever patients on tainted pork and musty hard-tack are not to be dealt with in mild and forbearing terms. There are times when vigorous language is in order. There is not the slightest danger that any one will condemn too harshly the seeming inefficiency that has been responsible for the hideous treatment to which our brave soldiers have been subjected. It is unnecessary at this point to mention any names. It is enough to join the best public opinion of the whole country in the demand for a searching investigation and for the fixing of responsibility where it belongs. The course pursued by the leading officers of the Santiago army, and especially by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, in courageously subjecting themselves to possible disfavor by protesting against the War Department's policy, was commendable in the highest sense. The whole country appreciated it.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for September.

The GRAPHOPHONE

The most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment at home or in the social gathering. You can sing or talk to it and it will reproduce immediately and as often as desired, your song or words.

Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut and dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory; but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

The American people have peculiarities of their own, and the strongest of these is that they will not wait. The governors of Ohio and Pennsylvania and some citizens of Chicago determined that if Uncle Sam was not capable of taking care of his sick soldiers they would take a hand. To camp they went and turned things up side down. It may be that Alger is not to blame for want of food for the sick, medical attendance and other necessities, but he spends more time and wind trying to deny it than would be required to right all the wrongs. Politics are responsible for many incompetent appointments, and if this sort of thing continues parties looking for an "issue" for the next campaign will be able to find it.

RAILROAD NEWS.

Notes and Condensations Concerning the Railroads.

Some recent developments in the affairs of the Lima Northern, is unmistakable evidence that Brice is connected with that road. Different officials of the Lima Northern have frequently given out the announcement that Mr. Brice has severed his connection with the road. This may have been so at the time that it was stated, but at present Mr. Brice is interested in the road. It may be that he has recently purchased some Lima Northern securities, or for some reason Mr. Brice does not want to be identified with the Lima Northern. Be that as it may, the Blade is in possession of some information that warrants it in stating that Mr. Brice is interested in the road. Just what effect this is going to have on the Lima Northern and the D. T. & M., is a matter of much speculation among those who are acquainted with the situation. It probally means that the Lima Northern and the D., T. & M. will be consolidated. Then it is thought that Mr. Brice or Mr. Seaman will assume active control of both roads. This will give Toledo another Detroit line and strengthen the D., T. & M.—Toledo Blade.

Says a press dispatch: "A new use has been found for petroleum. The tracks of the Pennsylvania railway between Philadelphia and Atlantic City are sprinkled with it, and the swift trains that run down in 60 or 70 minutes are no longer followed by clouds of sand and dust that suffocated the passengers and covered them with films of gray. The last time I came to Atlantic City the dust upon the cars this side of Philadelphia was stifling. The surface of this section of New Jersey is sand, loose and light, that drifts like snow with the wind and the suction of the train was so great that the rear car until recently was always followed by a cloud which was visible for a long distance. Now the run is made with as little dust as you would notice over limestone ballast at the top of the Allegheny mountains.

According to the Toledo Blade, Monday promises to be one of the largest excursion days in the history of the D. T. & M. Besides the mail carriers from Grand Rapids, Grand Haven, Muskegon, Holland, Kalamazoo and Battle Creek, a special will be run from Marshall. Over five hundred are expected from Grand Rapids alone.

Foreman Corwin of the D. &. L. N. bridge construction gang, received word Monday that his son Wallace Corwin of the regular army died the evening before at Montauk Point. The young man was but 19 years of age and contracted fever in front of Santiago, had nearly recovered, but suffered a relapse from which he died.

A construction train on the St. Mary's division of the D. & L. N. road was wrecked yesterday near St. John's, and half a dozen laborers were injured, but none seriously.—Blade.

The new D. & L. N. depot at Dundee is rapidly nearing completion and it is expected, will be open for business in the course of about 10 days.

Enroute to Alaska.—Letter No. 12.

In Camp on Youkon River,
July 15, '98.

I will write you a few lines and let you know that I am well and everything moving along smoothly; it will be rather uncertain whether I can send this out or not but will get it ready and take the chances. I will try and give you a history of our travels since leaving Dawson.

We left Dawson on Saturday, June 25th, at 10 a. m. and at 6 p. m. we reached Forty Mile Post, which is 40 miles below Dawson, by drifting with the current, so you see the old Youkon is not so slow as it might be. We decided to stop here for a while and look up some of the streams. Forty Mile Post was a very lively mining town for a number of years back, up to the Klondike boom, when most everyone left for the new Eldorado. The cabins and stores are most all deserted, only one store running that I saw, and I don't think there are two dozen white residents left, but there were a good many transients there as they are trying to get up a boom and resurrect the town. But if there is a lack of white people, there are Indians enough to make up, and they are all ages, sizes and even colors, to almost white. There is an Indian mission located here. Forty Mile Post is situated on the south side of Forty Mile river and at its junction with the Youkon. Just across Forty Mile river is Fort Cudahy.

This town too is all deserted except one general store, run by the North American Trading and Transportation Co., and the fort which is occupied by about ten mounted police. The fort is a typical frontier affair like we read about, log buildings enclosed within a high log stockade, and is quite a novelty to a tenderfoot like myself. The jail for this part of the North West Territory is also located here inside the stockade. It is a log building and the iron bars are made of wood in the shape of peeled poles about four or five inches in diameter. There were four or five prisoners in there then, brought from Dawson I believe they said, for different crimes. The captain was very sociable and showed us around and gave us lots of information about the country, etc. Right here I want to say a good word for the N. W. T. M. P. We met a good many of them and had business and other transactions with them, and always found them civil, courteous and obliging.

On Monday, June 27th, we cached the most of our grub and outfit at Forty Mile and with our boat started up Forty Mile river. Some of the way there was not much current and we could row and when we came to a swift place one would stay in the boat and pole and the other two go up the bank with a long rope and pull it along. We got along pretty good that first day till we reached the canyon which is about nine miles up. This canyon is about 3-4 of a mile long and full of rocks and rapids and a very bad place to get through. At the mouth we had to portage our outfit, boat and all for several rods, and then we loaded up and poled and roped up for about 1-2 mile when we had to unload again, and as it was 7 o'clock and we were getting hungry we thought we might as well camp there for the night as there was a level place among the rocks. It was a wild place, high rocks on both sides and the water rushing through made a great noise so that we could hardly hear each other while talking. It was not a very good or soft place to lie down, but we found places where one could lie down by himself so we scattered about among the rocks. I found what I thought was a good place about two feet from the edge of the water and three feet above. Fred found a place about twenty feet below me but on higher rock and farther from the water and Mac located some ways up stream. We turned in at 10 o'clock and at 2 o'clock in the morning some one shook me very roughly and yelled "The water is rising." I jumped up and sure enough it was, for it had got up to my bed, had just commenced to run under me and had wet my blankets some; I think that in about three minutes more I have have been awake if the man had not happened along as he did. I rushed over to Fred, jerked his blankets off and called to him to get out for the water was rising. Then I ran down to our camping place and was just in time to catch our stove, a couple of pails, our rubber boots, etc., which were ready to go and some of them had started down stream. After getting our stuff together we found we had lost the washdish and soap, one tin cup and I had lost one stocking. We were pretty lucky to get off as easy as that. The fellow who woke me up had some stuff piled near ours and it got pretty wet. Some boys just across the stream from us got their goods very wet and lost their stove. Several above us lost goods or got them wet. There must have been a heavy rain way above us somewhere for the water raised 3 feet in 4 hours. It taught us a lesson and thereafter we were careful not to camp quite so close to the "little babbling brook."

We got pretty thoroughly awake and did not care to sleep any more that night so we went to work and by 8 o'clock had our outfit, boat and all through the canyon without any further mishap. The next night we had a fine place to camp near an old deserted cabin so we put up our tent and had a good night's sleep. In fact we found pretty good camping places every night after that first night in the canyon. There were a good many creeks coming into the river and we prospected some and took our time in going up.

On June 30th about 11 a. m. we crossed the line and were in American territory and you can imagine our feelings to be on free soil once more; even the air just across this staked line seemed different. The line crosses the river here and is 23 miles from Forty Mile Post.

Just across the line a few rods and up on the high bank overlooking the river, stands the cabin of Samuel Patch, familiarly called by everybody "Uncle Sam." He is the only resident of that whole country for miles around since the boom died out. I had quite a long talk with him and found him a very unique character. I think he told me he was 82 years old, and had lived there 12 years; said he had not been over the line onto British soil in eight years and never intended to cross the line again. He is very loyal and has the stars and stripes (and it is a large flag too) floating from a tall pole over his cabin. He is very spry for a man of his age and I think he must have learned to swear by note in his younger days for he swears like a pirate now; he must have had it down fine when he was in his prime.

Just across the river from Uncle Sam's cabin enters a creek called Uncle Sam's Creek, so named because it is in American territory. After stopping a few hours at Uncle Sam's we went on up stream and camped at Moosehide creek, the next night at Canyon creek and so we went on up stream for several days. We passed lots of deserted cabins and placer mines, the owners having left them when the Klondike boom struck the country. There were a good many boats going up stream and a good many coming down. Those coming down reported every creek staked from one end to the other, but we wanted to see for ourselves so we kept on going although the river was getting harder to ascend on account of the rapids and riffles which were getting more frequent. We spent the 4th in poling and roping our boat up some bad rapids, but I don't suppose we were any more tired or our heads felt any larger the next morning, than many a fellow back in old Tecumseh who celebrated the glorious 4th in the grand old style.

On July 5 we had reached a point about 60 miles from the mouth of the river and the water was getting so low and rapids and riffles so plenty that it was almost impossible to get our boat any farther; we had found every creek staked so far, and we met and talked with some men here, who had left their boat and took packs on their backs and went up to the head of the stream, and they said everything was staked and it would be impossible for us to go farther with our boat and advised us to go back and, as every one coming back reported the same conditions, we decided to turn back down the stream. We found going down stream more easy than going up but more dangerous. We ran most of the rapids, only roped down two or three, but it kept us all very busy to keep the boat off the rocks and not get swamped. Several times we struck rocks and the boat would swing around and come near filling but we got off every time all right, and without knocking a hole in the boat. We got down through the canon in less than an hour without an accident and without unloading or portaging a thing; one stayed in the boat with a pole and kept it off the rocks and the other two went ashore with a rope and let it down carefully. It took us seven days to make the trip up and we came back in two days. We had some quite exciting experiences on the trip and we would get wet more or less every day but it was very warm and we did not care if we did get a ducking. One day while trying to save the boat from getting away from us in a rapids, I hung to the rope and was jerked off a high rock into the river head first, but the boat did not get away. Fred took a header into the river one day while standing in the bow of the boat poling, the pole slipped off a stone and he went overboard. Mac went in about the same way at another time, so we were all about even and no chance to crow. The boys had the joke on me one day though for getting into the water with my hip rubber boots on and the tops turned down below my knees; the boat got fast on some rocks and I got out to get it off and forgot that I had turned the tops down a short time before, on account of its being so warm, and the water filled them before I remembered it.

On July 8 we left Forty Mile Post and and started on down the Youkon once more. On July 9 at 10 a. m., we passed Belle Isle, which is situated at the boundary line and were in American territory again. About noon we reached Eagle City and stopped for a couple of hours and looked the place over. The town is only six weeks old but is having quite a boom. It is a very good location for a town, in fact the best I have seen anywhere along the river, it is high and dry and situated at the mouth of Mission Creek. We camped at Seventy Mile that night, another boom mining town, and the next day we came on down and stopped at our present location. There are several good streams around here and we want to look them up.

Well, I shall have to draw this to an abrupt close, for a man has just stopped here and is going down to Circle City, the nearest postoffice about 100 miles below here, and says he will take the letter along and mail it. I expect to get some letters from home when we get down there. There has been no boats in yet from St. Michael though.

Yours in haste,
GEO. W. KNAPP.

A painful accident occurred to Oliver McLouth on Tuesday morning. He was drawing a large stone, when the chain which was attached to it suddenly broke. The stone rebounded, striking a stick which in turn flew upward and struck Mr. McLouth in the face, inflicting a mangled and most painful wound. Dr. Marks was called and found the wound bad but not dangerous.—Addison Courier.

A two-year old boy in Monroe caught his foot in a defective side walk and sustained painful injuries. A claim was presented and after the council committee examined the walk, they compromised, paid the doctor bills and gave the father $100. The street commissioner was given instructions, probably. It pays to keep sidewalks continually examined and always in repair.—Deerfield Times Journal.

Try Whitehouse coffee at R. S. Moore's

An alarm of fire was turned in Tuesday about 11 o'clock for Sutton's opera house. The fire probably originated from someone throwing a cigar stub into the paper and rubbish behind the big bill boards in front. The blaze was subdued without the assistance of the department.

Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hanley attended the Moore family reunion at Ann Arbor last week. Of the three surviving members of the original family all were above the three score and ten mark. One hundred and twenty-five guests were there, grandchildren, great grandchildren and others being present from Pennsylvania to Arkansas. The second annual reunion will be held at Adrian next year.

Standard time has now been nicely inaugurated and if the old fogies will only take a vacation, its popularity will be assured. Whatever may be said of Canada being slow, there is one thing in her favor, she recognizes but one time and knows no other and that is standard time, the time of law, of railways, of progression and good sense.

The Maxwell Stock Company opened at Sutton's Opera House last evening in the "Octoroon" before a fair audience. The piece was well presented by a good caste. The singing was exceptionally good, that by little Ethel being heartily appreciated. To-night the company play "A Celebrated Case" and to-morrow evening "Streets of New York." General admission, 10 cents.

In company with Fred, Leon and Miss Florence Rosacrans, we took a trip up to Scott Remington's fruit farm Wednesday to see the harvest of peaches. About 2,800 trees are in bearing on this farm and the handling of the fruit is an interesting and instructive sight. Mr. Remington does very little retailing his output of small fruit being so large as to demand a wholesale market. Peaches are only one of the crops, plums, pears, grapes etc. being harvested in profusion, especially this year. A running spring at the foot of the hill fitted with a hydraulic ram furnishes irrigation for the farm and supplies the house and barn with water. A large force of pickers and sorters are employed taking care of the early peach crop.

Mrs. Henry C. Conkling died very suddenly last Saturday night of apoplexy, at her home in this village, aged 71 years. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. W. F. Jones officiating. Mrs. Conkling was a prominent member of the Presbyterian church and is mourned by a wide circle of friends.

Standard Time.

At a session of the Tecumseh School Board held last Thursday evening, standard time was adopted for the schools. This is a move in the right direction. Tecumseh should have only one time and this be "Up with Times." The churches should follow next. Every clock in town should be set "standard" and soon we will never think of two kinds of time. The members of the school board are to be congratulated.

THE CHURCHES.

The first of the regular Presbyterian socials will be given at the church parlors Thursday evening Sept. 9. Miss Kyle's committee will serve supper from 5 to 7 p. m. Everyone invited.

Services at the Baptist church next Sunday morning will begin at ten o'clock, standard time. In the evening at seven o'clock standard time. Subject for evening "A New Chivalry."

At the Presbyterian church next Sunday the pastor will preach in the morning on the subject, "Christ, the Joy Bringer." The evening subject will be "The Christian Race."

The annual meeting of the W. F. M. S. of the M. E. church will be held Wednesday afternoon Sept. 7th in the church parlor at 2:30. A full attendance is desired in order to make arrangements for the coming district meeting, also the election of officers will take place.

At the Friends' church regular services next Sunday conducted by the pastor. At 7:30 in the evening the Juvenile Mission Band will give a free entertainment, at which an interesting program will be rendered. A collection will be taken for the support of a famine boy in India. All are invited.

A Fatal Accident.

A distressing accident occurred on our streets Tuesday forenoon, which resulted in the death of Wm. H. Waring, father of Herbert S. Waring. Mr. Waring was driving a spirited team, belonging to H. B. Eaton, which were hitched to a Moses platform wagon and this was loaded with a couple of tons of manure. Exactly how the accident occurred is not known but the accepted theory is this: He was about two thirds of the way down the Globe Mill hill, seated on top of the load and holding his team back with a stiff rein, when his feet, which were braced against the front of the platform, slipped and he plunged forward between the horses and the wagon wheels ran over him. The horses free from restraint continued on around the mill and stopped just east of the iron bridge but did not run as has been reported, nor did they appear frightened immediately after the accident. People living near the foot of the hill and the workman on the mill hurried to where Mr. Waring lay in the road and Drs. Tefft and Catlin were hastily summoned. It was evident at once that the injuries sustained would prove fatal; a huge gash was cut in the top of the head, the left ear had been torn off and the face badly bruised, the left arm seriously injured and the right limb broken in two places below the knee. He was removed to the home of his brother, Joseph Waring, where everything possible was done to relieve his sufferings, but the shock was tou great and at eleven o'clock that evening he passed away. Mr. Waring was a man 60 years of age, but active and a splendid horseman and the theory that he slipped from the load is substantiated by the fact that the spring seat upon which he sat was the only thing displaced from the wagon. The funeral was held from the residence of H. S. Waring at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Rev. W. F. Jones officiating.

CLOSE OF A BUSY LIFE.

Henry H. Holt Dies at His Home in Muskegon After an Illness of Three Days.

LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR TWO TERMS.

Also Served in the Michigan Legislature and Held Other Offices of Trust—Was a Lawyer by Profession and a Graduate of the Union Law College in Cleveland, O.

Muskego, Aug. 25.—Ex-Lieut. Gov. Henry H. Holt, who has been ill since last Sunday, and who late Tuesday evening was not expected to live many hours, died during the night at his home on Clay avenue. Tuesday afternoon Mr. Holt began to sink, and grew weaker hourly. Shortly before nine o'clock he regained consciousness for the first time since Monday morning, when he fell into the comatose condition. He remained one hour in possession of his mental faculties, and then fell back into a state of unconsciousness, in which he died.

[Mr. Holt was born in Camden, Oneida county, N. Y., March 27, 1831. His father was a native of Connecticut, while his mother was a native of Rhode Island and a descendant of Roger Williams. He attended district school until 1848, when he continued his studies at Fairfield academy and afterwards at Christ's Church hall at Pomfret, Conn. He came to Michigan with his father in 1852 and settled in Cascade, Kent county. In 1855 he commenced the study of law at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and later entered the Union Law college, of Cleveland, O., where he was graduated in July, 1857. In September of the same year he was admitted to practice at Grand Rapids. In 1858 he removed to Muskegon, where he was engaged in the practice of law up to the time of his death. He held various offices of trust in Michigan and was elected representative to the state legislature for the sessions of 1867-69, 1871-79 and 1887. During the terms of 1867-70, 1871-72 and 1879-80 he was chairman of the committee on ways and means. In 1872 he was elected lieutenant governor of Michigan and was reelected in 1874. In 1873-74 Mr. Holt made an extended tour of Europe, and he again visited the old world in 1875-76. In May, 1867, he was married to Mary E. Raynor, of Lansing, who died July 26, 1872. In February, 1878, he was married to Mrs. Catherine E. Hackley, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., who still survives him.]

CATHOLIC FORESTERS.

Annual Session of the State Court Held at Menominee and Officers Are Elected.

Menominee, Aug. 27.—The Michigan state court of the Catholic Order of Foresters, in annual session here, adopted reports on amendments to the constitution, appeals, etc., and also the recommendation that delegates to the national convention be instructed to favor the adoption of the proposed reserve fund resolution, which is to be made the principal issue of that convention. The next annual state convention will be held at Lake Linden the third Tuesday in August, 1899. The following officers were elected:

State chief ranger, James L. McClear, Menominee; vice chief ranger, Eugene J. Lebouf, Muskegon; state secretary, Thomas J. Flynn, Negaunee; state treasurer, Charles L. Friederichs, Hancock; trustees, P. H. Ryan, Ironwood; Dr. Lefebre, Muskegon; J. Gunvelle, Ishpeming; J. M. Benane, Norway, and J. N. Lathillois, Menominee; delegates to biennial national convention, M. J. Ryan, Escanaba; M. H. Kern, Menominee; Cornelius Geary, Ironwood, and P. Scholler, Lake Linden.

A FATAL QUARREL.

Charles Odell, of Ungers, Attacked His Wife with a Knife and Was Shot Dead.

Rogers, Aug. 27.—During a family quarrel at the home of Charles Benedict, who lives one mile east of this village, Charles Odell was shot and instantly killed. Odell and his wife worked the farm and Benedict lived with them. Odell came home drunk and got into a row with his wife and Benedict. He tried to use a butcher knife on them, when Benedict seized a Winchester rifle and shot Odell dead. Benedict is in charge of the sheriff. He claims that he shot in self-defense.

Michigan's Good Templars.

Grand Rapids, Aug. 26.—Officers of the Michigan Good Templars report 125 lodges in the state with a membership of 7,000. The financial condition of the order is good. Officers were elected as follows:

Chief templar, Rev. E. P. Smallidge, Grand Rapids; vice chief templar, Mrs. F. C. Stuart, Marshall; counselor, W. H. Andrews, Grand Rapids; secretary, M. E. Curtis, Big Rapids; treasurer, Frank L. Fuller, Cedar Springs; superintendent of juvenile temples, Mrs. E. E. Davis, Belmont.

Guilty of Manslaughter.

Bellaire, Aug. 30.—The case of Henry Hosler, who was charged with the murder of Benoni Moore last October, ended in a verdict of manslaughter. The defense was insanity. Hosler was sentenced to five years' imprisonment in Marquette prison. Hosler was jealous of Moore's attentions to his wife and shot him in the shoulder. Moore lived for some weeks, death being caused by blood poisoning.

A Landmark Burned.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 30.—The old Gale block, one of the city's landmarks, is a smoldering ruin. Twelve families who occupied flats above the stores have lost everything. The firemen had narrow escapes from falling walls. The building burned Monday and the cause of the fire is unknown. Loss is $60,000.

West Bay City, Aug. 29.—The Business Men's association, of this city, has decided to assist the construction of the proposed electric road to Flint. The promoters do not ask for a bonus in the ordinary meaning of the word, but wish to be assured of $100,000 worth of patronage after the line is built.

OUR SCHOOL SYSTEM.

Nearly Half a Million Pupils Are Enrolled in About Seven Thousand Institutions of Learning.

Lansing, Aug. 30.—State Superintendent of Public Instruction Hammond has made his report on the common school system of Michigan. The report says that the number of graded school districts in the state this year is 642, an increase of 105 over last year, the number of ungraded schools being 6,509, a decrease of 21. There are 11 township unit districts, an increase of 14 for the year. There is a total of 701,244 pupils of school age in the state, 491,812 of whom are enrolled. It is estimated that 43,601 pupils attend select schools.

In graded schools the average duration of school is 9.27 months in the year, while in ungraded schools it is 7.90. The number of teachers in the graded schools of the state is 5,978 and in ungraded schools 6,513. The number of male teachers employed in the public schools is 3,563, and the number of female teachers 12,038. The total amount paid in wages to all teachers for one year is $4,050,832.82, the average monthly wages of male teachers being $43.65, and of female teachers, $34.95.

The number of teachers holding state or normal school certificates is 722, and the whole number of legally qualified teachers is 11,804.

There are 6,096 frame schoolhouses, 1,435 of brick, 77 of stone and 309 of logs in the state, the total being 7,917. The estimated value of all school property in the state is $17,977,447. There was last year a total expenditure for schools of $6,378,706.78. The amount of primary school interest money apportioned by the state was $1,004,653.26, the per capita rate being $1.44.

The number of districts furnishing free text-books was 413, as against 981 the previous year. There are 456 township libraries, having 158,568 volumes, and 2,678 district libraries, having 612,247 volumes. The amount of taxes voted for township libraries was $2,735.91, and the amount received from county treasurers for library purposes was $7,420.07.

APPLE ORCHARDS.

More Than 200,000 Acres Are Devoted to the Cultivation of This Fruit in the State.

Allegan, Aug. 27.—Inquiries have been coming to the State Horticultural society from all portions of the United States, as to the prospect of the Michigan apple crop. A canvass of the state, which includes every county, reveals the fact that the crop will vary from ten per cent. of winter fruit in some counties, to as high as 75 in others. There are comparatively few large commercial apple orchards in this state, but the yield is gathered from innumerable small orchards which abound.

From statistics gathered in this and many other states, it is believed that the Michigan apple crop will be in excess of any state east of the Rocky mountains. The indications are that apples will command an unusually good price this fall. Buyers are already in the field for cider apples and drying stock, many evaporators having been erected within the state by men who have been engaged in that industry elsewhere.

The reports state that comparatively little damage is noticeable from the codling moth, but there is an abundance of scab, particularly where the trees were not sprayed. The crop of pears and plums will be full and of excellent quality. Grapes will yield a very full crop.

The acreage of apple orchards in Michigan is 200,478, and of peaches, 38,751.

Farmer Robbed.

Bay City, Aug. 30.—William Henry, a retired farmer, having an office and living rooms at the residence of F. G. Felker, No. 1200 Marsac street, was robbed of more than $1,000 in bills, silver and gold. The money was ready to be loaned on real estate and was kept in the drawers of a bureau and writing desk. The police are investigating and arrests may soon follow.

Hay Fever Convention.

Marquette, Aug. 31.—The annual meeting of the Western Hay Fever association was held in the opera house Tuesday. E. R. Goldsmith, of Hamilton, O., was reelected president. General reports were read at the meeting and an entertainment was given to the hay feverites. This is the first convention of the association held in this city.

Renominated.

Flint, Aug. 31.—Samuel W. Smith was unanimously renominated for member of congress Tuesday afternoon by the Sixth district republican convention. Resolutions were adopted congratulating the administration upon the conduct of the war and indorsing Gov. Pingree's efforts toward equal taxation.

Sheep Ranch for Upper Michigan.

Menominee, Aug. 30.—L. D. Burch, publisher of the American Sheep Breeder, Chicago, has purchased from George O'Callaghan, of Norway, Mich., a fine tract of grazing land in Nadeau township, this county, and will start as an experiment a large sheep ranch.

Calhoun Farmers' Picnic.

Marshall, Aug. 27.—The farmers' picnic held at Lyons lake brought together a crowd of 4,000 persons. Prof. Phillips made a fine balloon ascension and parachute drop. Homer defeated Tekonsha in a base ball game 16 to 10.

Crosswell, Aug. 27.—The soldiers' and sailors' reunion here brought a crowd of 6,000 persons to this town, 1,000 of them members of the G. A. R. It was the most successful reunion ever held in the county.

FLOWERS IN A BOWL.

A Simple Arrangement for the Artistic Display of Plants and Vines of All Kinds.

"I like flowers in a bowl," said a woman of an inventive turn of mind and an artistic taste; "they have such a generous effect, as if they had been picked in great handfuls—but I do not like them packed in a solid mass—so I have taken malleable copper wire (No. 20) and made frames to go over all my bowls and wide-mouthed vases, and now I can arrange my flowers with great ease and artistic effect. The wire frame is very easily contrived. With a pair of pinchers bend a ring of wire the size of the edge of the bowl, hooking the ends of the circle together. Then across this stretch lengths of wire, allowing about half an inch over the diameter, the circle to bend down and fit over the edge of the bowl. Twist the wires together where they cross each other, and give a firm twist around the circle of wire, and that is all. Where the wires bend over the edge of the bowl they are entirely hidden by the leaves and flowers, and the whole thing can be removed for cleaning.

"When arranging flowers with this frame I first make a light foundation with sprays of green to conceal the frame. Common garden asparagus is delightful when filling jars with sweet peas and many other blossoms. Nasturtiums I use with their own foliage, often sticking the flower stems right through the leaves. On this foundation flowers throw themselves into the most fascinating attitudes without any constraint or unnatural heavy massing, and you can hardly avoid making them look light and graceful. Anyone who has once utilized this simple device will never be willing to struggle with the arrangement of flowers in the old way."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

THREE PRETTY SLEEVES.

Here Are the Very Latest Models from Which to Select the One You Like Best.

The goods which enjoy the most popularity this summer are so light both in weight and color, that the designs for sleeves are necessarily dainty and airy to keep pace with the delicacy of the material. Puffs and ripples finish the shoulders while the body of the sleeves is very tight.

THE LATEST SLEEVE DESIGNS.

If the body of the sleeve is made of figured goods the ripple or puff is made of plain goods trimmed with velvet, baby ribbon or fancy buttons. If the puff or ripple is of plain goods then the body is, of course, figured.

The butterfly puff is both new and popular and is made by folding the cloth in a large butterfly bow and tacking it over the sleeves so that it can be removed if desired.

The sleeve which consists simply of a large puff is trimmed with lace and caught just above the elbow with a band of ribbon which fastens upon cut steel or pearl buttons. Long gloves are worn with these puffed sleeves as they are only half the usual length.

AFTERNOON REST.

No Period of Sleep Is Quite as Refreshing or Gives More Rest to Brain and Brawn.

The necessity of a rest hour for a busy mother and housekeeper cannot be too strongly insisted upon. All other women are apt to take this rest except the woman whose "work is never done," and who needs it the most of all. It is not necessary to take a full hour's rest, but as much time as this should be allowed in the early afternoon after the work of the dinner is over, for the simple object of resting. The habit should be acquired of going to one's room and of shutting out the outside world as much as it is possible, together with all worldly care and worry. Bathe the temples, loosen the dress, and, if possible, put on a loose wrapper and lie down. Sleep may not come at once, but the habit is soon acquired, and in a short time the tired woman who adopts this remedy will fall asleep almost as soon as she touches the pillow. Even if her enforced nap does not last over half an hour, no period of sleep in the 24 hours covering the same amount of time will be so refreshing or give so much rest to tired brain and muscle.—N. Y. Tribune.

To Brighten a Copper Kettle.

Fill the kettle completely with boiling water, to which has been added a small quantity of soda, and while the water is in the kettle rub the outside over briskly with a flannel dipped in quite sour milk. As a final measure wipe the metal dry and polish it with a wash-leather.

DOING UP CURTAINS.

Those of Lace Must Be Carefully Washed and Handled or They Will Not Last Long.

There are many and bitter complaints of the poor wearing qualities of lace curtains as compared with those that "lasted for years in the times of our grandmothers." Complainants often insist that the quality has deteriorated, and that there are no such goods made as those bearing date of 40 years ago, many of which are even yet in a more presentable condition than our own, that have passed through perhaps two or three cleanings in as many years.

The reason for this is, more than any other one thing, the difference in the process of cleaning. In localities, where the modern professional curtain-cleaner is unknown, it is altogether probable that the curtains last as long as ever. They are carefully washed under the personal supervision of the housekeeper or by her own hands, and are put upon the grass to bleach, and when sufficiently clear are rinsed and starched, not too stiff, for that might cause them to break, but just enough to make them look new. They are then neatly and regularly pinned down upon the parlor carpet and left to dry with locked doors, to keep out intruders, and open windows to let in the air.

When taken up they are almost if not altogether as good-looking as new, and have suffered little if any injury during the process. Treated in this way tamboured lace curtains will last until the owners are wearied with seeing them around and get new ones for variety. The modern process is very different. The curtain is put into a large cauldron, with scarcely water enough to cover it, and boiled in the strongest bleaching chemicals. It is slightly rinsed and stiffly starched. If it is torn or the threads are broken, a section of net lace is dipped in thick starch or paste and laid over the broken spot, which has been partly closed by being drawn together with very fine thread. The net is then pressed upon the curtain with such force as to unite them like one fabric. The curtains are then dried, folded and sent home to be put up. There is sufficient strength in the starch and threads to hold the material together while the starch remains, but when next it is necessary to clean them they will be likely to drop apart by their own weight as soon as they are thoroughly wet. Very few curtains will bear the third cleaning of this sort. It has, therefore, become one of the dreads of the housekeeper's life to have the curtain-cleaning season come around. It is much better to have this done at home if possible, as a really good set of curtains ought to last at least until they are hopelessly out of fashion.—Decorator and Furnisher.

TALK ABOUT FRILLS.

Just How to Make and Arrange Them in Such a Way That They Will Lay Gracefully.

She is indeed an indifferent woman who dares to make up her trousseau without using frills as the chief decoration upon her gowns. Frills are used upon costumes for every occasion, even outing suits, for where braid is used as the skirt trimming the waist is almost covered with frills.

In making frills out of goods that have figures running through them—especially flowers—be sure to have every figure running the same way; that is, unless they run up and down in the weave of the goods. Nothing looks so careless and clumsy as ruffles that are made with the figures running in all directions. After the strips for the frills are sewed together, if you do not care to head them with lace, hem the top and bottom, making the top hem much the narrower, and gather. Gather them with the fingers and stroke every stitch. This makes them much daintier than being gathered by machine. Divide the frills into four parts, sticking a pin at each quarter, and treat the skirt or waist in the same way. Sew a quarter of the frill on to a quarter of the skirt or waist and you will find that when completed the gathers will be evenly distributed and will set gracefully upon their foundation.

HOW TO MAKE AND ARRANGE FRILLS.

Frills put on in fancy design can be treated in the same way and, after this method is once tried, you will never vary from it.

How to Applique Satin.

To applique satin paste the satin on tissue paper the color of the net, and when quite dry cut out with sharp scissors; it will not then be necessary to turn in any edges. Embroidery paste is usually used, but thick starch—it must be a stiff jelly—will answer, though it is not quite so satisfactory.

BRACING GATE POSTS.

Clever Invention Cheerfully Donated to His Brother Farmers by an Ohio Inventor.

For years I have made the question of wire fence and the correct bracing of posts a study. I have braced a great many posts wrongly and some few rightly. Time has proven the good and condemned the bad and my final conclusion is that the only good brace, that can be depended upon to last for years without the least giving way, is that in which the posts are fastened by means of an iron rod or a wire cable to a "dead man" planted firmly in the ground.

I have never seen one that gave way when so planted. The cost to anchor the posts in this way is the least possible, and the appearance is all in its favor. Recently, having to construct a gateway through a string of wire fence, I set about the invention of the best possible anchorage for the posts. The place in which the gateway occurred was one of great difficulty as the ground was simply peat and spongy muck. Water stood in the bottoms of the holes. However, between the posts we dug a trench 3½ feet deep, as shown at D in the illustration. In this trench we placed a stick of timber six inches square and 3½ feet long. The gate posts were braced by horizontal braces, being extended to the vertical posts (P), the distance of some six feet from the gate posts.

Now from the top of the second posts a wire was passed connecting them, going around the posts and back and forth twice, making four strands. This wire was loose enough to pass down through narrow trenches, under the block (D). After the wire was in place the earth was put on the block and very firmly tamped. We did not put back the loose soil, but brought clay instead. When the trench was full the wires were twisted into a cable, bringing the posts slightly together at the top. The fence wires were then stretched to their places, taking care, however, that one was stretched on one side and alternately one on the other, else the posts might not have been perpendicular when all was done.

BRACING GATE POSTS.

I have confidence in this manner of bracing posts. One can readily see that the tops of the posts are tied together almost as effectively as though the fence were continuous or as though the cable passed in a straight line from the top of one post to the top of another. Had this been the end of the fence instead of the gateway, I should merely have fastened the cable firmly to the "dead man" (D), and it would hold equally as well the end post as it holds the gate posts. It may be that the galvanized iron will corrode after a time, and that half-inch iron rods for the part under the ground will be better. This manner of bracing the posts is applicable to any style of iron fence and is my own invention and is cheerfully donated to my brother farmers. —J. E. Wing, in Ohio Farmer.

The Influence of Wheat.

The culture of wheat exerts a greater influence upon the commerce of the world perhaps than all other cereals combined. When we take into consideration the number that are engaged either directly or indirectly in this industry we are astonished. First, those that are employed in preparing the soil and cultivating the plant, next the vast number that are engaged in manufacturing the plows, the harrows, the cultivators, the drills, the rollers, the reapers, the threshers, the fans and the flouring mills of our country, the vast army that runs the trains carrying the wheat and flour to market to feed the civilized world, and we have some conception of the extent and importance of the industry.—Farmers' Review.

Blue Grass a Century Ago.

It is a somewhat curious as well as instructive historical fact that less than a century ago blue grass, now regarded as indispensable on the farm, was treated as a pest, which all good people were expected to get rid of as soon as possible. Its great value was wholly unknown, and it was not till after years of denunciation and bad treatment that it worked its way to its present high position among the forage plants. We should learn from this not to be too hasty in rejecting anything that presents itself for experiment and consideration.—P. S. Kennedy, in Farmers' Review.

Killing Canada Thistles.

To kill Canada thistles, let them come to bud, or flower, put heavy chain from right hand end of doubletree to plow beam, at where the coulter is, or should be; leave slack enough to loop in furrow, just ahead of the turning furrow slice; have a good plow that it will turn the furrow, and with a steady team you will cover thistles completely, and as they will have used all their vitality in maturing flowers for seed will be killed dead, and will benefit the land as green manure.—William Lomas, in Farmers' Voice.

ADVANTAGES OF CLOVER.

They Are Not Only Very Numerous, But of the Greatest Value in Several Directions.

One advantage with clover is that it furnishes two crops in one season. The first crop is nearly always cut for hay, while the second growth can be used for pasturage, plowed under as a green manure, cut for hay or allowed to mature seed. The clover plant makes a quick growth, and, if the first crop is cut in good season, will start up and soon shade the ground and will furnish considerable feed during the summer, when it is so often the case that the pastures fail.

When cut for hay or plowed under it should be allowed to make a full growth, and be cut when in full bloom. Properly cured, it makes one of the very best foods for the dairy cow during the winter, as well as for growing stock of all kinds. Even hogs will be benefited if given a good feed of clover hay two or three times a week.

When in full bloom it contains the largest per cent. not only of animal food, but of plant food also, hence so far as other conditions will admit the best results are obtained by plowing under when a full growth has been made.

Usually the growing of cloverseed proves profitable. Occasionally when there is a full crop the price will fall below that of profitable production. A small yield, running from three to seven bushels per acre, and costing from 70 cents to $1 a bushel to thrash, is an expensive crop to grow, and unless fair prices are realized will not be profitable.

In harvesting the heads should all be left to turn brown before cutting. A self rake is rather the best machine to cut clover for seed, as it leaves it in bunches that can be gathered up readily with a fork. It is quite an item to handle the clover as little as possible, as it shatters readily.

If the threshing can be done in good season the clover can be left as cut until dried out sufficiently to thresh. But unless you are certain that this can be done it is best to gather up and stack the clover as soon as it is sufficiently cured. The hulm or straw makes good feed, equal in value to wheat or oat straw, while it can hardly be excelled for bedding.

In growing wheat the turning under of a good growth of clover will be beneficial, as it supplies the elements of plant food needed by this crop.

For corn or potatoes it is usually best to allow the clover to die down in the fall and then plow under in winter or early spring.—St. Louis Republic.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.

Use plenty of lime about the stable.

Nobody ever saw a successful farmer who had inferior stock.

Try to hire brains when you hire a farmhand. Brains pay everywhere.

Use light tools in working on the farm and always have them in good order.

Blue grass has strong roots, and hence will stand a good deal of dry weather.

Cut the burdock off just below the crown and it will be the last of the burdock.

Parsnips are a good vegetable, although some people do not seem to realize it.

Do not throw slops about the house. If you do disease germs will likely develop.

On clay soil, we would say to an inquirer, either lime or raw bones will make a good fertilizer.

Farmers near our large cities are engaged more and more in the business of wintering city horses. It pays.

Do not buy a costly machine when the pocketbook or acreage cultivated does not warrant the expenditure.

Cabbage is a good food for the milch cow; and besides the leaves there are soft heads that are good for nothing else.

When the pig is in good health its tail curls; when sick it droops. Hence the saying: The curl in a pig's tail is worth a dollar.

Cows are apt to shrink their milk for a time when changed from one food to another, although the latter food may be the best. Why, we do not know.—Western Plowman.

HANDY CONTRIVANCE.

Exceedingly Useful Wherever a Barbed Wire Fence Has to Be Put Up Quickly.

The illustration shows a handy contrivance for "paying out" barbed wire when building a fence of this material. A stout stone drag has a round stake in one corner well braced. The reel of wire is put on as suggested for attaching the upper wire and below the braces at various heights when putting up the other wires. This brings the wire right along beside the stakes and at just the height desired. When ready to staple, let the driver of the team take hold of one arm of the reel to keep it from turning, starting up the team a few feet to stretch the wire. His companion then staples firmly, when more wire is unreeled and the process is repeated. A slow-moving team should be used, or it will not be safe to attempt holding the reel.—American Agriculturist.

FOR MAKING WIRE FENCES.

TO MAKE BEET SUGAR.

Detroit Capitalists Lay Plans for the Erection of a Big Manufacturing Concern.

Detroit, Aug. 31.—William L. Holmes has just returned from Europe, where he spent some two months investigating the beet-sugar industry on behalf of several Detroit capitalists who think of erecting a large sugar factory here. His report is entirely favorable to the project, and if his associates accept his views the farmers of Michigan will soon have a market for 80,000 tons of sugar beets annually. "Such a factory as we hope to erect would cost between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000," said Mr. Holmes. "It would use 800 tons of beets daily for 100 days, requiring the cultivation of 5,000 acres of land. Inasmuch as Detroit now consumes about twice the product of such a factory, and with the facilities of cheap lake freights to other large cities, there seems no doubt about finding a convenient and profitable market for the output." Mr. Holmes feels confident that the factory will be built within the coming year.

RESERVES HONORED.

The Citizens of Saginaw Turn Out to Do Homage to the Heroes of the Yosemite.

Saginaw, Aug. 27.—All Saginaw turned out to witness the demonstration in honor of the Saginaw division, Michigan naval reserves. There was a parade participated in by civil societies, G. A. R. posts and members of the Yosemite crew. The streets and buildings were gayly decorated.

After traversing the principal avenues the procession halted in front of the Bancroft house, where an address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Baum, followed by one from Hon. Ferdinand Brucker on behalf of the citizens of Saginaw. Following came the banquet at the new armory. The speakers at the banquet were: Mayor Baum, Hon. Watts S. Humphrey, Hon. C. L. Benjamin, Hon. Ferdinand Brucker and Hon. Ezra Rust on behalf of the citizens, and Ensign F. L. Eaton and others, of the Yosemite crew.

Annual Encampment.

St. Louis, Aug. 29.—The fifth annual encampment of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Association of Northeastern Michigan will be held in St. Louis on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 13, 14, 15 and 16. The city proposes to make this the biggest and best encampment ever held in the state.

Death of Amos Switzer.

Bay City, Aug. 27.—Amos M. Switzer, one of the best known lumber dealers in Michigan and a prominent citizen of Bay City, is dead. He was born in Quebec February 16, 1836. He is survived by a widow and two daughters. The remains will be taken to Toledo for interment.

Fire at Frankfort.

Frankfort, Mich., Aug. 30.—G. B. Butler's sawmill and the Frankfort Manufacturing company's broom-handle factory were destroyed by fire Monday. Loss is $30,000. The fire started in the sawmill and spread to the other concern.

New Factory at Greenville.

Greenville, Aug. 29.—Owing to the failure of the Apple crop in Arkansas, Walker Bros., of that state, are building a large evaporating factory here, and have already begun to buy the product of whole orchards of apples. They will employ 50 men.

Petoskey, Aug. 31.—Joseph Kaiser, of Lexington, Ky., was run over and instantly killed at noon Tuesday by the Charlevoix dummy car. Kaiser was crossing the track on a bicycle. His head was completely torn off.

FORTY PER CENT. A MONTH.

A Man Who Borrowed $5 in 1895 and Has Since Paid Back $84.99.

One of the most remarkable suits recently brought in Chatham county, Ga., is now pending before Justice J. R. Saussy, Jr., of the Fourth militia district. It is a suit for usury, the case being one where a negro borrowed $6.06 from a loan broker in 1895, and has since paid him $84.99, and the broker still claims a balance due of $10.

The way in which this state of affairs is brought about is a remarkable one, and yet simple, says the Savannah News. It is done simply by charging 40 per cent. per month interest, or thereabouts.

James Erwon borrowed $6.06 from H. L. Drake & Co. in 1895. As a matter of fact, however, he received only five dollars, the $1.06 being charged for drawing up the papers and negotiating the loan. It was charged up against the negro, however, with the original amount borrowed.

Since he borrowed the money Brown has paid to the concern $84.99, in amounts ranging from 50 cents to two dollars, and has every receipt given him from these payments. Brown got tired of paying in his money so regularly, and it looked as if there would never be an end of the thing. This set him to thinking, and he finally learned that there was such a thing in Georgia as a law against usury.

The Georgia law against usury, however, permits the party aggrieved to bring suit only within a year from the time the usury was charged and collected. Brown, therefore, can sue only for the interest he has paid in during the last year. He got all of his receipts together and a statement of the account was made, showing that he had paid $28.50 usurious interest within the last year, and that is the amount he is now suing for.

MODERN FORTS.

Vastly Different from the Old Style of Fortification—Subterranean Strongholds.

The modern type of fortifications contrasts strikingly with the massive old stone works, excellent specimens of which are Fort Monroe and Fort Wadsworth, says Collier's Weekly. To the eye of a novice Fort Monroe, the largest of its type in the country, is seemingly impregnable; up to the close of the civil war it could be defended against a fleet or army of any size, but as small a gun as the eight-inch rifle could lay it in ruins in a very short time. The old method of fortifying has been replaced by the emplacement system of earth, stone and concrete, except at points where the topography of the coast line permits the use of natural formations.

This is the case at Portland, Me., where the rocky cliff has been utilized, the batteries being at an elevation of 50 or 60 feet above tide water. Here, however, a large amount of concrete and stone work has been used to reenforce the walls of rock. The walls of the modern fortification are very broad and gradually incline from the summit to the base. They appear like mounds of earth with an inner coating of cement, but in their construction thousands of yards of broken stone and concrete are used for a single emplacement.

The modern fort is constructed more below than above ground, the magazines, quarters for artillerymen, apparatus for elevating, sighting and firing and other machinery being inclosed in water-tight casements often 12 to 15 feet below the surface. As the sea coast guns of to-day can be discharged by electricity, if desired, there is little need of exposure of the men and most of the gun crew can remain under cover and out of danger.

WORLD'S OLDEST ENGINE.

It Was Constructed in England in 1777 and Has Been in Service Until Recently.

The oldest engine in the world is in the possession of the Birmingham canal navigations, this engine having been constructed by Boulton & Watt in the year 1777, says London Engineering. The order is entered in the firm's books in that year as a single-acting beam engine, with chains at each end of a wood beam, and having the steam cylinder 32 inches in diameter, with a stroke of eight feet, and erected at the canal company's pumping station at Rolfe street, Smethwick. During the present year (1898) this remarkable old engine, which has been regularly at work from the time of its erection to the current year, a period of, say, 120 years, was removed to the canal company's station at Ocker Hill, Tipton, there to be re-erected and preserved as a relic of what can be done by good management when dealing with machinery of undoubted quality. It is worthy of note that the Birmingham canal navigations favored Boulton & Watt in 1777 with the order for this engine, and in 1898, or 120 years afterward, the company has intrusted the same firm, James Watt & Co., Scho, Smethwick, with the manufacture of two of their modern triple-expansion vertical engines, to be erected at the Walsall pumping station, having 240 horse-power and a pumping capacity of 12,713,600 gallons per day.

ROUND ABOUT US.

Clippings and Condensations From our County Contemporaries.

Boys on W. Huron street have been amusing themselves by climbing the 60-foot electric light pole at the corner of Seventh and W. Huron streets. Some slipper oil well applied by their respective mothers would make the boys remember that such amusements may cause their parents the expense of a funeral.—A. A. Argus.

John C. Iffland, ex-Supervisor of Riga, is a candidate again this fall for the nomination of sheriff on the free silver ticket, with every prospect of securing a place on the ticket. He is highly respected and well liked by every one in this section irrespective of party.—Blissfield Advance.

We are not so sure about that prospect. There are other pebbles you know.

Something like two weeks ago, Nelvin Cobb found on the farm, a nest of five snake eggs which he placed in a glass can and brought to the store of Lister & Sheeder where they have since been on exhibition, and where may now be seen, four very active little snakes. These snakes are about a foot long and have thus far baffled the people to decide their kind.—Saline Observer.

Mel. Powers had a lucky runaway last evening. He was returning from the picnic, with a double team and two seated wagon filled with people, when as he passed the Baptist church all the tugs dropped from the whiffletrees, and the horses started at full speed. The driver braced himself, and the wagon was pulled by the lines till the team was stopped in front of Seewald's jewelry store. It was a great exhibition of nerve and good judgement, for not a strap was broken.—Hudson Post.

It is claimed that Dr. Northrup of River Rouge, has a hatchet that was used by G. Washington, the papa of his country, in hacking the cherry tree, and to which act of vandalism he entered a plea of "nolo contendere" on being detected. Northrup secured it from a colored man whose grandpa was an eyewitness to the trial of the young man, and of the punishment meted out by Washington's father to our country's father, at the time. The Dr. knows it is the hatchet used for there is cherry tree gum still clinging to the hatchet. This bit of information lies in the Delray Times, and if true, cuts more of a figure than the hatchet did.—Adrian Press.

Here is an incident that occurred at a recent wedding, not far from Pontiac, that is worth repeating. All went merry until the bridegroom was called upon to produce the wedding ring. In vain he felt in his trousers pocket for the indispensable article. Nothing could be found except a hole through which the ring had evidently fallen into his boot which he wore. What was he to do? "Take your boot off," said the parson. The organist at the dominie's bidding, struck up a "voluntary." The young man removed his boot, the ring was found, also a hole in his stocking, and the worthy minister remarked, evidently with more than the ceremony in mind, "Young man, it is time you were married."—Pontiac Post.

An up-to-date gold mine was discovered by John Pilbeam while plowing last week. The precious metal is all coined, too. He was in town last Friday showing his find which was twenty-five English soverigns of 1831, George IV, and two half soverigns, 1817, George III; he said he had another soverign at home. The coins were lighter in color and weight than coins of same value here, and he didn't know whether or not they were all right, but Francis Hill assured him that they were the real thing, and backed it up by offering to buy some of the coins at $2 50 and $5 each respectively. At that rate his find would be valued at $135. We have not heard whether he found any more, but he thought it quite likely that there were others where these were found, as no search had been made, and these had simply been turned up by the plow. There is no defined theory as to how the coins came to be buried there.—Milan Leader.

More Money in Five Acres.

It is a significant fact that the possibilities of close or intensive cultivation of small areas of land, say five acres, as against the ordinary cultivation of large tracts, say one hundred acres, is not realized by farmers and others. Five acres of garden crops under careful cultivation will yield, every time, a larger income than one hundred acres as ordinarily worked. For instance, in strawberries alone, one-quarter acre should easily yield 1,000 quarts, which, in a local market, should fetch 10c. a quart, or $100. How many acres of wheat off the farm will it require to bring in the same returns? AMERICAN GARDENING, P. O. Box 1697, New York, is offering some wonderful strawberry plants as a premium, and our readers can obtain sample copy and full particulars free on application, also pamphlet entitled, "A Fortune in Strawberries, or, "How a Poor Boy Became Wealthy." We advise all who have ground to send for it.

Omaha Exposition.

When the World's Fair at Chicago ceased to exist, it was supposed that we should ne'er look upon its like again. However, the Trans-Mississippi Exposition at Omaha has effectively reproduced in similarity all of the buildings, which made the White City so attractive.

It does not now take weeks to wander through grounds and structures and then be compelled to go away with a jumble of ideas, for the Omaha Exposition people have profited by past experience, and have so improved the arrangement of exhibits that no more than two or three days of time need be consumed in admiration and inspection of the marvelous resources of the West, collected together in the chief city of Nebraska.

Even the new Midway is a reproduction of the far famed Street of All Nations of 1893 with many improvements on the original.

The electric lighting of the buildings, grounds and lagoon at night makes a scene of enchanting beauty, alone worth traveling a thousand miles to see.

The means of communication between the city and the grounds are ample, and the distance to be traversed is short.

The ways of reaching Omaha are innumerable, but the chief among them is the direct Chicago and Omaha short line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, with its electric-lighted, vestibuled trains, leaving Chicago every night at 6:15 p. m., and arriving at Omaha at 8:20 the next morning. Dining car service en route.

Excursion tickets are on sale at every coupon ticket office in the United States over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St Paul Railway through Northern Illinois and Iowa, as well as at 95 Adams St., and at the Union Passenger Station, Canal and Adams streets, Chicago.

IDEA FROM THE WEST.

How Box Irrigation Is Practiced in Many Sections of the So-Called Arid Regions.

Box irrigation, as practiced in many sections of the arid west, is a cheap method of saving fruit trees and vines from the effects of drought, and might be adopted with profit by the fruit growers and market gardeners of the eastern and middle states. It is easily managed from any source of supply, such as wells, ponds, creeks or springs, and in dry seasons will return many times the cost in increased yield of fruits, melons and general vine products. The boxes are made of rough planks, usually about six inches square and 18 inches in length, and inserted in holes a foot or more in depth a few inches from the trees to be irrigated. Water is filled in the boxes and left to find its way to the tree roots, and down as the main tap root conducts it, until the moisture is taken up by the many branches and rootlets. For vines the boxes are smaller, and may be made from old tin cans, buckets, pieces of tiling or any discarded vessel.

A favorite and handy device for conveying water from the source to the boxes is found in Texas and Arizona, and consists of a barrel fastened to a two-wheeled cart or truck. The barrel is filled and then wheeled about by hand to the several boxes, where the irrigation water is turned in by means of a short hose attached to the barrel. This places the water where needed, precludes all possibility of waste and overcomes the objections to surface irrigation. The trees grow more thrifty and are therefore less attacked by insects and blight. Roots penetrate to a greater depth, giving the tree a firmer hold and preventing sprouts from coming up, as they frequently do all about a surface-irrigated tree. The ground can be cultivated at any time, and the surface soil is free from water, grass and noxious weeds brought on by surface irrigation. An orchard, vineyard or melon patch treated in this manner will yield better, more uniform and salable fruits, and the fears of drought be banished.—Joel Shomaker, in Farm and Fireside.

Why Celery Is Bleached.

It is not for the mere sake of blanching that celery is so treated, for, if this were the case, only self-blanching varieties would be used; but it is to improve the flavor and to make the stalks tender. Care must be taken to avoid heaping the earth so that it gets in among the branches. Hold the stems together with one hand, while with the other the earth is pressed against the plant, leaving out merely a few leaves at the ends. As the tops grow, the earthing up must, of course, be repeated. Celery is subject to a blight which attacks the center of the plant. This may be encouraged by soil getting between the stalks, as it has been found, where the plants are boarded up instead of earthed, they are less attacked. — American Cultivator.

Plum Trees on the Farm.

Driving about the country and seeing so many fence corners and waste spots about the houses and barns where something might be grown, I have been tempted to suggest to the owners to plant more plum trees, says a well-meaning correspondent. It is true the plum is the one tree of all others for these corners. It requires little room and takes but two or three years from planting to come to fruiting. All you will need will be to cut out the superfluous shoots. And then what is the farmhouse good for that can't have cherries and plums?—Midland Farmer.

Cost of Corn Production.

According to a bulletin issued by the Illinois experiment station, and based upon the figures furnished by 316 corn growers, it cost 19.9 cents per bushel and $10.59 per acre to produce corn in Illinois in 1896. These figures do not represent the cost of growing merely, but are based upon the average sum of the expenditures on all the process involved in production, from the preparation of the soil to the delivery of the corn at the elevator.

figured in black or navy blue. The percale is better than lawn as it is thicker and better protects her from the rays of the burning sun.

The bonnet is quite pointed in front and is edged with a tiny puffing of the percale. The front is lined with crinoline to make it keep its shape, and is tucked with very small tucks. The crown is very full and around the neck is a double ruffle of the same material.

SCIENCE OF THE TOILET.

How the Women of To-Day Manage to Preserve a Youthful Appearance for Decades.

The modern maiden has learned in an exquisite way the science of the care of her person; she does not early acquire wrinkles, neither does she lose her hair, nor so early have to bear the signs of advancing years by its turning gray. The secret, for such it is, of this preservation is one that all women should know; it surely is more charming for the world to gaze upon a fresh youthful face than upon a shriveled one, and upon an abundance of locks than upon too scanty a growth to even cover the head. Begin the day with a cold or tepid sponge bath, followed by a vigorous rubbing with a rough towel. This starts the circulation into almost a bound and does much to preserve the plumpness of face, neck and arms, beside rendering colds almost impossible. An occasional hot bath with plenty of good soap, followed by a sponging in cold water, is taken at night, but not more frequently than twice a week, as hot baths are enervating and encourage a loose, flabby condition of the skin. After the hot bath at night cold cream or lanolin is rubbed vigorously into the face or, if there are signs of yellow spots, zinc oxide ointment is substituted. The face is washed each morning with handfuls of hot water, then immediately with cold water, thus stirring the circulation and aiding in keeping the muscles plump. The face is then rubbed gently up and down and across with both hands—a dry wash, in fact—rubbing particularly any wrinkling across the forehead. This is the ironing-out of the face, preparatory to the appearance for the day. Wrinkles develop by a lack of suppleness and plumpness of the skin, and they may be kept at bay many years by careful massage. The hair receives especial attention on the part of the assiduous maiden, and particular care is paid to the roots, for one should know that if they are healthy the growth will be satisfactory. And she wears her hair much more loosely than does her less diligent companion, for she believes that the air greatly preserves its growth. Each day the hair is separated at the roots and the air allowed to freely circulate through it. It is a serious error to worship the brush, and treat the scalp in such a way as to weaken and kill the roots. For victims of the brush it is easy to point to many men, who daily brush and brush—the stiffer the implement the better. Baldness is the certain outcome. A fine-toothed comb is likewise shunned as an enemy to the roots of the hair. In warm weather it is prudent to wash the hair with a preparation containing alcohol, which dries the scalp and renders perspiration less profuse, this unpleasant feature of the summer affecting the roots of the hair most alarmingly. Very oily hair is washed with a shampoo containing sulphur, while a very dry scalp is treated to a light application of cream or lanolin.—Edna S. Witherspoon, in Butterick's Delineator.

Cure for Ivy Poison.

The very heavy rain of spring has caused "poison ivy" to be more rampant than ever in country and suburban places this summer. At the slightest appearance of irritation of the skin, while in the neighborhood of this dangerous growth, rub olive oil carefully into the skin and instant relief is said to follow. This is also a remedy for insect stings.

If everybody had a sense of humor stupid people couldn't make a living.

FASHIONS FOR BABY.

Daintiness Is the Chief Feature to Be Considered in the Making of His Clothes.

Fashions in babies' clothes seem rather amusing, but there are changes each new season in the manner and details of the making. As far as the outlay of money goes, there is hardly a limit to the amount it is possible to spend, but daintiness is the chief feature to be considered—for the parents' circumstances and common sense should surely limit the expenditure.

From six to ten long dresses compose the usual outfit, some of them simply made, some elaborately trimmed. It is now the fashion to change the little ones from long to short clothes at as early an age as four months. French nainsook is the favorite material for the finer dresses. Just now the inevitable yoke in the baby's gown is cut square, not quite extending over to the arm size, and edged with a frill and beading. For the filling in of the yoke there are two pretty ways, both equally popular. One is rows of hemstitched tucks, running from the neck downward, the other alternate rows of lace and embroidery insertions, the embroideries being often almost as fine and as transparent as the lace.

A pretty bib has a scalloped upper edge of shaped silk, trimmed on both upper and lower edges by a full deep ruffle of silk lace. The upper part is hand embroidered, and between the outer and inner bib is placed a tufted silk heart-shaped pad of silk. Another is made from a fine linen hemstitched handkerchief, folded diagonally—the upper point is cut out V shape and embroidered—and both edges lace trimmed.

Night gowns are made from fine flannel or outing and have a drawing string around the neck. Petticoats are of fine flannel and button on each shoulder by two tiny buttons instead of down the back.

Little caps of lawn show much shirring and cording, and some, especially those of embroidered muslin, have a lining of a pale shade of thin silk.

The most fashionable thing in babies' shoes and stockings, for wear with the first short dresses, are gray suede shoes and stockings matching exactly in color.

Pretty coats of bedford cord have deep circular ruffles trimmed with guipure lace edging. In shorter coats, pretty model in pique has a very deep rounding collar trimmed entirely with rows of Hamburg edging alternated by rows of satin ribbon.

A design in a bedford cord short coat has three deep circular capes, each one edged with guipure lace.

For the basket covering, sheer white lawn over pink or blue is the latest, the point d'esprit being also used. The ruffle is trimmed with lace and rows of baby ribbon and the joinings and seams are finished by a narrow lace beading through which is run a ribbon. —Boston Post.

FANCY PINCUSHION.

Very Pretty One Can Be Made Out of Japanese Lawn at a Trifling Expense.

Nothing helps to make the dresser more attractive than two or three pretty pin cushions scattered here and there. Cushions for all kinds of pins.

To make one of these cushions purchase a common uncovered one from any fancy goods store, or better than that, make a square bag of the desired width and fill it with nice white sand. Over your cushion sew a fancy cover of Japanese lawn figured in some pretty design. Cut out triangular-shaped pieces of the lawn, line them with paper cambric so that they will stand out, and sew them on each edge of the cushion. You can edge the fancy pieces with lace or not, as you desire. For further decoration fill your cushion with hat pins of all kinds, not forgetting the patriotic pins.

A HAT PIN CUSHION.

Banana Flour Is New.

The next dietetic fad is going to be banana flour. Manufacturers are experimenting in this direction, and promise soon a meal that will keep as long as wheat flower and make a much more nutritious bread. As already the craze for whole wheat flour is passing, this new albumen will undoubtedly meet a quick welcome when it comes. The use of the banana has developed its great value as an article of food, and the great army of banana consumers are prepared to accept eagerly its further development.

Trouble—Something that can be borrowed without security or interest.

SAMPSON DID WELL.

Administration Is Satisfied with the Admiral's Work.

A Member of the Cabinet Talks Freely of the Santiago Campaign —Unjust System of Naval Rewards.

[Special Washington Letter.]

STRANGE it is that our government cannot do justice to worthy officers of the navy without doing injustice to other officers, equally worthy, who have had no opportunity to achieve distinction and renown.

Under existing laws and regulations our naval officers cannot be promoted in rank for heroic services without injury to other officers who have done no wrong, but who have faithfully performed their duties in every respect.

The naval officers hold their relative ranks by seniority of commission. For example, Jones, Brown and Smith are captains in the navy, each of them commanding a battleship. Suppose Jones was commissioned captain January 1, Brown was commissioned captain January 2, and Smith was commissioned captain January 3.

Thus, on the naval list, they stand as number first, second and third in the list of captains. They are all of equal rank; but Jones having been commissioned first stands number one. Consequently, when there occurs a vacancy in the ranks of commodore, Capt. Jones will be made a commodore. Then Brown will stand number one on the list of captains, and will be the next man to receive advancement to the rank of commodore, if he lives long enough. Of course, there are many captains, lieutenant-commanders, lieutenants, ensigns, etc.

Now, suppose Capt. Rice, who may stand number four on the list of captains, commands a ship in battle and wins a great victory. The only way the navy department can reward him is by advancing him one number, or more, on the list of captains in the navy. Suppose the navy department honors him by advancing him four numbers on the list of captains. That would place him above Jones, who does no wrong, and has had no opportunity to win a victory. Then, when a commodore is to be appointed, it will be Rice instead of Jones who gets the advancement.

This is palpably unfair, and our government should certainly find some method by which it may be just to our naval heroes, by conferring upon them well merited honors, without dealing injustice to other equally brave and patriotic men. Every naval officer who has been advanced in numbers on the naval list gains his new honors at the expense of his associates, and it operates with great injustice to many.

A pointed instance of this injustice that is visited upon some of our naval heroes in order to give proper honors to others is exhibited in the case of

COMMODORE PHILIP.
(A Vigorous Opponent of the Existing System of Naval Promotion.)

the captains of Admiral Dewey's fleet. By the advancement of the officers of Admiral Sampson's fleet that destroyed Cervera's squadron two of Admiral Dewey's captains find themselves two numbers lower on the naval list than they were before, and two others are each reduced one number on the list.

Another illustration of unjust effects of naval promotions by numbers was given in the case of Capt. Clark, whose cruise of the Oregon from San Francisco to Key West was altogether the most memorable of naval history, and yet he went into action at Santiago and performed prodigies in heroic results in the naval battle when he was two numbers lower than when he sailed from San Francisco. He has since been advanced, but his advance of six numbers leaves him a net advancement of only four.

No one can complain of the honors conferred upon the officers of Admiral Sampson's fleet, excepting only the questionable advancement of Admiral Sampson himself. All the others fairly won the distinction that has been awarded them, but it must be remembered that these advancements strike with fearful injustice upon all the other officers of the navy, most of whom would have won equal honors if like opportunity had been afforded them. Our naval regulations clearly need revision, and some equitable method of conferring honors upon naval officers should be adopted that would give justice to the heroic without injustice to others.

The advancement of Admiral Sampson eight numbers causes criticism. The commander of the fleet which successfully blockaded Santiago harbor has been in Washington recently, and he has at no time received such attentions as our people are accustomed to shower upon their heroes. The sentiment prevails that Sampson is not a real hero. When Lieut. Hobson arrived in Washington he received more enthusiastic attention at the depot than Admiral Sampson received during his entire stay in this city.

Politicians and newspaper men are usually careful of their expressions, and they are accustomed to take only the popular side of public questions. But there are exceptions in all cases, and here is one in point.

The correspondent of this paper is inclined to be conservative, and to take no stand which might excite antagonisms. But in the case of Admiral Sampson the writer ventures to express an opinion in favor of the unpopular naval commander. There is a reason for this, as the reader will see.

One of the members of the cabinet is an old friend of the writer, and converses with him freely, well knowing that his name will never be quoted on public questions. While driving through the Smithsonian park this morning, the cabinet officer said: "I have had my own opinion of Sampson, as all citizens have had. But I have recently come into possession of official information which I cannot disclose in detail; but it is sufficient to convince me that Admiral Sampson deserves greater consideration than the people have been disposed to give him.

CAPT. CHARLES E. CLARK.
(Until Recently Commander of the Battleship Oregon.)

"In the first place, every reader will concede that Sampson has made no mistakes. That is a strong point in favor of any man who has the responsibility of command on land or sea. But even that does not make a hero. Nevertheless, you will agree with me that you cannot point to any mistake made by Sampson, either as the chief of the board of inquiry into the Maine disaster or as commander of the fleet. Inasmuch as this naval commander has made no mistake, there is no reason why he should be censured. That much every reasonable man will acknowledge. Therefore, Admiral Sampson should not be looked upon with disdain.

"In the next place, Admiral Sampson has been successful in the disposition of his vessels. He has been successful in looking after the health of the men of his fleet, while patiently watching the enemy by day and by night. It is a wise commander who can have always in mind the health and comfort of the men for whose lives he is in every sense responsible. Thus we reach a point where Admiral Sampson deserves commendation.

"Now, after weeks of faithful service, bottling up Cervera's fleet, awaiting the coming of the army, it became necessary for Admiral Sampson to leave his fleet and go to see Gen. Shafter, the army commander who was prostrated with fever. Under the circumstances he restated his orders that, if the Spanish fleet should undertake to escape, the American fleet should close in and attack the enemy. Having thus performed his duty, Admiral Sampson sailed away to meet the commander of the land forces.

"Thus every duty was faithfully performed by him. There is absolutely no ground for criticism of this naval commander. During his absence on this important and patriotic duty, in the interest of his country, the Spanish fleet unexpectedly came out of the harbor and tried to escape. Instantly, in obedience to Sampson's orders, the cruisers and battleships closed in on the enemy and vigorously attacked him. The entire Spanish fleet was destroyed, by the vessels of Sampson's squadron, under his orders.

"But, just as Sheridan was 20 miles away when the battle of Cedar Creek began, and just as Sheridan went galloping to the sound of cannon, Admiral Sampson hastened to rejoin his command, and arrived in time to witness the complete triumph of his fleet, which acted under his carefully detailed orders. He was not in the actual fighting, and has made no claim of that nature. He did not get into the fight, solely because his orders were so well obeyed that the work was well done by the vessels under his command. That very fact reflects credit upon his plans and discipline.

"Now, because Sampson was not an actual participant in the fight which resulted successfully, in accordance with his plans, and in obedience to his orders, I do not believe that the people will ever be inclined to look upon him as a hero. But the American people are lovers of fair play, and they will do justice by him. He has been a faithful naval officer for many years. He was the successful commander of the naval campaign which resulted in the destruction of the Spanish fleet; and that campaign was largely instrumental in the dethronement of Spain in Cuba. Let us do justice to this faithful officer. He is entitled to the advancement in rank which the administration has given him. He does not claim to be a hero. He asks only justice; and that he must have. If it had been his good fortune to be present on the occasion of the attempted escape of the Spanish fleet the people would make a hero of him."

All of this is true. We can afford to give honor to whom honor is due. We cannot afford to allow our impulses to run away with our good judgment, and thereby do injustice to any man who has served his country faithfully.

GRAND ARMY VETERANS.

Soldiers of the Civil War Meet in Cincinnati for Their Thirty-Second Encampment.

CITY GIVES THEM A CORDIAL WELCOME

Camp Sherman Is Formally Turned Over to Gen. Gobin, Commander-in-Chief of the Great Organization —Camp Fire of Naval Veterans Largely Attended.

Cincinnati, Sept. 6.—The railways are bringing in excursionists to the national encampment of the G. A. R. from every direction and the local posts are kept busily engaged in escorting the visitors to their quarters. Although Camp Sherman was not dedicated till ten o'clock in the morning, it was partially occupied by veterans Sunday night. The festivities of the week opened early when the naval veterans formed at six a. m. to escort Rear Admiral Kelley from the depot.

Commander-in-Chief Gobin Arrives.

Commander in Chief Gobin and staff visited Camp Sherman Monday afternoon, when the camp in charge of Capt. Byrne was formally turned over to him. This camp has a capacity of over 15,000 in its tents and ample provisions for meals. The official salute was fired upon the arrival of the commander in chief, after which the bands rendered concerts. Prayer was offered by Rev. David H. Moore, editor of the Western Christian Advocate, who was a colonel in the civil war. Maj. Joseph W. Wilshire, chairman of the committee on camps, made the presentation speech, and Gen. J. P. S. Gobin responded in an eloquent address of acceptance.

Camp Fire at Night.

The camp fire of the naval veterans, known as the dog watch, at Music hall Monday night was attended by over 8,000 people. Congressman Jacob H. Bromwell presided, and in addition to Weber's military band and a chorus of several hundred voices, there was music by the Cambro-American Choral society and noted soloists. The biograph was used during intermissions for the display of war pictures, which gave vivid views of scenes in which many of the comrades had participated. The principal address of the evening was by Gen. J. P. S. Gobin, commander in chief of the G. A. R., who was profuse in his praise of the arrangements made in Cincinnati for the encampment. He spoke of the heroic conduct of American soldiers in the Spanish war as well as in the civil war.

Naval Veterans Parade.

Cincinnati, Sept. 7.—The thirty-second annual encampment of the G. A. R. is a success so far as attendance is concerned. The features of yesterday were the regimental, brigade and other reunions and the naval parade, which required an hour or more to pass a given point, and was everywhere watched by crowds of deeply interested spectators.

TROUBLE AT CANDIA.

British Troops on Island of Crete Have Trouble with Mussulmans —City Is Bombarded.

Candia, Island of Crete, Sept. 7.—Candia is in a state of anarchy. A collision between the Mussulmans, who were demonstrating against European control, and the British authorities, who have been installing Christians as revenue officials, culminated Tuesday in bloody fighting between the Mussulmans and the British troops. Riots took place in various parts of the city, and many have been killed. When the outbreak was fiercest a warship stationed in the harbor began firing shells, with the result that a portion of the city is in flames. The greatest confusion and uproar prevails.

The Industrial Commission.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Shortly after 11 o'clock Tuesday night President McKinley announced the names of his appointees on the industrial commission. They are: Andrew L. Harris, of Ohio; S. N. D. North, of Massachusetts; Frank P. Sargent, of Illinois; Ellison A. Smythe, of South Carolina; John M. Farquhar, of New York; Eugene D. Conger, of Michigan; Thomas W. Phillips, of Pennsylvania; Charles J. Harris, of North Carolina, and M. D. Ratchford, of Indiana.

Is Unconstitutional.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 7.—Judge Bishop Tuesday afternoon ruled that the new marriage-after-seduction law is unconstitutional and will issue a writ of habeas corpus releasing R. E. Morris, of Runnels, a newspaper man who was placed under arrest by his wife for deserting her after marriage. He married her to escape prosecution for seduction. The ground for the decision is that it is class legislation.

Await Word from Merritt.

Washington, Sept. 6.—It was stated at the war department Monday that nothing definite has been determined as to the movement of troops now at San Francisco to Manila, which depends upon information which is expected to be received from Gen. Merritt as to the necessity for such troops.

A British Victory.

London, Sept. 5.—A dispatch to the war office says that the Anglo-Egyptian forces under Sir Herbert Kitchener defeated the dervishes in a great battle at Omdurman, on the Nile, the losses on the British side being 200, while thousands of the dervishes were killed or wounded.

Killed by Lightning.

Lawrence, Kan., Sept. 5.—John Jennings and Ellet Bates, each aged about 12 years, were struck by lightning and killed near here. During a storm they sought shelter under a tree.

COLOR OF BERRIES.

Wood Ashes Gives Some Varieties the Appearance of Having Been Varnished.

F. K. Steele, of Jefferson county, Mo., states in American Gardening that when berries reach the consumer they are usually dark in color, more especially after a long journey. Color has much to do with their sale. "The most of my berries are scarlet," writes Mr. Steele, "and owing to the free use of wood ashes they have the appearance of being polished and varnished. Then I pack them, placing only the medium, large and shapely berries in the sale boxes; the indifferent are not sold or counted in the sales. Here is where the large grower cannot compete with the 'old woman's ten-foot patch.' He cannot help having small berries and trash put in his boxes with all his care. I like the scarlet berries the best, although I have the dark colored berries also, and I often note the fact that when berries are all large alike the consumer chooses the bright colored in preference to the dark. They have a fresher look. The dark colored look as if they had been on hand and were becoming stale. The Brandywine, H. W. Beecher and Leader on my soil are dark berries. I have 30 varieties of the scarlet berries, all seedlings of my own growing—some very early, some medium and some very late. The earliest is a large conical berry, much larger than the Michel's and ripening at the same time, with large foliage of a pale green, the leaflets four inches in length and broad in proportion without spots. Three years ago I planted the seed from one large berry which gave me 33 varieties, and there was only one variety which I considered as poor—too poor to keep. All the others were fine and large. I planted the seed, cultivated the soil around them, fertilized only with ashes. Now, who improved them and made them finer than their parents? Nature and nature's laws."

IMPROVED FRUIT DRYER.

A Substitute for the Somewhat Unclean Stringing Method Now in General Use.

Ordinary methods of sun drying have their drawbacks. The finest flavor comes from fruit that has been put on strings and hung up in the sun, the air circulating all about it. It is thus exposed to dust and flies, decided disadvantages. The cut shows a substitute for the "stringing" method of drying fruit. A framework, some three inches wide or thick, and as large in its other dimensions as one desires, is covered with wire screen cloth, as shown, the cover being of thin board.

IMPROVED FRUIT DRYER.

This box filled and hung in the air and sunshine will dry the fruit to perfection, giving the fine flavor without the dirt of the old method. It must be thin enough from side to side so that the air can readily pass through the fruit.—American Agriculturist.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES.

Pull the suckers off the sweet corn.

Feed the raspberry. It is a big feeder.

Never cut large branches off the cherry trees.

Market gardening is hard work, but it pays near a city.

The pear is ripe and ready for picking if upon lifting it gently it parts from the tree.

The tomatoes that we are training to stakes are doing excellently. We are pleased with the plan.

Remove the bearing canes of the raspberry and blackberry as soon as the fruiting season is over.

The best fruit grown in the irrigated districts of the west is grown in Washington and Idaho, we think.

It is claimed that sweet potatoes grown from vine cuttings are better than those grown from slips or sprouts.

Grape vines can be transplanted when five years old, we would say to a subscriber, but the wood should be cut back near the soil. Transplant in spring.—Western Plowman.

Effective Wash for Borers.

I have had some years' experience in transplanting trees, and have about a dozen varieties, growing well. Having a space to be filled, I put out four locust trees, knowing how liable they were to be destroyed by borers. I made a wash of soft clay, putting in a teaspoonful of paris green to a pailful of water. I washed the trunks with this mixture, working it into all holes. This season I have not found a fly or a worm. The trees seemed retarded in growth the early part of the season, but since the midsummer shoots have started, they have grown luxuriantly. One year's experience is so deceptive that I would not recommend extensive trial. Slaked lime may do, if no clay is handy. Be careful to keep the wash stirred when being applied.—Country Gentleman.

VISITS TROOPS IN CAMP.

President McKinley Spends Several Hours Among the Soldiers at Montauk Point.

JOYFULLY GREETED BY THE HEROES.

The Hospitals Are Closely Inspected —"Never Saw a Handsomer Camp" —Address to the Boys in Blue Full of Glowing Praise—Introduced by Gen. Wheeler.

Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, Sept. 5.—President McKinley spent five hours in the camp Saturday, bareheaded most of the time, visiting the sick in the hospitals and inspecting the well in their cantonments. He made a speech to the assembled infantryman, reviewed the cavalrymen, expressed his opinion of the camp to the reporters, and issued an order directing the regulars to return to their stations east of the Mississippi.

On the train returning to New York Mr. McKinley made this statement: "I was very much pleased to meet the heroes of Santiago and to observe their splendid spirit. What I saw of the care of the sick men in the hospitals by those in charge, and by the noble women engaged in that work was especially gratifying to me."

Gen. Wheeler arranged for the inspection party to go through the detention camp, past Gen. Shafter's tent, where the president could greet the commander of the Santiago forces.

The Presidential Party.

With the president, besides the secretary of war, were:

Vice President Hobart, Attorney-General Griggs, Senator Redfield Proctor, of Vermont; Brig. Gen. Egan, Brig. Gen. Ludington, Maj. Webb C. Hayes, son of the late President Hayes; Col. M. T. Herrick, of Cleveland; William McKinley Barber, of Canton, O.; H. H. Herrick, of Cleveland; Secretary Porter and Assistant Secretary Cortelpou.

The ladies of the party were Mrs. Alger and Miss Hecker.

Maj. Gen. Wheeler was surrounded by a number of his staff. The carriages, preceded by the cavalry, wound up the hill to Gen. Wheeler's headquarters.

There the president took a long view of the wide, treeless expanse, checkered with regimental camps and hospitals, great portieres of canvas amid stretches of grass.

"This is beautiful," Mr. McKinley said, and then later: "I think I never saw a handsomer camp."

Greets Gen. Shafter.

After a two minutes' wait the president drove through the detention camp to Maj. Gen Shafter's tent. The general was in full uniform, but his face was flushed with fever. He endeavored to rise from the chair in which he sat as the president entered the tent.

"Don't get up general," said Mr. McKinley, as they shook hands. "You are entitled to rest. How are you?"

"A little achy," replied the general, "but otherwise all right."

Mrs. Alger remained in Gen. Shafter's tent while the president, Secretary Alger, Mr. Griggs and others went to the general hospital.

Entire Camp Inspected.

Gen. Wheeler, who rode beside the president's carriage, pointed out the different places of interest. All the nurses and physicians were assembled at the hospital when the president arrived. The cheers were spontaneous and ringing. The president went into the tents alone or with Gen. Wheeler and made a personal inspection. The tents were in admirable condition. Everything was clean and attractive, and the wan patients smiled joyfully as the president went to them grasping many by the hand, as if they were his own brothers and sons. So the visiting was continued from tent to tent, from division to division, until the entire camp had been inspected.

Introduced by Gen. Wheeler.

A visit was paid to the infantry plain where the cheering was prolonged and the men showed themselves in high spirits. Men of the Ninth Massachusetts, First Illinois, Eighth Ohio and Thirteenth, Twenty-first, Twenty-second and Twelfth regular infantry were assembled without arms. About 5,000 stood in close order and Gen. Wheeler said:

"The president of our great country has come here to greet the soldiers who marched so gallantly up San Juan hill on July 1. He comes here to express the nation's thanks to these brave men. I wish to tell you that when the president sent me here, two weeks ago, to command this camp he enjoined me in the most emphatic language that I should, without regard to expense, exercise any and every authority necessary to make comfortable this body of brave men, who, by their courage, have raised this republic to the highest position among the great nations of the earth. I have the honor and pleasure of introducing to you the president of the United States."

Speech by the President.

When the cheering subsided President McKinley responded as follows:

"Gen. Wheeler, Soldiers of Camp Wikoff, Soldiers of the Fifth Army Corps: I trust that you will put your hats on—I am glad to meet you. I am honored to stand before you to-day. I bring you the gratitude of the nation to whose history you have added by your valor a new and glorious page. You have come home after two months of severe campaigning, which has embraced assault, siege and battle, so brilliant in achievement, so far-reaching in results as to command the unstinted praise of all your countrymen.

"You had the brunt of the battle on land. You bore yourselves with supreme courage, and your personal bravery, never before excelled anywhere, has won the admiration of your fellow citizens and the genuine respect of all mankind, while your endurance under peculiar trial and suffering has given added meaning to your heroism. Your exertions made easy the conquest of Puerto Rico under the resistless army commanded by Maj. Gen. Miles, and behind you, to proceed at a moment's summons, were more than 200,000 of your comrades, ready to support you, disappointed that you had did not come to them, yet filled with pride at your well-earned fame and rejoicing upon your signal victories.

"You were on the line of battle—they, no less than you, were in the line of duty. All have served their country in its need, all will serve it so long as they may be required, and all will forever have the thanks and regard of a grateful people.

"We cannot bid you welcome here to-day without our hearts going out to the heroes of Manila on sea and on land, whose services and sacrifices, whose courage and constancy in that far-distant field of operations have never been surpassed by any soldiers or sailors the world over.

"To the army and the navy, to the marines, to the regulars, to the volunteers and to that Providence which has watched over them all the nation to-day is full of thanksgiving and praise. The brave officers and men who fell in battle and those who have died from exposure and sickness will live in immortal story and their memories will be perpetuated in the hearts and the histories of a generous people, and those who are dependent upon them will not be neglected by the government for which they so freely sacrificed their lives."

Demonstration on Departure.

After the tour of the tents had been made the president and party were escorted to Gen. Wheeler's headquarters, where the president received some important telegrams, which were speedily answered. Then the president dined with Gen. Wheeler and was escorted to the special train scheduled to leave at two o'clock. He was driven between two lines of troops with drawn sabers. At the station there was another demonstration. Soldiers presented arms and saluted the president, which he duly acknowledged.

Spends Sunday at Paterson.

Paterson, N. J., Sept. 5.—President McKinley spent a very quiet Sunday here. He attended morning services at the Church of the Redeemer in company with Mrs. Hobart. In anticipation of his attendance the church was well filled, and after the service the president shook the hands of the minister and a large number of members of the congregation. Owing to the intense heat of the afternoon the president remained quietly at the home of Vice President Hobart until five o'clock, when he went for a drive with Vice President and Mrs. Hobart.

WEEKLY WAR HISTORY.

Complete Record of Events Told in a Few Lines Covering All Important News.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 1.

The Seventh army corps, composed of over 25,000 men, paraded the streets of Jacksonville, Fla., and were reviewed by Gen. Fitzhugh Lee.

The hospital ship Olivette, which had been lying near the quarantine station in Fernandina, Fla., sunk through some mysterious agency. All on board were saved.

Orders were received at Annapolis, Md., from the president directing Admiral Cervera to make arrangements to proceed with his officers and men back to Spain immediately.

Admiral W. S. Schley and Gen. William W. Gordon, United States commissioners to settle the conditions for the Spanish evacuation of Puerto Rico, sailed from New York for San Juan.

Gen. Boynton reported to Secretary Alger that Camp Thomas at Chickamauga was in good shape, that only 198 out of 75,000 men had died, and that the stories of starvation were without foundation.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 2.

The transport St. Paul arrived at Manila with all well on board.

Gen. Shafter and his staff arrived in New York from Cuba on the transport Mexico.

Maj. Gen. Miles, accompanied by his staff and family, sailed from Ponce for New York on the transport Obdam.

A transport arrived at Corunna, Spain, with troops who surrendered at Santiago de Cuba. Seventeen died on the voyage.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 3.

The steamship Covandanga with 2,278 soldiers from Santiago on board arrived at Santander, Spain.

Adjt. Gen. Corbin issued orders for the muster out of 19 volunteer organizations, numbering over 20,000 officers and men.

Upon Gen. Miles' departure from Puerto Rico Gen. Brooke issued an order assuming command of the troops in the island.

The auxiliary cruisers St. Paul and St. Louis have been returned to the International Navigation company by the government.

Insurgent troops invaded the southern Philippine islands, and were seizing everything possible prior to the settlement of the peace conditions.

Maj. Gen. Wheeler, in a lengthy statement to the press, declares that the president and war department are not responsible for sickness and deaths in the army.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 5.

All the torpedoes placed at the entrance to the harbor of Havana have been raised without accident of any kind.

The war department has up to the present time issued orders for mustering out nearly 100,000 volunteers, and this will be done as soon as the men have had their 30 and 60-day furloughs.

President McKinley spent five hours in Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, on Saturday, bareheaded most of the time, visiting the sick in the hospitals and inspecting the well in their cantonments.

Deputations of the wealthiest natives in the Philippines called upon Consul Wildman in Hong-Kong and urged that every possible effort be made for the annexation of the Philippine islands to the United States.

Active movements are reported in the Philippines among the insurgents everywhere north of Manila. Vigan has been occupied and a campaign has been directed against Bamaran, where the Spanish are supposed to be concentrated. The insurgents are in possession of the whole of Laguna bay except a single position.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 6.

The regular army, as it will be considered after the war, will consist of 75,000 men.

The insurgents at Manila are said to have fortified themselves in trenches, and fear of trouble is expressed.

Secretary Alger is pleased over the result of the president's visit to Camp Wikoff. He says the conditions of the place were found to be all right.

Believing that there is some probability that the Philippines will be returned to the control of Spain, Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader, is recruiting troops and building trenches.

A letter sent by Maximo Gomez to the American commission in Havana is addressed to Gen. Butler, and in it he places himself unconditionally at the American commission's disposal.

Gen. Wheeler, in command of Camp Wikoff, Montauk Point, L. I., reports to the secretary of war that the health of the troops is improving and that the visit of the president was very beneficial.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 7.

Rear Admiral Schley and Brig.-Gen. Gordon, of the Puerto Rico military commission, arrived at San Juan.

The advance guard of Gen. Miles' army arrived in New York from Puerto Rico on board the transport Chester.

Orders were received in Portsmouth, N. H., for the 1,700 Spanish prisoners on Seavey's island to prepare to leave for Spain Saturday.

The official records of the war department, as far as completed, show 33 officers and 231 enlisted men killed in battle during the war with Spain.

Congressman Steele, of Indiana, says that 200,000 men will be sent into Cuba in December; that Cubans are killing Americans from ambush, and that the government's policy is to sweep the island from one end to the other until the insurgents are willing to allow the civil law to obtain.

MICHIGAN TOWN SUFFERS.

Fire Destroys Property at Owosso with an Estimated Value of $200,000.

Owosso, Mich., Sept. 5.—Owosso Saturday night suffered a $200,000 fire. At 9:30 fire was discovered in the rear end of Woodward's furniture factory, and in a short time the whole institution was in flames. The fire was beyond control before the firemen got to work, and after destroying the warehouse, kilns and lumber yard of the furniture factory jumped across the street to the Owosso Brewing company. The three large buildings of this institution were soon enveloped in flames. The fire next spread to the implement store of Crow & Baynes, William Jopling's livery barn, Jacob Barrie's meat market and several small buildings near at hand. At midnight, despite the strong wind blowing, the firemen got the flames under control and stopped their spread. The loss on Woodward's furniture factory will be fully $150,000, with $60,000 insurance. The Owosso Brewing company's loss is about $30,000, with $11,000 insurance. Twenty-five thousand dollars, it is believed, will cover the loss among the smaller institutions.

VILLAGE DESTROYED.

Fourteen Buildings Consumed by Fire at Rapid River and Twenty-Two Horses Burned.

Gladstone, Sept. 3. — A fire at Rapid River, five miles from here, destroyed 14 buildings. The principal losers are: Alexander Caswell, $4,000; James Gakey, hotel, $4,000; James Savoie, saloon, $600; Louis Jerome, saloon and hotel, $1,500; P. G. Gibouree, livery barn, $600; M. L. Merrill, store, $3,000; Fred Darling, dwelling, $600; James McPherson, blacksmith shop, $300; Alexander Caswell, dwelling, $500; George Merrill, dwelling, $500; Max Glazer, general store, $2,000. These are estimates on the building losses only. The contents of the buildings were mostly destroyed. In John Caswell's barn 22 horses were cremated. The village of Rapid River has nearly 2,000 population, and is entirely without fire protection. Chief Miller and five members of the Gladstone department went to the scene. Glazer, Young and Savoie carried some insurance, but the rate charged—eight per cent.—kept most of the victims from carrying any. The belief is general that the fire was of incendiary origin.

FIREMEN HONORED.

A Fine Monument Dedicated at St. Joseph—Capt. Clark, of the Oregon, Cheered.

St. Joseph, Sept. 6. — The firemen's monument, recently erected in the Lake Front park by the St. Joseph volunteer fire company and more than 2,000 fire companies in other cities representing every state and territory in the union, was unveiled Monday amid the cheering of a multitude which numbered fully 20,000. The street parade, which was composed of 2,000 members of various visiting firemen and secret societies, was headed by Capt. Charles Clark in a carriage, accompanied by his wife and two daughters and his brother, Capt. Lloyd Clark. The naval commander was cheered every foot of the way by the thousands who had anxiously awaited the arrival of his carriage. Ex-Judge Thomas O'Hara and J. W. Fletcher delivered the orations.

Record Is Lowered.

Detroit, Sept. 6. — One record was broken at Monday's races of the Michigan division of the L. A. W. Porter and Joseph, both of Detroit, in the two-mile amateur tandem handicap, lowered the world's record from 4:05 to 4:01 3-5. Jerry Woodward was strictly in it, capturing both the one mile state championship and the mile open. Fred Joseph, of Detroit, won the five-mile state championship from Charles Porter in a hot sprint.

Has No Funds.

Lansing, Sept. 3.—The board of state auditors has decided that the state of Michigan can do nothing toward the preparation of an exhibit for the Paris exposition in 1900 because no funds are available for that purpose. The state was asked to assist in the purchase of a monument for Lafayette, and also to provide for a state exhibit at the exposition.

Women in Luck.

Muskegon, Sept. 5.—The will of the late Henry H. Holt, just made public, bequeaths the Holt flats, valuable residence property facing Hackley square, to the Muskegon Woman's club, with $13,000 for improvements; also his private library of 2,000 volumes and museum curiosities worth $5,000.

Dead Body Found.

Port Huron, Sept. 3.—The mystery connected with the disappearance of Patrick Maher, father of Thomas Maher, the alleged smuggler, is partially explained by the discovery of the old man's body floating in the water near Port Lambton, Ont.

Effect of Express War.

Ann Arbor, Sept. 1.—The United States Express company has discontinued its local office. There seems to be a movement between this company and the American to do away with all express business on the Michigan Central and Ann Arbor roads.

Quarantine Ordered.

Detroit, Sept. 3. — The Detroit health officials have decided that the epidemic of smallpox now present at Put-in-Bay is a menace to the health of Michigan, and have ordered a strict quarantine against the Lake Erie summer resort.

Will Go to Omaha.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 3.—Gov. Pingree and staff have accepted an invitation to attend the Omaha exposition on Michigan day, October 4.

The new road from the Lima Northern depot to Dunham street is being constructed and covered with gravel. The railroad company are also to furnish the gravel for Dunham street from the railroad to Main street, the village to haul the gravel and put it upon the street.—Addison Courier.

The D. & L. N. railroad, Monday, began occupying their new depot and their trains ceased going to the A. A. depot. The new depot is not as convenient location as the people had hoped would be adopted but is the best the railroad could locate upon their land. It is located between the interlocking crossing and Dunham street, with a new road from the latter street to the station. The new building is a neat and convenient one.—Dundee Reporter.

Beal—Charles.

The wedding invitations called together a number of friends and relatives on Thursday afternoon to witness the marriage of Linora Charles to William Otis Beal at the Friends church. The church was appropriately decorated in palms and ferns, the platform especially being tastefully arranged. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Edward Mott, of Raisin Valley, after which the bride and groom received the congratulations of their friends, they then repaired to the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Jane Satterthwaite, where the wedding luncheon was served in the tastefully decorated dining room.

The bride was daintily gowned in white organdy trimmed with ribbon and lace. The young couple left on the night train for their new home in Lansing, where they will soon begin housekeeping. The bride's many friends here regret losing from their midst so pleasing a young lady, but trust she will find in her new home an especially useful field of labor. The groom is an exemplary young man and has a position as teacher in the Agricultural college, Lansing.

Among the guests from away were: Mr. and Mrs. Hageman, Oxford Mich.; Miss Jessie Baker, New York; Prof. Satterthwaite, Toledo; Mrs. Chauncey Graves, Addison; Mr. and Mrs. Beal and Fannie and Vinora Beal, Quaker, Mich. and Mrs. Walker, Adrian.

A severe epidemic of diphtheria has broken out at Pleasant Valley, Midland county. Thirteen cases and three deaths were reported, and the town is under quarantine.—Morenci Observer.

Mrs. Alpheus Stearns.

Tuesday evening, a little after sunset occurred the death of Mrs. Susan Stearns. She had lived with her daughter, Mrs. M. E. Conklin, for many years. She came to Tecumseh at the age of twelve years in 1826. Here she was married and spent seventy-two of the almost four score and five years allotted to her. Her membership in the Methodist church was of more than fifty years. The funeral services were held Thursday afternoon, the Rev. W. B. Pope officiating.

Mrs. John Bangs.

Betsey Grant was born in March, 1815, in New York state. Her parents, from Scotland, were both imbued with the Scotch training and life, yet were patriotic Americans. The mother died when this only daughter was two years of age. She was then taken by her mother's parents. At the age of twelve years she emigrated with her grandparents from Ulster county, New York, her birthplace, to the then distant and wild west of Southern Michigan. They journeyed by wagons to Lake Erie, then by boat to Monroe and again several days' journey to their new home at Tecumseh. Her grandfather brought the first team of horses into the settlement. The subject of our sketch was converted in early life and became and ever remained a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Her husband died in 1869. Six children still live, all but one so near as to be frequent visitors at their mother's home. She departed this life on the morning of Sept. 5th. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. B. Pope, at the late residence on North Pearl street, Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Bidwell

Elizabeth Angela Cushing was born in Townsend, Vermont, April 13, 1819. She was married to Birdsey I. Bidwell in Jackson, Mich., Feb. 17, 1842. Since that time she has resided continuously in Tecumseh. For more than fifty years she lived in the house in which she finally died. To Mrs. Bidwell were born two sons, Lamont and Lavern who survive her. Her husband died May 17, 1892. Since that date Mrs. Bidwell has been a great sufferer from rheumatism, which has almost altogether confined her to the house. She suffered long and severely, but wns patient and uncomplaining through it all. While health and strength permitted she was a most regular attendant upon all the services of the church of her love and choice, the Presbyterian. Up to the last she manifested great interest in its welfare, and on occasions gave substantial proof that her heart was in the church's work. While able she was an indefatigable worker for the church. In later years she was a most generous contributor to its benevolences.

Death came to end her sufferings early Friday morning. The funeral services were held at her late residence Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. W. F. Jones. Several friends and relatives were present from out of town and a large gathering of townspeople gave evidence to the esteem in which Mrs. Bidwell has always been held.

THE CHURCHES.

The pastor of the Presbyterian church will preach Sunday morning on the subject "Empty;" evening subject, "Opportunities."

The Y. P. S. C. E. will hold a Presbyterial rally in Adrian next Wednesday afternoon and evening in connection with the meeting of Monroe Presbytery. An interesting program has been prepared. All the young people are urged to be present.

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church will hold their first regular meeting, Thursday Sept. 15. Tea will be served by Mrs. Hause and her committee. Everyone invited. Mrs. Hause wishes to meet her committee at her home tomorrow afternoon.

Sunday evening at the Methodist church Rev. W. B. Pope will preach on "Money and Man." There is but one more Sunday before the session of conference which is held this year at Mt. Clemens.

Missionary Entertainment.

Those who attended the entertainment given by the Mission Band and Junior C. E. at the Friends' church last Sabbath evening were highly pleased with the program and pronounced it a perfect success. The church was tastefully decorated with plants and cut flowers. On the wall back of the platform was draped a Chinese flag, while under it and on the table below were a large number of interesting Chinese and Japan curios.

A young lady dressed in a full Chinese costume gave a touching recitation of the scrrows and sufferings of a girl in China. She was followed by a young maiden with her head wrapped in a long white "chuddah" after the manner of Hindoo women, who told of the hopeless lives of the child widows of India.

Other interesting numbers were a sketch of the life of the celebrated Pundita Ramabai, and a vivid description of the horrid process of foot binding and the consequent suffering of the victims. These were inspersed with songs, recitations and bright exercises by the younger members.

The collection taken was to aid in the support of a famine boy at the Friends' mission at Nowgong, India. It was not as liberal as had been hoped for, so the children are still devising plans for raising more money.

Cheap Excursion to Cleveland and Buffalo.

The Olin family excursion to Cleveland, O., and Buffalo, N. Y., will be run over the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway, Sept. 29. Train leaves Tecumseh at 7:33. Round trip rate to Cleveland $5.10, to Buffalo $7.85. Tickets good thirty days. Passengers will change to special train at Adrian.

Clarence Hurrey Writes from Camp Poland, Knoxville.

Camp Poland, Knoxville, Tenn.
August 28, 1898.

DEAR ONES AT HOME:

The first Sunday in the new camp! and it has been one of the pleasantest since leaving Michigan. Well, I guess I had better begin at the beginning and tell you about breaking camp at Chickamauga and the journey to Knoxville.

Last Sunday morning nothing was said about moving and, as usual, three-fourth of the boys scattered out into country. I went to church at the Y. M. C. A., wrote my letter home and then went with Sergeant Wilson about a mile and a half out in the country. We got a good dinner at a farm house and were lying in the shade when about 3 o'clock an orderly from the Georgia regiment came tearing along on a horse and said that orders had been received at noon to pack up at once and be ready to march to Rossville at 4:30. Of course we hustled back to camp at once and found that already the tents were down and that those who were "unfortunate" enough to have stayed in camp had our baggage all packed and that we were nearly ready to start. It was one of the busiest scenes you ever saw. Think of it! A whole village of over 1300 inhabitants all packed up and moving off on 4 1-2 hours notice. The wagons were loaded to their fullest capacity and I had the good fortune to be sent with one of them as a guard, and so got out of the long dusty march of six miles to Rossville.

It was dark when we got there and, as Georgia—the 1st regiment—arrived at the same time, there was considerable confusion about loading the cars. The wagons were run, all loaded, right onto flat cars and spiked down, two wagons on each car. The mules were loaded into cattle cars and of all the Christianity-testing jobs, that was the worst that I can imagine. They would all balk and have to be literally dragged onto the platforms and then pulled into the cars by main force. It isn't possible to whip them because you can't get near enough to their business end to apply the gad without getting knocked into the middle of next week. They kicked continuously and there were three or four accidents as a result. Several ribs were broken and one fellow was severely kicked in the stomach. No, army discipline doesn't improve the army mule at all. He is incurable and grows worse with age.

Well, we had to sleep "beneath the starry skies" most of the night, but were aroused by the bugle at about 2 a. m. and loaded ourselves onto a good train. We sat patiently in the seats until broad daylight and then pulled out; we ran on into the yards at Chattanooga and then waited again until about 9 a. m. when we started out for Knoxville. All that any of us had had to eat since the previous noon was a big slice of bread and a piece of beefsteak. There wasn't a solitary thing to be bought in the freight yards at Chattanooga, but we managed to get an occasional bite at the small towns along the road.

The ride from Chattanooga to Knoxville is a very interesting one. The country is pretty rough the first 20 miles, then the rest of the way we went through a very productive farming country. It was quite hilly but not so stony, and the houses were comparatively up-to-date. It is a hundred years in advance of the country we went through on the "Queen and Crescent." Corn seems to be the main crop—in fact, it was one grand cornfield all the way with only an occasional field of beans or alfalfa. At the towns on the way you could get 30 lb. watermellons for 5c each and eggs at 5c a dozen.

We pulled into Knoxville, or rather a suburb of the city, at about 1:30 p. m. The most conspicuous change in the landscape was the fact that everywhere the ground was covered with green grass—a curiosity at Chickamauga. Well, we unloaded, were served to some miserable coffee, and then set to unloading the cars. At about 5:30 we started for our camping grounds and found we had less than a mile to march.

Our camp is on the east slope of a very high hill which overlooks the whole city of Knoxville. The whole west slope is densely wooded clear to the crest, while the east slope where our camp is, is a green meadow without a tree. We slept in our pup tents that night and the next day made our camp. It seems to me that it is an ideal place, 400 feet higher than Chickamauga Park, plenty of sunshine, good breezes and none of the dampness of the old camp. From the top of our hill we can see over two high ridges and get a good bird's eye view of the city, which lies about a mile east and north. Beyond the city is a low mountain range about 25 miles distant, then way beyond, rising high above all the rest, we can see the Great Smokies in North Carolina. We can only see them on a clear day when the smoke rises well. There are six regiments here now and two yet to come. They are scattered about in different parks, but ours is by far the finest. Only the 1st Georgia is near us and they are taking pains not to locate more than two regiments together.

The ground is red sand and our sinks are dug down 10 or 12 feet instead of 3 or 4 as at Chickamauga. The city has appropriated $10,000 to put the camp in shape, and as a result we have good spring water piped right into the camp and a hydrant at every cook shanty. They furnished us lumber to build floors for our tents and a good bath house 40 feet long which is almost done. The people here charge us only 5c a quart for milk instead of 10c and everything is cheaper. I spent a few hours in the city Wednesday and was more than pleased with it. It is much cleaner, better paved and has finer buildings than Chattanooga. It is also a little larger, having about 47,000 inhabitants.

Well, that's enough description for one letter, I'm sure. Write soon.

Yours lovingly,
CLARENCE B. HURREY.

TWIN EYES. Most people's eyes look alike, but whether they see alike or not is an altogether different matter. As a matter of fact very few eyes are twins. If you chose your glasses yourself you will very likely fit one eye and not the other. The result is a permanent injury to both eyes. Be sure about your eyes; come in here and have them examined by an expert oculist. He can soon tell just what you need, and we can make the glasses fit your eyes—we don't try to make eyes fit our glasses.
